ISABEL LONGORIA and CATHY MORGAN, Plaintiffs, v. WARREN K. PAXTON, in his official capacity as the Attorney General of Texas, et al., Defendants.	§	Case No. 5:21-cv-1223-XR

ATTORNEY GENERAL PAXTON'S MOTION TO STAY

Yesterday, Defendant Warren K. Paxton (the "Attorney General") was served with process in this case, including an amended complaint and a preliminary-injunction motion. The Attorney General respectfully requests that the Court stay consideration of Plaintiffs preliminary-injunction motion—and the Attorney General's obligation to respond to that motion—pending a status conference and the Court's ruling on the motion to consolidate this new case with the other challenges to SB1. See La Unión del Pueblo Entero v. Abbott, No. 5:21-cv-844, ECF 165 (W.D. Tex. Jan. 3, 2022).

BACKGROUND

This case was originally assigned to Judge Fred Biery, see Minute Entry of Dec. 10, 2021, but has since been reassigned to this Court. See ECF 8. Here, Plaintiffs Isabel Longoria and Cathy Morgan challenge election reforms recently implemented by the Texas Legislature. See An Act Relating to Election Integrity and Security, S.B.1, 87th Leg., 2d C.S. (2021) ("SB1"). Specifically, Plaintiffs challenge a provision of SB1 prohibiting public officials and election officials from soliciting mail-in voting applications from voters who have not requested them. See SB1 § 7.04, implementing Texas Election Code § 276.016(a)(1). The LUPE case is a consolidated action encompassing all of the challenges to SB1. See LUPE, No. 5:21-cv-844, ECF 31 (Sept. 30, 2021) (order of consolidation). At present, it includes five amended complaints and fifty-eight plaintiffs.

The Attorney General has filed a motion to consolidate in LUPE, requesting that this case be consolidated with the other SB1 cases under the Fifth Circuit's first-to-file rule and Rule 42(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. See LUPE, No. 5:21-cv-844, ECF 165 (W.D. Tex. Jan. 3, 2022). In general, that motion explains that this case challenges the same law—indeed, the same provisions—as many of the plaintiffs in LUPE and that, as a result, consolidation promotes uniformity and judicial economy. Compare ECF 5 ¶¶ 13–36 (challenging SB1 § 7.04 and Texas Election Code § 276.016(a)), with Amended Complaint of the League of United Latin American Citizens, Texas, LUPE, No. 5:21-cv-844, ECF 136 ¶ 156 (W.D. Tex. Dec. 1, 2021) (same); Amended Complaint of Houston Justice, id. ECF 139 ¶¶ 78, 211 (W.D. Tex. Dec. 1, 2021) (same); Amended Complaint of La Unión del Pueblo Entero, id. ECF 140 ¶ 31 n.23 (W.D. Tex. Dec. 1, 2021) (same).

In the consolidated case, the Court has entered numerous orders, including a scheduling order. See LUPE, No. 5:21-cv-844, ECF 125 (W.D. Tex. Nov. 18, 2021). That scheduling order was premised on the plaintiffs' representation that they would not be seeking preliminary injunctive relief before the March primary election. At a status conference, the Court asked for confirmation that "that the plaintiffs are going to want to have the March primary come and go with no injunctive relief requested from this Court." Ex. A at 32. Defendants confirmed "that that was an assumption upon which [the proposed] schedule" rested and described their discussions with the plaintiffs. Id.; see also id. at 36–37 (explaining that Defendants were "hopeful" they could "meet [the proposed] schedule" "based on" the plaintiffs' "representation to us" that "[t]here's not a preliminary injunction . . . proceeding"). The plaintiffs then confirmed that they had the same understanding. Speaking "[o]n behalf of the LUPE plaintiffs," including Plaintiff Longoria, Mr. Morales-Doyle represented "that we are not planning to pursue preliminary injunctive relief prior to the March primary." Id. at 32–33.

Here, however, Plaintiff Longoria now seeks preliminary injunctive relief prior to the March primary. See ECF 7 at 8. She is still represented by the same attorneys, including Mr. Morales-Doyle.

ARGUMENT

The Court should stay consideration of Plaintiffs' preliminary-injunction motion, see ECF 7, and the Attorney General's obligation to respond to that motion. District courts have inherent power to stay proceedings to control their dockets efficiently and to otherwise order the litigation as justice requires. See Wedgeworth v. Fibreboard Corp., 706 F.2d 541, 545 (5th Cir. 1983); see, e.g., Horizon Livestock, LLC v. 24 Trading Co., No. 3:12-cv-335, 2014 WL 12480004, at *2 (W.D. Tex. May 21, 2014); Casarez v. Texas Roadhouse of El-Paso-West, Ltd., No. 3:12-cv-117, 2013 WL 12394405, at *3 (W.D. Tex. Feb. 8, 2013). A district court has "broad" discretion in this regard, and "proper use of this authority 'calls for the exercise of judgment, which must weigh competing interests and maintain an even balance.'" Wedgeworth, 706 F.2d at 545 (quotation omitted).

As an initial matter, consideration of the preliminary-injunction motion should not proceed until the Court has decided the consolidation issue. Having such closely related cases proceed on separate tracks would waste the Court's and the parties' resources.

In addition, Plaintiffs' motion presents substantial scheduling complications because the parties negotiated the scheduling order in LUPE, which includes an accelerated trial, based on the assumption that the plaintiffs would not seek preliminary injunctive relief. Plaintiff Longoria's decision to seek preliminary injunctive relief—despite representing that she would not—is inconsistent with that scheduling order. To resolve that inconsistency, Defendant respectfully requests that the Court hold a status conference on that subject. Staying consideration of Plaintiffs' motion would avoid any further complications and prevent prejudice to the LUPE parties that are proceeding under that scheduling order.

