

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF GEORGIA
ATLANTA DIVISION

ASIAN AMERICANS ADVANCING
JUSTICE-ATLANTA; et al.,
Plaintiffs,

v.

No. 1:21-cv-1333-JPB

Brad RAFFENSPERGER, in his official capacity as the Georgia
Secretary of State; et al.,
Defendants,

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL COMMITTEE; et al.,
Intervenor-Defendants.

---

INTERVENORS' BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF THEIR MOTION TO DISMISS

RETRIEVED FROM DEMOCRACYDOCKET.COM

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Introduction.....	1
Argument.....	2
I.    Plaintiffs’ constitutional right-to-vote claims fail because there is no right to vote absentee. (Count III).....	3
II.   Plaintiffs’ constitutional right-to-vote claims fail because they rely on idiosyncratic burdens on some voters. (Count III).....	5
III.  Plaintiffs’ section 2 and intentional-discrimination claims fail under Brnovich . (Counts I & II) .....	8
A.    Results-Based Discrimination .....	9
B.    Intent-Based Discrimination .....	13
Conclusion .....	15
Certificate of Compliance .....	16
Certificate of Service.....	16

RETRIEVED FROM DEMOCRACYDOCKET.COM

INTRODUCTION

The State has identified several reasons why Plaintiffs' amended complaint fails to state a claim. See State-Br. (Doc. 41-1) 13-25; State-Reply (Doc. 52) 4-15. Intervenors join those parts of the State's briefs.

But the amended complaint has other defects. Plaintiffs' constitutional right-to-vote claims fail because the challenged laws do not even implicate the constitutional right to vote. And Plaintiffs' section 2 claims fail under the Supreme Court's recent decision in Brnovich v. Democratic National Committee, --- S. Ct. ----, 2021 WL 2690267 (U.S. July 1). Especially after Brnovich, Plaintiffs have not alleged a plausible claim for intent-based or results-based discrimination.

These defects are "purely legal." League of Women Voters of Minn. Educ. Fund v. Simon, 2021 WL 1175234, at *7 (D. Minn. Mar. 29). While voting claims "can at times be fact intensive," the notion that they cannot be dismissed at the pleading stage "is meritless." Comm. to Impose Term Limits (etc.) v. Ohio Ballot Bd., 885 F.3d 443, 448 (6th Cir. 2018). And unable to muster a plausible claim of "discriminatory intent on the part of the [Georgia] legislature," Plaintiffs are not entitled to embark on "a fishing expedition" via discovery. Wesley v. Collins, 791 F.2d 1255, 1262-63 (6th Cir. 1986). This Court should dismiss Plaintiffs' amended complaint in its entirety.

ARGUMENT

More than five weeks before Intervenor were granted intervention, Plaintiffs amended their complaint. Compare Doc. 27, with Doc. 39. The deadline to file “any required response” to the amended complaint was the later of “14 days” or “the time remaining to respond to the original pleading.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(3). Because Intervenor were not yet parties, it was unclear whether or when they could file a motion to dismiss: No response was “required” of them, and nonparties technically cannot file motions to dismiss. See Virginia v. Ferriero, 2021 WL 848706, at *3 n.1 (D.D.C. Mar. 5, 2021); Vivid Ent., LLC v. Fielding, 965 F. Supp. 2d 1113, 1122 n.1 (C.D. Cal. 2013). Intervenor thus sought this Court’s guidance. See Doc. 47. The Court granted Intervenor leave to file a motion to dismiss earlier today.

