For 4 years the @DNC spent millions of dollars, and flooded our airwaves with warnings of how easily corrupted the presidential election can be... Now they're offended people believed them?

Secure elections are essential for a free country. Both Republicans and Democrats should be demanding that any potential fraud be investigated so that we're confident in the election results. If you agree, sign our petition for election integrity:

Standing up for free and fair elections isn't Republican or Democrat, it's American. It's not about changing or overturning, it's about giving each person that walks into a voting booth the confidence that what they're doing matters.

Sen. Tom Cotton (R-AR) noted that Democrats' legislative priorities include a national mandate for vote-by-mail and ballot harvesting.

The statement I drafted summarizes our position and the legal analysis that supports it.

Please note the response from an "empathy-free" soul... I mentioned the misery of urban Black Americans I've witnessed in the corrupt Dem controlled Pa ..no curiosity, no questions, no "what do mean"?...unfortunately with angry hearts they get angrier and simply "could care less"

An important point on the mainstream media polls. They weren't just incredibly wrong again. They're not that incompetent. They didn't just make a mistake. They made a decision. They said we're willing to be wrong in order to shape public opinion. No one will hold us accountable.

A week after the election it won't matter. We're going to spend two years telling the country that Trump is going to lose, knowing it would have an affect.

It's nothing less than voter manipulation.

Free, fair, and transparent elections are the heart of America and what sets us apart from much of the world. We must continue to count all legal votes and if there is a legitimate claim to fraud, it should be investigated and brought before the courts.

In our modern world, our quest for truth requires constant work. Content shoots at us like water through a firehose, blending bias, opinion and facts that are nearly impossible to differentiate, leaving us pinned against a wall of doubt. Many people tell me they have given up on network news, major newspapers and especially the internet. (As it turns out, social media is great for keeping in touch with your kids, but not for getting the facts.)

This problem isn't new, but it is increasing. As a young man, I remember listening to a Dar Rather report and thinking, "This is not true. He is not telling the full story." This was the first time I remember questioning the intentions of a news anchor. But simple bias is old-fashioned and basic compared to what we have now. Media has gone from bias to propaganda, to open deception and suppression. And yes, it is suppression when social media and traditional news not only ignore facts but actively suppress things they don't want you to know, making it impossible to share information they don't agree with — for example, Hunter Biden's connections with Burisma.