CONCLUSION

Defendant respectfully requests that the Court stay this case, consideration of the Plaintiffs' motion for preliminary injunction, and Defendant's obligation to respond to that motion pending the Court's decision on consolidation and a status conference.

Date: January 4, 2022

Respectfully submitted.

REPORTED BY: GIGI SIMCOX, RMR, CRR
OFFICIAL COURT REPORTER
UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS

(San Antonio, Texas; November 16, 2021, at 1:30 p.m., in open court.)

THE COURT: With that, let's turn to the civil case.

21-844, La Union Del Pueblo versus Gregg Abbott and others.

Let's take a roll call here.

For La Union, or LUPE, who do we have?

MR. MORALES DOYLE: Good afternoon, Your Honor.

Shawn Morales Doyle from the Brennan Center for Justice on behalf of La Union Del Pueblo Entero. I have with me a number of attorneys. I'm not sure if I can run through the list, or you want to get —

THE COURT: No, that's all right. One per party will do for now, and if I have to recognize anybody else who speaks, let's just try to be clear for the court reporter.

The other case was LULAC. Who do we have for LULAC?

MR. NKWONTA: Good afternoon, Your Honor.

Uzoma Nkwonta on behalf of LULAC. And I'll also introduce my colleagues, Kassie Yukevich and Graham White.

THE COURT: Thank you.

For Houston Justice?

MS. HOLMES: Good afternoon, Your Honor.

Jennifer Holmes on behalf of the Houston Justice plaintiffs, and I also have a number of colleagues joining us today.

THE COURT: Thank you.

For OCA-Greater Houston?

MR. COX: Hi, Judge. Ryan Cox on behalf of the OCA-Greater Houston plaintiff group, along with several other cocounsel as well.

THE COURT: Thank you.

Mi Familia Vota?

MS. OLSON: Good afternoon, Your Honor.

Wendy Olson with Stoel Rives in Boise, for the Mi Familia Vota plaintiffs. We have several counsel -- cocounsel on the line, including Sean Lyons, who is our local counsel from Lyons & Lyons.

THE COURT: Thank you.

And for the State defendants?

MR. SWEETEN: Your Honor, Patrick Sweeten and Will Thompson on behalf of the State defendants.

THE COURT: Thank you.

And for the United States?

MR. FREEMAN: Good afternoon, Your Honor.

Dan Freeman on behalf of the United States. With me on the line are Richard Dellheim, Dana Paikowsky, Mike Stewart, and Jennifer Yun.

THE COURT: Thank you.

So I apologize for the criminal docket. I don't know how that got snuck into the calendar, but it did. So I apologize for that.

Let's work through some of the issues here in this case. First, let's take care of housekeeping.

We have a motion for leave to file an amicus brief by Donna G. Davidson. That's Docket Number 78. That's opposed by Mi Familia Vota.

It's just an amicus brief. I'm just going to -- that's going to be granted. I'll read and consider the arguments made in there, but the foundation for government accountability, just because of the sheer number of the lawyers I have in this, will be denied speaking time.

Number 2. Motion to appear pro hac vice by Stewart Whitson. Docket Number 76. That's granted.

Motion to appear pro hac vice for Chase Martin. Docket Number 77. That's granted.

Motion to appear pro hac vice Stewart Whitson.

Mr. Whitson, I think you wanted to pay us twice. I'll take your money, but that's moot. So that's denied.

Next. Public Interest Legal Foundation's motion to intervene. Docket Number 43.

Let me turn to you, Mr. Sweeten. What's the State of Texas' position on that?

MR. SWEETEN: Your Honor, can you read that again, please?

THE COURT: Yeah. This is a motion to intervene filed by the Public Interest Legal Foundation.

MR. SWEETEN: Your Honor, the State does not object to the intervention.

THE COURT: So now, that's kind of interesting to me, because if that's your position how does Public Interest Legal Foundation have standing when you're contending that the other defendants don't have standing?

MR. SWEETEN: Well, Your Honor, I'm not conceding that they have standing or not. I'm just suggesting that the State's position is that, you know, we're not actively objecting to the request.

I feel like that's up to those parties to make the case for their intervention. I'm certainly not, you know, suggesting that they have it or don't. We're just not objecting to that request.

And we haven't objected to amicus requests that we've seen also.

THE COURT: Well, that's not the same as intervention.

MR. SWEETEN: No, that's true.

THE COURT: So that's denied.

Public Interest Legal Foundation, to the extent that you want to file any amicus briefs, I'll consider that whenever you decide you want to do that. But with regard to intervention, the State is ably defended and they can argue any positions they feel they need to argue on their own.

Next. Motion to intervene by Dallas County Republican Party and others. Docket Number 57.

What's the State of Texas' position on that, Mr. Sweeten?

MR. SWEETEN: Same position, Your Honor.

No objection.

THE COURT: Same ruling. Denied.

So again, the Dallas County Republican Party can file any amicus briefs it wishes to file in this case. But again, the State is more than ably represented and their positions are ably represented by the Attorney General's Office.

Motion to appear pro hac vice by E. Stewart Crosland. That's denied since I denied the intervention.

That was Docket 71.

Docket 72. A motion to appear by Stephen Kenny. That's denied because I denied the intervention.

So I think that takes care of housekeeping.

Let's move to the motions to dismiss, and I guess let me start with asking a background question. And I'm not sure who wants to speak to this here from the plaintiffs' groups.

Why are you opposing filing an omnibus complaint?

I'll start with LUPE first.

MR. MORALES DOYLE: Sure, Your Honor. Sean Morales again.

We are opposing to filing this omnibus complaint I think for a few reasons. One of them is that we don't have all the same interests or claims represented, i.e., the various plaintiffs to this case.

Our complaint, for instance, is bringing not only different theories and different claims than some of the other plaintiffs' groups, but on behalf of different interests we represent a number of organizational plaintiffs in addition to an election judge and an election administrator, and so I think that we are, while our interests are aligned with all of them, we have different theories and different claims that we're bringing.