Motions to dismiss are governed by the familiar Twombly-Iqbal standard. This Court must accept Plaintiffs’ factual allegations as true, but not their “legal conclusions” or their “naked assertions devoid of further factual enhancement.” Harris ex rel. Davis v. Rockdale Cty. Sch. Dist., 2020 WL 5639684, at *3 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 12). This Court can also consider “documents incorporated into the complaint by reference” and matters subject to “judicial notice.” Tellabs, Inc. v. Makor Issues & Rights, Ltd., 551 U.S. 308, 322 (2007). Based on these materials, Plaintiffs’ claim must be “plausible”—meaning the Court has a “reasonable expectation that discovery will reveal evidence” supporting it. Harris, 2020 WL 5639684, at *3. At a minimum, the amended complaint must plausibly allege “all the material elements” of a “viable legal theory.” Branch Banking & Tr. Co. v. Lichty Bros. Constr., 488 F. App’x 430, 433 (11th Cir. 2012). Errors on a “dispositive issue of law” are fatal. Id.

Plaintiffs’ claims rest on fatal errors of law. Regulations of absentee voting do not implicate the constitutional right to vote. Nor can Plaintiffs state a claim by alleging burdens that do not affect most voters. Brnovich also makes clear that Plaintiffs have not plausibly alleged racial discrimination under either a results-based or an intent-based theory. For these reasons and more, the Court should dismiss this case.

I. Plaintiffs’ constitutional right-to-vote claims fail because there is no right to vote absentee. (Count III)

Most of the challenged provisions of SB 202 regulate only absentee voting—either by mail or early in person. E.g., Am. Compl. ¶¶82-117. But for the bulk of our history, States provided nearly all voters with only one method of voting: in person on election day. See Brnovich, 2021 WL 2690267, at *12. SB 202 does not eliminate that option, or even make it meaningfully more difficult. Because in-person voting remains fully available, “the right to vote is not ‘at stake’” here. Tex. Democratic Party v. Abbott, 961 F.3d 389, 404 (5th Cir. 2020) (quoting McDonald v. Bd. of Election Comm’rs of Chi., 394 U.S. 802, 807 (1969)).

The Constitution guarantees one method of voting; “there is no constitutional right to an absentee ballot.” Mays v. LaRose, 951 F.3d 775, 792 (6th Cir. 2020). When States impose a limit on absentee voting, but not in-person voting, “[i]t is ... not the right to vote that is at stake ... but a claimed right to receive absentee ballots”—which is not a constitutional right. McDonald, 394 U.S. at 807. As the Fifth Circuit has explained, the Constitution is not violated “unless ... the state has ‘in fact absolutely prohibited’ the plaintiff from voting.” Tex. Democratic Party, 961 F.3d at 404. And “permit[ting] the plaintiffs to vote in person” on election day, as Georgia does, “is the exact opposite of ‘absolutely prohibit[ing]’ them from doing so.” Id.; accord Tully v. Okeson, 977 F.3d 608, 611 (7th Cir. 2020) (“[U]nless a state’s actions make it harder to cast a ballot at all, the right to vote is not at stake.”).

The Supreme Court announced this rule “unambiguously” in McDonald. New Ga. Proj. v. Raffensperger, 976 F.3d 1278, 1288 (11th Cir. 2020) (Lagoa, J., concurring). There, Illinois law allowed some classes of voters to cast absentee ballots, but not people in jail. 394 U.S. at 803-04. When inmates who couldn’t post bail challenged the law, the Court unanimously held that “the right to vote” was not “at stake.” Id. at 807. There is no “right to receive absentee ballots.” Id. Illinois’ rules on absentee voting “d[id] not themselves deny ... the exercise of the franchise” because they only “ma[d]e voting more available to some groups.” Id. at 807-08 (emphasis added). And Illinois’ election code “as a whole” did not “deny ... the exercise of the franchise” either. Id. Illinois had not “precluded [the inmates] from voting” because the inmates had potential options to vote in person. Id. at 808 & n.6. In other words, the inmates’ constitutional claims failed because they were not “absolutely prohibited from voting by the State.” Id. at 808 n.7.

