President Trump or any individual of any political party has every right to exhaust every option to ensure an accurate outcome for the American people. While the Presidential race remains extremely close in some states, I am confident in the U.S. election system - a system that provides mechanisms in every state for requesting a recount or raising other concerns related to official results.

If anyone has evidence of suspicious activity that threatens the integrity of free and fair elections, they can and should make the appropriate officials aware or challenge the issue in court.

What we are currently seeing play out across our country is a perfect example of why the Democrat's efforts to federalize our election laws and bring our voting system under the unreliable, heavy arm of the federal bureaucracy is so dangerous.

We are blessed to have one of the best election systems here in Oklahoma, but it is critical that all Americans have confidence in our election process. I support the effort to ensure that every LEGAL vote is counted accurately.

Every legal vote must be counted.

I know many of my constituents are concerned with what's happening in states like Pennsylvania, Nevada, Michigan, and Georgia. Our country has held elections for over 200 years. The process works, but only if it's done legally. Members of my team have been on the ground in Pennsylvania this week, working to ensure that every legal vote is counted. I have been in contact with my colleagues in these battleground states and I send my full support to them.

Many of you probably saw that the State of Texas launched a lawsuit against several states whose elections are still shrouded in doubt and allegations of fraud.

This morning, I joined several of my colleagues to write an amicus brief that we will send to the Supreme Court in support of this legal action from Texas.

When governors and state judicial systems change the voting laws of a state so close to an election, there are bound to be problems. Our country was founded on principles of democracy, where legislative bodies decide the laws, including voting laws, not executive or judicial leaders.

If it is found that these states unconstitutionally changed their voting laws without going through their legislative chambers, the fears of millions of Americans will be confirmed. While Americans are losing faith in their election system, we must be doing everything in our power to ensure that our Constitution is upheld.

Mullin said there is a lot of blame to go around for what happened, but as he has throughout the past four years, he deflected criticism of President Donald Trump, who some say incited the violence.

"We all (have responsibility)," he said. "The media has responsibility, the Republicans have responsibility, the Democrats have responsibility. Those who post the most ridiculous things on social media ... have responsibility.

"No one is to blame here. We are all to blame."

Asked if that included himself, who with Oklahoma's other four House members joined the long-shot effort to discredit Democrat Joe Biden's election to the presidency, and around which Wednesday's rioters rallied, Mullin repeated that everybody bore some responsibility.

One person he wasn't inclined to blame was Trump.

"Some people are saying the president is responsible. Absolutely not," he said.

"At the same time, we're all responsible for our actions."

When it was pointed out that Trump took no action to quell the violence until hours after it began, Mullin said: "I wasn't really paying attention to that because I was in the thick of it. No one can put the blame for this solely on the president."