And though I can understand the potential expediency of having one omnibus complaint, there's also a whole lot of work that will go into coming up with omnibus pleadings for all these various groups and interests, and I do not believe that the resources that will go into figuring out a way to coordinate all of those pleadings actually provide -- are worth the benefit that is provided by an omnibus complaint.

THE COURT: So I can't force you-all to do that. I believe you're making a mistake by doing that. And I think you're also putting a lot more work on the State by having to respond to these individual complaints, and a lot more work on the Court.

But again, technically and procedurally I can't require this. I would highly advise you-all to reconsider that position in the future because this doesn't make much sense to me. But that's where we're at apparently.

So on the motion to dismiss, some of the plaintiffs have failed to allege which specific provisions of SB 1 they are complaining of. So why doesn't this failure require a dismissal and an amended complaint?

So for example, on 21-844, no specific provisions of SB 1 are cited for your Fourteenth equal protection claim, your Fifteenth Amendment right to vote claim, your Section 2 Voting Rights Act claim, your Section 208 Voting Rights Act claim, and your ADA claim.

In 21-848, there were no specific provisions of SB 1 cited regarding the Fifteenth Amendment right to vote claim.

In 21-920, no specific provisions of SB 1 are cited regarding the First and Fourteenth Amendment right to vote claims, the Fourteenth Amendment equal protection claims, the Fifteenth Amendment right to vote claims, and the Section 2 Voting Rights Act claim.

So why shouldn't I grant the motion to dismiss regarding those failures and require an amended complaint?

LUPE.

MR. MORALES DOYLE: Your Honor, I think we did specify the provisions of SB 1, but I understand you may be saying that in the actual language of the count it is not made clear. I think that in our response to the motions to dismiss it will be -- we will make very clear which of the provisions we are challenging and each of our theories.

I think in the body of the facts of the complaint we tried to make that clear. I apologize if in the language of the count itself we haven't done -- again, specified each of those things.

We will address that in our response to the motions to dismiss. And I don't think filing an amended pleading is the best way to handle that.

THE COURT: Well, I'm not sure responding to your motion to dismiss is going to necessarily cure that.

I was hoping in the initial order that I sent out -- I was trying to avoid the motions fights that I knew was coming, and so I tried to advise you-all to limit the burden on you-all, the burden on the State, and the burden on the Court on having to litigate over items that we shouldn't have to litigate. And so I'm real disappointed my advice was not taken.

I'll, of course, wait for your response on that, but I can -- I'm already warning you guys. I don't see how if it's not in the complaint in the body of the causes of action how doing a response is going to cure that.

So be forewarned. If you don't file an amended complaint, you sort of know which way this is headed.

So regarding those plaintiffs alleging a violation of the ADA, these entity plaintiffs haven't specifically alleged what disabilities the members have, or how the disability limits any major life activity. Doesn't this require an amended complaint?

Who wants to tackle that one from the plaintiffs' group? Whoever has got the ADA claims.

Don't everybody speak at once.

MS. DAVIS: Your Honor, this is Lia Sifuentes Davis with the OCA plaintiffs.

We have included ADA claims in our pleadings, and at this stage of the pleading we just have an organizational plaintiff. And our motions to dismiss will address how the organizational plaintiff has standing to bring these claims.

THE COURT: Yeah. Again, just you-all can waste time drafting responses to motions to dismiss, but I don't think you-all are hearing me. So you know, it's a whole lot easier just to forego the response to dismiss and file an amended complaint to cure these deficiencies, but, you know, you-all do what you think is best.

The State is arguing that all claims are barred by sovereign immunity and so what exception is going to apply? And here, with regard to the State defendants, the Governor, the Secretary of State, and the Attorney General, and I guess I'm more curious about the claims against the Governor.

For those plaintiff groups who have claims against the Governor, how does the Governor have any enforcement authority in this legislation?

I'll start with LUPE.

MR. MORALES DOYLE: Thank you, Your Honor.

I'm trying to make sure I give my colleagues an opportunity as well here.

We think that the Governor plays a practical role in the enforcement of the election code in reality, but we understand the argument that the State is making with regard to the way that the ex-parte en doctrine has been interpreted in the Fifth Circuit and we are taking seriously those arguments, but we do think that the -- and contemplating, as we are with all these things, that the possibility of whether an amended complaint would make sense, or whether adjusting our claims makes sense, but I do want to say that we do believe that the Governor in the State of Texas, as a practical matter, does play a role in both shaking hand and enforcing the election code, whether or not that is made clear in every instance in the language of the election code itself.

But I don't mean to speak on behalf of any of the plaintiff groups besides the LUPE group.

THE COURT: So I'm not making any rulings, but in light of the Fifth Circuit's requirements about how I'm supposed to look at the Governor's role in enforcement on a specific provision by provision basis, this is not a ruling, but I don't see it, and so you-all might as well start looking at doing amended complaints here because I don't think you're going to pass muster.

Now, Mr. Sweeten, before I do all your work for you, the Secretary of State and the Attorney General, I mean, how is it that you are arguing they have no enforcement? I mean, if you look at all these sections of SB 1 their names are everywhere.

MR. SWEETEN: Your Honor, I'm going to let Mr. Thompson address the motion to dismiss, if I may.

MR. THOMPSON: Thank you, Your Honor. Will Thompson for the State defendants.

We think that the main point referring to the Secretary of State and Attorney General that although they may have some roles in some circumstances, this is as Your Honor pointed out, a provision by provision question.

And so what we have in a lot of these complaints are kind of general allegations that the secretary does something with regard to SB 1, which isn't really sufficient.

What we need to know is what do the plaintiffs think that the secretary does with regard to each provision that's being challenged. How allegedly does the secretary cause the injury that's at issue in each claim?