When Intervenors raised this same point in New Georgia Project, the Eleventh Circuit agreed. Compare Amicus Br. of RNC & GAGOP, 2020 WL 5757920, at *4 (11th Cir. Sept. 23) (“Georgia’s Election Day deadline does not implicate the right to vote at all.”), with 976 F.3d at 1281 (“Georgia’s Election Day deadline does not implicate the right to vote at all.”). In that case, the Eleventh Circuit stayed a preliminary injunction against Georgia’s deadline for returning mail ballots. That deadline, the Eleventh Circuit explained, “does not implicate the right to vote at all” because “Georgia has provided numerous avenues” to vote, including “in person on Election Day.” 976 F.3d at 1281. So too here.

In short, the “fundamental right to vote” is “the ability to cast a ballot”—“not the right to do so in a voter’s preferred manner.” Tully, 977 F.3d at 613 (emphasis added). To the extent that Plaintiffs challenge SB 202’s regulations of absentee voting and other nontraditional methods, their claims fail as a matter of law.

II. Plaintiffs’ constitutional right-to-vote claims fail because they rely on idiosyncratic burdens on some voters. (Count III)

Plaintiffs’ constitutional claims fail for another basic reason. Right-to-vote claims are assessed under Anderson-Burdick—the balancing test derived from the Supreme Court’s decisions in Anderson v. Celebrezze, 460 U.S. 780 (1983), and Burdick v. Takushi, 504 U.S. 428 (1992). The Anderson-Burdick test “requires [courts] to weigh the burden imposed by the law against the state interests justifying the law.” Jacobson v. Fla. Sec’y of State, 974 F.3d 1236, 1261 (11th Cir. 2020) (citing Common Cause/Ga. v. Billups, 554 F.3d 1340, 1352 (11th Cir. 2009)). But as the Eleventh Circuit recently explained—quoting Justice Scalia’s concurrence in Crawford—courts “have to identify a burden before [they] can weigh it.” Id. (quoting Crawford v. Marion Cnty. Election Bd., 553 U.S. 181, 205 (2008) (Scalia, J., concurring in the judgment)). The only burdens that Plaintiffs assert are legally “irrelevant” because they are “special burden[s] on some voters,” not categorical burdens on all voters. Crawford, 553 U.S. at 204 (Scalia, J., concurring in the judgment) (cleaned up).

When plaintiffs challenge “generally applicable, nondiscriminatory voting regulation[s],” the burdens arising from “the peculiar circumstances of individual voters” are legally “irrelevant.” Id. at 204-06. The Anderson-Burdick test is concerned only with burdens that affect voters “categorically.” Id. at 206. This categorical approach follows from several Supreme Court precedents:

- In holding that Hawaii’s ban on write-in voting “impose[d] only a limited burden on voters’ rights,” Burdick looked at the ban’s effect on voters generally, rather than on the plaintiff specifically. 504 U.S. at 436-39. (Indeed, it was the dissent in Burdick that focused on the law’s impact on “some individual voters.” Id. at 448 (Kennedy, J., dissenting).)
- In rejecting voters’ challenge to Oklahoma’s primary election, Clingman v. Beaver emphasized that “Oklahoma’s semiclosed primary system does not severely burden the associational rights of the state’s citizenry” generally—irrespective of its specific effect on the individual plaintiffs. 544 U.S. 581, 593 (2005).
- Storer v. Brown likewise held that the “sever[ity]” of California’s ballot-access requirements must be assessed based on “the nature, extent, and likely impact” of those requirements—not the known impact on the specific candidates who were plaintiffs. 415 U.S. 724, 738 (1974) (emphasis added).

See also Crawford, 553 U.S. at 206-07 (Scalia, J., concurring in the judgment) (analyzing other precedents).

The categorical approach makes good sense. Given inevitable differences in voters' circumstances, every voting requirement "affects different voters differently." Id. at 205. But those different effects are not different "burdens" imposed by a generally applicable law; they "are no more than the different impacts of the single burden that the law uniformly imposes on all voters." Id. The Constitution does not prohibit mere disparate impacts. Id. at 207 (citing Washington v. Davis, 426 U.S. 229, 248 (1976)). Holding otherwise would imply that every voting requirement in every State is subject to invalidation whenever any voter's personal, idiosyncratic circumstances make that requirement particularly difficult. The Constitution does not tell courts to inject case-by-case hardship waivers into every election law. It entrusts state legislatures with making these policy decisions. See U.S. Const., art. I, §4; art. II, §1; amend. X. This constitutional design militates against the "sort of detailed judicial supervision" that a "voter-by-voter examination of the burdens of voting regulations" would require. Crawford, 553 U.S. at 208 (Scalia, J., concurring in the judgment); accord Luft v. Evers, 963 F.3d 665, 671 (7th Cir. 2020).

Though Justice Scalia was writing only for himself and two others in Crawford, his concurrence accurately describes the governing law. As he explained, the categorical approach comes from several Supreme Court precedents—all good law, all binding. See Crawford, 553 U.S. at 206-07 (Scalia, J., concurring in the judgment). The lead opinion in Crawford, moreover, "neither reject[ed] nor embrace[d]" the categorical approach. Id. at 208. It didn't need to because the plaintiff there failed to "provide any concrete evidence of the burden” that the law imposed “on any class of voters.” Id. at 201-02 (op. of Stevens, J.). Several lower courts have thus followed Justice Scalia’s concurrence as an accurate statement of the law. See, e.g., Richardson v. Tex. Sec’y of State, 978 F.3d 220, 236 (5th Cir. 2020); Ne. Ohio Coal. for the Homeless v. Husted, 837 F.3d 612, 663 (6th Cir. 2016) (Keith, J., concurring in part, dissenting in part) (“The Majority relies in part on Justice Scalia’s concurrence in Crawford”). The Eleventh Circuit has also relied on it. See, e.g., Jacobson, 974 F.3d at 1261; Greater Birmingham Ministries v. Sec’y of State for Ala., 992 F.3d 1299, 1327 (11th Cir. 2021).

The correct, categorical approach to Anderson-Burdick is fatal to Plaintiffs’ claims. While Plaintiffs make passing allegations of SB 202’s burdens on “all voters,” Am. Compl. ¶¶12, 75, 89, they fail to allege in “non-conclusory” terms that SB 202 imposes meaningful burdens on “voters generally,” League of Women Voters of Minn., 2021 WL 1175234, at *9. Plaintiffs focus entirely on the “discriminatory” burdens allegedly imposed on certain subclasses of voters. E.g., Am. Compl. ¶¶2, 88-89, 100, 104, 111, 115, 134. This “[z]eroing in on the abnormal burden experienced by a small group of voters is problematic at best, and prohibited at worst.” Ne. Ohio Coal., 837 F.3d at 631. The better view is that it’s prohibited.

III. Plaintiffs’ section 2 and intentional-discrimination claims fail under Brnovich. (Counts I & II)

Less than two weeks ago—but more than a month after Plaintiffs filed their amended complaint—the Supreme Court decided Brnovich. A landmark decision, Brnovich was “the first time” that the Court applied section 2 of the Voting Rights Act to laws governing “how ballots are collected and counted.” 2021 WL 2690267, at *5; accord id. at *10 (“this is our first foray into the area”); id. at *11 (“this is our first §2 time, place, or manner case”). The Court substantially clarified the law in this area, especially for section 2’s so-called “results test.” Under Brnovich’s framework, Plaintiffs do not come close to stating a claim of results-based or intent-based discrimination.

A. Results-Based Discrimination

Section 2 asks whether, under the “totality of circumstances,” a voting procedure “results in” the denial of voting rights “on account of race or color.” 52 U.S.C. §10301. The statute’s “touchstone,” according to Brnovich, is whether voting is equally open to individuals of all races. 2021 WL 2690267, at *12. That a voting regulation has a “disparate impact” on some racial group—even a “statistically significant” one—is not enough. Id. at *16. Otherwise, existing disparities in “employment, wealth, and education” would disable the States and “bring about a wholesale transfer of the authority to set voting rules ... to the federal courts.” Id.