And that's what we're missing in these complaints.

It's what we tried to confer about before we filed motions to dismiss. And we think that if we were to go provision by provision with more specific allegations, we would find out that many of the individual claims truly have no connection to the secretary and are, instead, probably, at best, connected to the local election codes.

THE COURT: So you anticipated my question, Mr. Thompson. So if not the Governor, and not the Secretary of State, and not the Attorney General, well, then, who is the proper defendant in this case?

MR. THOMPSON: Your Honor, it's a difficult question to answer in the abstract because the Fifth Circuit requires a provision by provision and claim by claim analysis. So it is possible that the proper defendant will differ based on which claim is at issue, but for some things it will certainly be local election officials.

THE COURT: But let me press you on the Secretary of State and the Attorney General. I mean, you're not arguing that they have no role whatsoever in investigation and enforcement, are you?

MR. THOMPSON: Your Honor, we are not saying that they have no role under SB 1 at all. They certainly have some role and I didn't mean to suggest the opposite.

What I am saying is that we can't really analyze whether they're a proper defendant for any case under SB 1.

It really just depends on what injury is at issue. And for some of these plaintiffs at the very least we don't think it's met.

It's not clear whether it's met with regard to any of them because the plaintiffs haven't met their burden of specific allegations about what conduct from the defendants they are complaining of.

THE COURT: Again, I'm not making any rulings here but this ought to be clear signals to all the plaintiff groups, you need to further amend your complaints here to address these challenges because otherwise you're just wasting everybody's time with responses to motions to dismiss, making me rule on the motions, in all likelihood giving you adverse rulings, and then forcing you to amend.

I don't understand why we just can't go to amending now. This makes no sense to me whatsoever.

Okay. Now, with regard to what the plaintiffs are alleging, I want to understand this. Are plaintiffs asserting only organizational standing, or are any plaintiffs asserting associational standing?

Is there any plaintiff asserting associational standing? Please speak up now or forever hold your peace.

MR. COX: Judge, for the OCA plaintiffs all of our individual clients allege both associational and organizational standing. All five.

THE COURT: Okay. The OCA.

Anyone else besides OCA?

MR. NKWONTA: Your Honor --

MS. HOLMES: Your Honor, the Houston Justice plaintiffs, two of our clients, the Delta Sigma Theta Sorority and The Arc of Texas are asserting associational standing.

THE COURT: Remind me again who the frat/sorority group is.

MS. HOLMES: The Delta Sigma Theta Sorority.

THE COURT: Thank you.

I'm sorry. I cut someone else off.

MR. NKWONTA: Your Honor, for the LULAC plaintiffs, three of our organizational plaintiffs are asserting associational standing. That would be LULAC Texas, the Texas Alliance for Retired Americans, and Texas AFT.

THE COURT: Thank you.

Anyone else?

MR. MORALES DOYLE: Yes, Your Honor.

On behalf of LUPE plaintiffs, a number of our members -- or a number of our plaintiffs are members of organizations asserting associational standing, but not all of them.

And one of our plaintiff organizations, Texas Impact, is, in fact, an organization of other organizations, and so in some sense its members may be a little bit more complicated, in other words, Your Honor, but we are alleging both associational and organizational standing.

THE COURT: So did I cut off anybody? Anybody else?

Okay. So for all those groups who are asserting associational standing, I haven't seen where you are identifying specific members of those associations who would themselves have standing to sue.

Again, on the amended complaint here, that I hope is forthcoming, or amended complaints, plural, you-all need to flush that out because I don't see where many of you have articulated those individuals sufficient to withstand any challenge.

Next one. Regarding WCVI and ADL. I'm unsure by reading the complaints currently how these organizations establish an injury.

MR. MORALES DOYLE: I just want to make sure I got it right. ADL, and what was the other group you named, Your Honor?

THE COURT: WCVI.

MR. MORALES DOYLE: Yes. Okay. Those are not -- I want to make sure I'm getting our groups correct here, but those are not groups for which we are making associational standing claims. We are making organizational standing claims in terms of diversion of resources and the impact on the mission of those organizations to do their work to educate and engage voters in Texas.

THE COURT: So let me stop you there, Mr. Morales.

So there I thought you argued -- check me on the complaint language, because my notes may very well be wrong -- but I thought you said those entities were really research organizations.

And so when you said "research organizations," I thought, well, I mean, how is their research being -- how are they being injured in their research capacities? But when you file these amended complaints, which again I hope are forthcoming, I hope you articulate with more clarity how there's injury to those two organizations.

MR. MORALES DOYLE: Understood, Your Honor.

I will just say I don't think that ADL is primarily a research organization. WCVI is, in part, a research organization.

But I think both of these organizations are -- do certain educational functions and work with constituent and community members, and that is where the standing comes from.

But I understand your point about the specificity of allegations there.

THE COURT: Thank you.

So now, Mr. Sweeten, the organizational standing.

Is the State arguing on association -- pardon me. I just said it wrong. On organizational standing, haven't the plaintiffs sufficiently alleged injuries to establish organizational standing? Why is that deficient there?

MR. SWEETEN: Mr. Thompson will address that.

THE COURT: You're ducking all the hard questions to Mr. Thompson.

MR. SWEETEN: I am, Your Honor. I've got a really good help here today, so I know to lean on it when I need it.

Thank you.

THE COURT: Mr. Thompson.

MR. THOMPSON: Thank you, Your Honor.

We do think that the organizational standing allegations are deficient. One large reason, I think, cuts across many of the plaintiffs groups is that they want a diversion of resources theory.

A diversion of resources can be a sufficient injury but it is not a sufficient injury in and of itself. It has to be a diversion that is used to avoid some other underlying injury in fact.

THE COURT: So, I mean, have you read OCA-Greater Houston, Fifth Circuit, 2017, 867 F.3d, 604?

MR. THOMPSON: It's been probably a few weeks, but I've read it, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yeah, because you didn't cite it when you were briefing your standing.

MR. THOMPSON: I don't think that this issue was raised properly in OCA-Greater Houston. The Court decided a number of things in that case without kind of briefing on the topic, and our position would be that the Court did not fully consider and therefore did not rule upon, by virtue of stare decisis, a number of issues that we've raised.

THE COURT: Well, I'm bound -- whether you think the Fifth Circuit was well-informed or not, I'm bound by what they said.

MR. THOMPSON: I think that's almost right, Your Honor. When an issue is not briefed before the Court, we therefore often don't understand the court to be implicitly deciding it.

If the court had said, you know, "Despite the lack of briefing, we have independently researched the question and concluded the following," that would be one thing. We think we're not in that situation, Your Honor.

I suppose we could read OCA-Greater Houston to create a circuit split, but as a general rule we try to avoid reading Fifth Circuit precedent to split with the D.C. Circuit and things like that.

THE COURT: So I'm trying to get this case to the merits. So how do you think the plaintiffs, in their amended complaint, fix the deficiencies for the injury?

MR. THOMPSON: Sure, Your Honor.

I think what we need are allegations that explain what this law does to them in the absence of a diversion of resources. Does it injure them as groups in some way that they then try to avoid through the diversion of resources.

I'll give an example, Your Honor. If, for example, a plaintiff in a hypothetical case said, you know, what I like to do on the weekend is I hand out pamphlets. And, you know, the city government has enacted some kind of ordinance that requires me to go get a license in order to hand out pamphlets, and if I don't get the license I'll be prosecuted.

Well, what that individual could do is allege that either he has paid the fee to get the license, and that is an injury in fact, that caused an injury or he would have broken the law, or that he's not going to pay the fee and he faces a threat of prosecution for trying to hand out pamphlets without a license.

So kind of flip side to the same point. You're either injured because when you don't comply the law is going to do something to you, or you incur some kind of cost to avoid that underlying injury.

That's not what we have here. What we have here are a lot of organizations that seem to be relying on kind of general allegations that they don't like the consequences of this law for third parties. And because they don't like the social consequences, the alleged social consequences of the law, they spend money to try and change those consequences. I don't think that's a sufficient injury in fact.

THE COURT: So all the plaintiffs have heard that, whether you want to try to amend in light of that. I'm not saying you have to, but again, I'm trying to get us to the merits without more motion to dismiss diversions.

And so if you want to rely just on your existing allegations, that may or may not meet the Fifth Circuit. I'll hear the State's -- or I'll see whether or not the State's arguments about how the Fifth Circuit was not well-informed, but this is easily curable by you-all just adding more sentences to your amended complaint is what I'm trying to emphasize.

Next one. In the motion to dismiss the defense are asserting that there's no private cause of action under Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act.

So I'm assuming this is another hard one for Mr. Thompson?

MR. SWEETEN: Your Honor, anything on the motions to dismiss is Mr. Thompson today. Thank you.

THE COURT: So, Mr. Thompson, so in Shelby County the chief justice talked about injunctive relief is available in appropriate places to block voting laws from going into effect. And the chief justice said both the federal government and individuals have sued to enforce Section 2.

It sure appears that the chief justice believes there's a private cause of action.

MR. THOMPSON: I have to respectfully disagree, Your Honor. I think the chief justice was actually very careful to say that they "have" sued, not that it was "proper" for them to have sued.

Just a few months ago Justice Gorsuch flagged --

THE COURT: We're not talking about Justice Gorsuch and his -- that's all -- we're not going there.

We're talking about what a majority opinion held.

MR. THOMPSON: Well, then, Your Honor, I'll point out that in the majority opinion from the Supreme Court they have consistently said things like, "We assume without deciding that Section 2 creates a private cause of action," which they are able to do because it's not a jurisdictional requirement.

There is no holding from the majority of the United States Supreme Court saying that there is, in fact, a private cause of action under Section 2.

THE COURT: I disagree. That part of the motion to dismiss is denied.

With regard to defendants asserting there's no private cause of action under Section 208 of the Voting Rights Act. So, Mr. Thompson, 52 U.S.C., Section 10302 says, "Whenever the Attorney General or an aggrieved person institutes a proceeding," so how is there no private cause of action?

MR. THOMPSON: Sure.

The provision Your Honor quoted does not actually create a cause of action. It recognizes that causes of actions exist under other sources of law. It is of course not limited to Section 2 or Section 208.

So we believe that it refers to, for example, 1983 suits regarding constitutional claims, but certainly included within that even we if sought VRA claims were themselves included in that provision, it would presumably be the implied cause of action under Section 5 of the Supreme Court recognizing Allen. That was the explanation that Justice Thomas gave in Morris.

THE COURT: That part of the motion to dismiss is denied. The statute is clear about an aggrieved person is able to institute a proceeding.

Next one. No private cause of action under the materiality provision of the Civil Rights Act. So now that the United States has joined this case, does this make this issue all moot or not?

MR. THOMPSON: I don't think so, Your Honor. It may reduce its practical import. We will of course address the United States' claims in our pleadings regarding their claim which has not yet been filed.

But it is certainly true that if, for example, Your Honor held that the United States had the cause of action but the private plaintiffs do not, it would then be improper to grant any relief to the private plaintiffs. They wouldn't be prevailing parties that represent attorneys fees. They are not going to affect this kind of ruling even if the Court is able to reach the merits under a different party's claim.

THE COURT: So, well then, OCA plaintiffs, I mean, do you want to amend your complaint and drop this or not? The government is saying even if the United States is successful then you're getting zero.

MR. COX: It may have that kind of practical impact, but I think to get the relief of our client, that our clients are seeking, we plan to continue to seek that relief and we believe that there is a private cause of -- private right of action under 208 generally and we'll be -- expect to be briefing that for the Court on Thursday.