Brnovich instructs courts considering section 2 claims to consider all relevant circumstances. Id. at *12. It mentions five “important circumstances” in particular: the size of any burden on voting, any deviation from procedures common in 1982, the size of any racially disparate impact, the other available ways to vote, and the strength of the State’s interests. Id. at *12-13.

While Brnovich’s list is nonexhaustive, the Court stated several subrules that courts “must” follow:

1. Courts “must tolerate ‘the usual burdens of voting.’” Id. at *12. “Mere inconvenience” never violates section 2. Id.
2. When section 2 was amended in 1982, States required “nearly all voters to cast their ballots in person on election day.” Id. This history, as well as the current laws in other States, “must be taken into account.” Id.
3. Courts must assess “the size” of any racial disparity by using a “meaningful comparison.” Id. at *13. Plaintiffs cannot “artificially magnif[y]” “[w]hat are at bottom small differences” or create a “distorted picture” by “dividing one percentage by another.” Id. at *17 (citing Frank v. Walker, 768 F.3d 744, 752 n.3 (7th Cir. 2014)).
4. Courts “must consider” the State’s “entire system of voting” and the “other” ways it allows citizens to vote. Id.
5. The State’s interests behind the regulation “must be taken into account.” Id. Preventing fraud, intimidation, and undue influence are strong, legitimate interests—even if the State is acting purely prophylactically. Id. at *13, *20.

After stating these subrules, Brnovich explained why other legal frameworks were “less helpful” in section 2 cases—including the so-called Gingles factors. See id. at *13-14. Cf. Am. Compl. ¶¶120-22 (incorrectly focusing on Gingles).

Especially after Brnovich, Plaintiffs have not pleaded a plausible violation of section 2. Although Brnovich hadn’t been decided when Plaintiffs drafted their amended complaint, that decision “must be given full retroactive effect” in this case. Harper v. Va. Dep’t of Tax’n, 509 U.S. 86, 96 (1993). It compels dismissal of Plaintiffs’ claims for several reasons.

First, the challenged parts of SB 202 impose nothing beyond the “usual burdens of voting.” Brnovich, 2021 WL 2690267, at *12. All elections have rules: There is nothing unusual about requiring Georgians to register, present one of the several permissible forms of ID, apply for a ballot, timely request and return a ballot, and the like. See id. at *16, *18 (nothing unusual about having to “identify one’s own polling place,” “travel there,” “mak[e] a trip to the department of motor vehicles,” or make other similar trips to a mailbox, post office, drop box, or election office). Plaintiffs do not allege otherwise. They instead assume that even slight burdens must be justified by sufficient state interests. E.g., Am. Compl. ¶¶4, 85-86, 96-100, 104, 106-07, 109, 114-15. But Plaintiffs put the cart before the horse: Burdens that are “[m]ere inconvenience[s]” do not implicate section 2 in the first place. Brnovich, 2021 WL 2690267, at *12.

Second, nearly all of Plaintiffs’ challenges involve regulations of absentee voting. But in 1982, this method of voting was entirely unavailable for “nearly all” Americans. Id. Compared to the “benchmark[]” of zero absentee voting, the challenged laws cannot impose a meaningful burden. Id. This Court should “doubt that Congress intended” section 2 to force States to adopt expansive versions of voting methods that didn’t exist in 1982. Id. In fact, that reading would raise “grave constitutional concerns” about section 2’s constitutionality. Johnson v. Gov’t of Fla., 405 F.3d 1214, 1231-32 (11th Cir. 2005) (en banc). Nor do Plaintiffs make allegations comparing Georgia’s laws with those of other States. Cf. Brnovich, 2021 WL 2690267, at *16.