THE COURT: Okay. I won't make any ruling on that.

Where are we at?

Help me understand this. In your motion to dismiss LUPE's complaint, the defendants seem to assert that SB -- well, I can't even make your argument. I don't seem to understand it.

What are you arguing with regard to LUPE's complaint and the Supremacy Clause?

MR. MORALES DOYLE: I'm sorry, Your Honor.

I'm trying to refresh my recollection. I believe you're referring to Count 10 of the complaint, and we said that Count 10 is redundant and therefore should be dismissed or stricken because Count 10 just says that SB 1 violates the Supremacy Clause. That's not really a claim. I'm not sure how else to put it.

The Supremacy Clause is a rule of decision for when there is a conflict of federal and state law. So if the plaintiffs had established some other violation of federal law, then the Supremacy Clause would tell us that federal law trumps state law. But there is no independent cause of action that says you have somehow violated the Supremacy Clause standing alone.

THE COURT: Okay. Now I understand it.

So again, in the amended complaints that are coming down you may want to clear that language up as to whether or not you are trying to assert an independent cause of action, or are you just throwing surplusage in there about the Supremacy Clause.

Okay. Let's try to figure out now where do we go forward on discovery, a scheduling order, and a trial date.

So you-all were good enough to send me the initial disclosures this morning. My law clerks quickly tabulated this. The plaintiffs have identified 165 individuals. And the defendants have identified 132. That's ridiculous.

So what appears to have happened is that I think one or both sides, or I guess there's multiple sides here, some of you included like every member of the Texas legislature who voted in favor of SB 1, is what it looks like.

Now, we all know most of these legislators didn't have anything to do with the drafting. They probably didn't even know what they were voting on, except what they were told by leadership to vote on. A lot of them probably didn't even read it. So how they become persons with knowledge of relevant facts perplexes me.

Mr. Thompson, since you get all the hard questions, how do you respond?

MR. THOMPSON: I'll be happy to respond, Your Honor.

I think I can safely say on behalf of all the parties that we didn't mean to suggest all of those people would be witnesses or anything like that.

Under the Supreme Court's latest opinion in Brnovich which addressed an intentional discrimination claim and Voting Rights Act, it rejected the Cat's Paw Theory, which Your Honor may be familiar with from employment cases for determining kind of the intent of the legislature.

And so at least from my personal perspective, I think what we were trying to say there is to the extent there are intentional discrimination claims one can't just establish it by the alleged intent of a bill sponsor or a leader, or something like that.

THE COURT: So we need to get reasonable about how many people need to be deposed. So you-all are to file amended initial disclosures and clearly delineate the Tier 1, Tier 2 individuals, for lack of a better phrase, and Tier 2 being just mere legislators who voted who didn't have anything to do with the drafting of this bill or any amendments, or anything like that.

And so those people need to be listed, if you want to list them, as a Tier 2 group so we have a better understanding of who the Tier 1 group is, because by listing everybody, and I'm not saying anybody is doing this, but somebody could be hiding a person with great knowledge of relevant facts in this laundry list of 165 or 132. So we'll have none of that.

So let's file amended initial disclosures within ten days. Exchange with each other. And then I want to see also, so file those with the court. And so --

MR. ENNIS: Your Honor, may I add one thing on that? This is Chad Ennis for Medina County.

Another thing, your clerks may have missed it in the big pile of initial disclosures they received, but there are several designations for things like "All of the witnesses that testified at the hearings for these bills."

And that is literally hundreds of people without any designation of who they are. You know, if there are specific people who testified that they are interested in calling as witnesses, I think they should just identify the people. And we'd ask that that go into the exchange in ten days as well.

THE COURT: So, thank you, Mr. Ennis.

So let's figure out for Rule 26(a)(1) disclosure purposes the mere public speakers who attempted or did actually speak at any committee hearings for this legislation, to the extent that they are aggrieved individuals, or individuals injured by any, and who are claiming to be part of the associational standing, I could see where those have knowledge of relevant facts.

So Mr. Ennis raises a good point. Asterisk who those people are. But, yeah, a broad designation like that is -- let's even put those like into the third tier group. Put Tier 1 -- Tier 1, what I'm really interested in, is who really needs to be deposed first, because we're going to have to phase discovery here, given the large amount of folks at issue here.

And so if -- to the extent you are relying on some broad categories like that, let's put names and then better descriptors as Mr. Ennis is suggesting.

Anybody else with a good suggestion on that?

MR. MORALES DOYLE: Your Honor, I would just -- this is Sean Morales Doyle on behalf of LUPE plaintiffs.

I would just say that we did not make a broad disclosure like that, but that there are, we believe, folks who offered testimony in committee hearings on Senate Bill 1 outside of our clients and folks who would be aggrieved by the law that have relevant information, especially to the extent that the legislators, who are proponents of Senate Bill 1 relied upon or cited to facts that were put to them by folks in committee hearings in justifying their passage of this bill.

I think -- so I just want to say that I don't think -- I think that there are folks who testified at those hearings who have information relevant to the claims in our case outside of the type of information that you mentioned there.

THE COURT: And that's fair. And so those are -- you know, properly should be disclosed as 26(a)(1), but let's at least put some descriptors here so we know who we are talking about and what they said and where they said it, so we all know why they are there.

Okay. Now --

MS. OLSON: Your Honor, this is Wendy Olson on behalf of Mi Familia Vota plaintiffs.

Your direction was to do this in ten days. I'm wondering if we could have until that Monday, November 29th, because ten days is Friday, the 26th, which is the day after Thanksgiving and I know people have travel plans, but I would just make that request.

THE COURT: That's fair. The 29th it is.

Okay. With that said, I guess I was initially under the impression that we were going to be under a much more expedited schedule, but it seems that the plaintiffs are going to want to have the March primary come and go with no injunctive relief requested from this Court.

Am I correct in that understanding?

MR. SWEETEN: Your Honor, this is Patrick Sweeten with the State defendants.

I want to just say that that was an assumption upon which this schedule that we outlined, which I think is a compressed final trial schedule that we based it on, and we had discussions both -- we had two discussions I believe with all of the plaintiffs and they said as much.

And we had a discussion with the Department of Justice and they indicated it was not their intention to bring forward a preliminary injunction.

So, you know, the negotiations that took place back and forth on those issues are predicated upon that assumption. So I think I can answer that for the group because that's certainly what we were told and what we affirmed.

THE COURT: And so that's why I want to confirm this.

So again, some plaintiff groups speak up. Is that the understanding or not?

MR. MORALES DOYLE: On behalf of LUPE plaintiffs, it is correct that we are not planning to pursue preliminary injunctive relief prior to the March primary.

I do just want to say that it is not that we would like to see the March primary come and go without relief in this case, but for a variety of reasons we think it's important that the Court have a full trial record before it is deciding these claims, and given the time frame that we're working on in this case and the amount of evidence that we've already discussed we're going to need to be compiling, that's the decision that we've made at this point.

THE COURT: So then in terms of a scheduling order, if the plaintiff groups want to develop facts about what takes place in the March primary and what issues take place with regard to the ability of your constituents to vote, I mean, that's going to be yet another round of discovery that the State defendants are going to be entitled to discover on.

And so how is it that you see a March primary, fact discovery now on the March primary, dispositive motions being filed, and then a trial date, as you're suggesting in July. How does all that happen?

MR. MORALES DOYLE: Well, Your Honor, I think it will be a whole lot of work. I think all of us have -- we have set the -- we have proposed a discovery close deadline that is after the March primary in order to allow for discovery to continue, but we have also proposed an expert discovery time line that contemplates the majority of expert discovery happening prior to that March primary in order to not have all of this happening at the very end of the case.

I think the evidence that comes out of the March primary, of course none of us knows what it's going to be at this point, but I think we also know that how -- the evidence that comes out of the March primary is not going to be all the evidence in this case.

There's going to be probative on some points, certainly not on others, as primaries are, you know, different than general elections, so we are trying to build a plan that allows for a great deal of hopefully the majority of discovery to happen early in this case but also allows for the parties to take into account what does in fact happen in the first set of elections under SB 1 in March.

We understand that will make things very difficult for all of us, including Your Honor, after the March primary, but we think it is incredibly important that the final resolution of this case before Your Honor happens with enough time for any appeal and any further proceedings after the trial to be resolved in time for the November primary.

And in light of Supreme Court precedent about changes to elections in advance of an election -- excuse me -- the November general election, we think it is crucial that the trial happen earlier in the year so that we have time to sort everything out and come to a final resolution of this case before November to make sure that voters in the State of Texas have their rights protected and that it's a fair election.

THE COURT: Does any other plaintiff group wish to speak in addition to the comments Mr. Morales already made?

Mr. Sweeten.

MR. SWEETEN: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: So I mean, the plaintiffs are asking me to do a heck of a -- and everybody, to do a heck of a lot of work in a short period of time. I'm willing to put the effort in.

I mean, is there any dispositive motions you see that could be filed without the benefit of discovery that's just a strictly legal issue that at least we don't have everything having to be decided, argued, briefed, and ruled upon at the end?

MR. SWEETEN: Your Honor, I think so.

I think there could be some motions for summary judgment.

Let me address the overall schedule which is, you know, they have indicated and we have indicated to the Court, and this is the very reason why we don't agree to set a trial date on July 5th at this point, which is that we have agreed to a very truncated discovery process.

We think that, you know, we're going to give it our best shot. We -- you know, if we start getting a bunch of late disclosures of fact witnesses, you know, that could change that.

I can tell you, and this is likely an issue that you're going to want to -- you know, you may want to talk to us about later, but certainly my recent discussions with the DOJ have certainly brought to question, you know, whether or not we are going to be able to make this schedule go. But that's the very reason.

We are planning to -- there is an awful lot of work. The first step is the motions to dismiss. And as the Court is saying, you know, get these complaints. Tell us what is the complaint. Well, what is the specific statutory problem?

They're apparently not going to agree to a uniformed complaint, which I think would really, you know, make this, you know, be a lot easier and increase the potential to meet this schedule.

But we think that, you know, we're hopeful we can meet this schedule. We do think that there will be some issues that may be subject to judgment as this goes along. But that's, you know, one of the reasons that we think that maybe we wait until, you know, we wait to set the trial date to see if we're actually going to be able to work through this schedule.

But you know, we're giving our best shot, based on their, you know, representation to us. There's not a preliminary injunction, you know, proceeding. We're trying to make this work. And I think this Court is doing -- I think this is great -- a great service.

As the Court knows in our redistricting challenges, when you have multiple --

THE COURT: Let's not bring that up.

MR. SWEETEN: I was just thinking, it's been four years, I think, since I've seen you, Your Honor.

Anyway, I think strictures. I think making them plead what is their claim. Tell us what that is. And then I think, you know, following the orderly process of this case.

We'll attempt to, you know, give best efforts to that discovery schedule that we have laid out, but we do think that we may want to see how that's going to make a determination as to whether the trial date is -- you know, when that should be set.

THE COURT: Does the U.S. want to chime in on this?

MR. FREEMAN: Yes, Your Honor. Dan Freeman for the United States.

The United States agrees that this is an extremely aggressive schedule. In particular, the schedule anticipates that experts would be disclosed at the beginning of February.

Now, we stand ready to work to meet this schedule, however, this schedule is only possible if the parties agree to participate in discovery and not engage in dilatory tactics.