Third, Plaintiffs make no effort to quantify “the size” of any racially disparate impacts or “compar[e]” them in any “meaningful” sense. Id. at *13. Plaintiffs mostly just assert, in conclusory terms, that disparate impacts will occur. E.g., Am. Compl. ¶¶2, 4, 10, 86, 100, 111. When they provide numbers, they inflate them with the kind of statistical fallacies that Brnovich rejected. See 2021 WL 2690267, at *17, *13; e.g., Am. Compl. ¶¶5, 86-87, 100. Or they allege disparate impacts based on preexisting disparities in employment, wealth, and education—precisely what Brnovich deemed insufficient. See 2021 WL 2690267, at *16; e.g., Am. Compl. ¶¶6-8, 88-90, 104, 110, 115. These disparities are not Georgia’s fault. Frank, 768 F.3d at 753. And allegations that “minorities [a]re ‘generically’ more likely than non-minorities to make use of” certain voting practices do not allege a disparity at all. Brnovich, 2021 WL 2690267, at *19 n.19.

Fourth, Plaintiffs focus on how each provision of SB 202 burdens a particular method of voting, without considering the State’s “entire system.” Id. at *13. Georgia makes it easy to vote. See New Ga. Proj., 976 F.3d at 1281; id. at 1286 (Lagoa, J., concurring). With no-excuse absentee voting and a generous early-voting period, Georgia is in the top tier of all States for ease of voting. See Nonpartisan Report Ranks Georgia Election Access in Top Tier After SB 202, Ga. Sec’y of State, bit.ly/3AD0Adq (citing How Easy Is It to Vote Early in Your State?, Ctr. for Election Innovation & Rsch. (Apr. 12, 2021)). Voters who cannot vote absentee can vote early or on election day, and vice versa. Plaintiffs do not allege that any Georgians, let alone most Georgians, are unable to use at least one of these options after SB 202. That allegation would be self-evidently implausible.

Fifth, Plaintiffs misstate “the strength of the state interests” behind the challenged laws. Brnovich, 2021 WL 2690267, at *13. Plaintiffs assume that Georgia cannot act to prevent voter fraud unless fraud is already widespread in the State. E.g., Am. Compl. ¶¶9-10, 59-60, 70, 91, 101, 108, 112, 117, 135-37. But the “risk of voter fraud [is] real,” even if Georgia has “had the good fortune to avoid it”; and the “prevention of fraud” is a “strong and entirely legitimate state interest.” Crawford, 553 U.S. at 196 (op. of Stevens, J.); Brnovich, 2021 WL 2690267, at *20, *13. It thus “go[es] without saying” that Georgia can “take action to prevent election fraud without waiting for it to occur and be detected within its own borders.” Brnovich, 2021 WL 2690267, at *20. Georgia can also take prophylactic steps to improve its procedures, restore voter confidence, and prevent intimidation and coercion. Section 2 is not pre-clearance by another name: Sovereign States can reform their voting laws without first getting permission from Plaintiffs or federal courts. Luft, 963 F.3d at 674. Plaintiffs’ results-based claim under section 2 should be dismissed.

B. Intent-Based Discrimination

The test for discriminatory intent under section 2, the Fourteenth Amendment, and the Fifteenth Amendment is “the same.” Nipper v. Smith, 39 F.3d 1494, 1520 (11th Cir. 1994) (en banc). While Brnovich did not alter that test, it made important holdings that illustrate why Plaintiffs’ allegations fall short. The key question, Brnovich explained, is whether “the legislature as a whole” acted with racist intent—not individual legislators. 2021 WL 2690267, at *22. And “partisan motives are not the same as racial motives.” Id. Neither are “sincere” beliefs, even if “mistaken,” about the existence of fraud or the wisdom of election reforms. Id. at *21-22.

Plaintiffs have not plausibly alleged that SB 202 was enacted with racist intent. See, e.g., DHS v. Regents of the Univ. of Calif., 140 S. Ct. 1891, 1915-16 (2020) (resolving a claim of intentional discrimination at the motion-to-dismiss stage). Courts are “reluctan[t] to speculate about a state legislature’s intent.” Greater Birmingham Ministries, 992 F.3d at 1324 n.37. Here, the only reliable evidence of the legislature’s purposes are the formal legislative findings that the majority voted on and included in SB 202. According to those findings, SB 202 was enacted to “boost voter confidence”; “streamline ... elections” by “promoting uniformity”; “reduce the burden on election officials”; prevent “improper interference, political pressure, or intimidation”; and make it “hard to cheat.” SB 202, §2, 2021 Georgia Laws Act 9.

SB 202’s approved purposes are entirely legitimate. See Brnovich, 2021 WL 2690267, at *21-22; Crawford, 553 U.S. at 192-93 (op. of Stevens, J.). And the legislature “f[ound] and declare[d]” that SB 202 would promote these purposes, exercising its “considered judgment” after considering “hours of testimony,” making “significant modifications,” and “applying the lessons learned from conducting an election in the 2020 pandemic.” SB 202, §2. While Plaintiffs downplay the risk of voter fraud, e.g., Am. Compl. ¶¶9-10, 59-60, 70, 91, 101, 108, 112, 117, 135-37, the legislature could take a different view and pass prophylactic safeguards, Brnovich, 2021 WL 2690267, at *13, *20.

The notion that these legislative findings are little more than racist pretext is implausible. This Court must consider “the precise circumstances surrounding the passage of [SB 202].” Greater Birmingham Ministries, 992 F.3d at 1325. Plaintiffs “d[o] not identify [racist] statements” made by any legislator who voted for SB 202, let alone by “the entire body of the [Georgia] legislature.” DHS, 140 S. Ct. at 1916 (cleaned up); Greater Birmingham Ministries, 992 F.3d at 1324-25. And stray statements from political campaigns—“remote in time and made in unrelated contexts”—“do not qualify as contemporary statements” about SB 202. DHS, 140 S. Ct. at 1916 (cleaned up).

Plaintiffs’ allegations about Georgia’s “racist history” are also too remote and cannot disempower the State from “enacting otherwise constitutional laws about voting.” Greater Birmingham Ministries, 992 F.3d at 1325. “Things have changed in the South.” Nw. Austin Mun. Util. Dist. No. One v. Holder, 557 U.S. 193, 202 (2009). Neither the Constitution nor the Voting Rights Act is “designed to punish for the past.” Shelby Cty. v. Holder, 570 U.S. 529, 553 (2013). In fact, Plaintiffs do not challenge large swaths of SB 202 precisely because those provisions make it easier to vote—hardly the handiwork of a legislature motivated by racism.

For all these reasons, Plaintiffs’ intent-based claims do not cross the plausibility threshold. They should be dismissed as a matter of law.

CONCLUSION

This Court should dismiss Plaintiffs’ amended complaint with prejudice.

Respectfully submitted,

Dated: July 12, 2021

/s/ Tyler R. Green

John E. Hall, Jr.
Georgia Bar No. 319090
William Bradley Carver, Sr.
Georgia Bar No. 115529
W. Dowdy White
Georgia Bar No. 320879
HALL BOOTH SMITH, P.C.
191 Peachtree St. NE, Ste. 2900
Atlanta, GA 30303
(404) 954-6967

Tyler R. Green (pro hac vice)
Cameron T. Norris (pro hac vice)
Steven C. Begakis (pro hac vice)
CONSOVOY MCCARTHY PLLC
1600 Wilson Blvd., Ste. 700
Arlington, VA 22209
(703) 243-9423
tyler@consovoymccarthy.com
cam@consovoymccarthy.com
steven@consovoymccarthy.com

Counsel for Intervenor-Defendants

CERTIFICATE OF COMPLIANCE

I certify that this document complies with Local Rule 5.1(B) because it uses 13-point Century Schoolbook.

/s/ Tyler R. Green

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

On July 12, 2021, I e-filed this document on ECF, which will serve everyone requiring service.

/s/ Tyler R. Green