And Mr. Sweeten has advised the Court, and we advised the Court in our 26(f) report that we filed last night, that the United States has already issued a request for production to the State. The State informed us at our 26(f) conference that it did not intend to produce any documents in response to that request or database extracts as the case may be.

But they at the same time refused to stipulate to an early written formal response to that request and would allow the United States to get them out of the court and to bring a motion to compel.

And those type of delays are going to prevent the parties from being able to meet the schedule and are going to prevent the parties from being able to vindicate the rights of Texas voters, as Mr. Morales Doyle represented before.

We believe this is a separate issue that is best addressed at the -- toward the conclusion of this pretrial conference, but I'm happy to address it now.

MR. SWEETEN: Well, Your Honor, if the DOJ is going to accuse me of dilatory tactics, I'd like to address that right now. May I, Your Honor?

THE COURT: No. One sec.

I think most people on the screen know me. I don't want to dwell on fights. I want to move the thing forward.

So I know you don't like the moniker, and I would take offense if someone said that to me too, but let's just move forward.

So just like I'm trying to tell the plaintiffs, file an amended complaint, and I'm telling them, and I'm telling everybody, file amended 26(a)(1) disclosures, motions to compel, none of us have time to fight over motions to compel.

Now, if the government is going to assert -- the government -- the State defendants are going to assert legislative privilege or some other privilege, let's talk privilege logs. Have you-all talked about how you're going to do a privilege log?

MR. SWEETEN: Your Honor, to my knowledge, there's been no discussion about a privilege log with any of the parties, that I know of.

THE COURT: Is that the basis of where you think you're not going to be able to cooperate on the U.S.'s request for documents? Is that --

MR. SWEETEN: Your Honor, I thought you didn't want me to address that, but I think I need to because counsel, you know, seems to be indicating that we're saying, "We're not giving you any documents." That's not what we're saying.

What happened, Your Honor, is that on November 4th the DOJ filed a lawsuit. We received last Friday a request, not for just documents, we received a request for an entire database from the DPS, which has 29 million people that are on there. They also asked for the --

THE COURT: One second.

The DPS, Texas Department of Public Safety?

MR. SWEETEN: Yeah. They asked for the entirety -- well, I shouldn't say the entirety. They asked for a number of data fields from DPS. They asked for the 17 million entry TEAM's database from SOS.

They have asked for two databases because -- and we're still -- we're going to have a lot of discussions about this with opposing counsel because this is a breathtaking request. The only time in the history of DPS that they have given this up was when Mr. Freeman and DOJ sued us under Section 5, which would have been the spring of 2012, and then the carryover litigation was the Section 2 litigation.

So what we're going to address, Mr. Freeman's request, which he sent last Friday, we've basically had all of -- you know, it was Friday evening. We've had all of two business days.

We've been trying to get information about those databases but it is a sweeping request made in the eleventh -- you know, after we have had multiple discussions with these plaintiffs to get a large amount of data, including data from senators, you know, politicians, federal judges, state judges. That's all on the DPS voter databases.

So we have got a lot of issues to work through, but this was sprung upon us in a call last week when he said, "We're going to ask for the databases." And I said "No."

And, you know, we're looking and evaluating the request that we got on Friday. It is going to take experts from both of those agencies to come in and explain what would be, you know, possible, what would be, you know, a really hard lift, but that by itself, asking for database extracts, which has a long process, which I can go through --

THE COURT: No. That's okay. One second. One second.

So let me go back to the United States. What's the relevance of the data?

MR. FREEMAN: Sure, Your Honor.

SB 1 requires individuals who wish to cast a mail ballot to list their identification number on their mail ballot request, as well as their mail ballot carrier envelope.

And SB 1 requires that early voting clerks shall reject any mail ballot application that doesn't include an identification number, if that individual has been issued an identification number that does not identify the same voter identified in the applicant's application for voter registration.

Now, the problem with this is that TEAM does not necessarily contain every voter's up-to-date driver's license number. There are voters who --

THE COURT: Let's --

MR. FREEMAN: TEAM. Excuse me, Your Honor. TEAM is the state's voter registration database.

THE COURT: Thank you.

MR. FREEMAN: Now, the problem, Your Honor, is that in some cases the voter may have registered to vote soon after moving to Texas while they still had an out-of-state driver's license and listed a social security number on their voter registration application.

They then obtain a Texas driver's license. They list their Texas driver's license number on their mail ballot application as instructed, and then their application for a mail ballot will be rejected because it doesn't match what was on their voter registration application.

Now, what the United States seeks to -- and that rejection violates Section 101 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the materiality provision.

Now, what the United States intends to do is quite similar to what the United States did in Texas v Holder when the State of Texas sued the United States under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act, and in Veasey v Abbott, where United States, among several private plaintiff groups sued the State under Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act.

The State has produced these database extracts twice before, in terms of DPS. In terms of voter registration database, the State has produced that database to the United States previously outside of litigation, as it's subject to production upon demand by the Attorney General under Title 3 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

The State has also produced voter registration database to the United States in both of those cases.

Experts are then able to compare those two databases to determine where there are voters on the voter registration database who do not have their proper driver's license listed.

It is my understanding that there are also voters in the DPS databases who have multiple driver's license numbers listed, because it's possible to have an identification card and a driver's license over the course of your life. They will not know which one of those numbers is in the voter registration database and will be disenfranchised as a result.

It is possible that individuals who have surrendered their driver's license and no longer have that document to be able to provide that number as SB 1 requires, and they will be disenfranchised as a result.

And so the United States is asking the State to do exactly what it did twice before in litigation, once where it sued the United States, and once where the United States sued the State. Both times where the State enacted legislation that put these driver's license numbers at issue in a restriction on the right to vote.

THE COURT: So let me suggest this here.

Let me -- can the government achieve what it's attempting to achieve by merely sending out requests for admission, asking the State to admit that there are these following discrepancies that you just identified, and then sending out an interrogatory by asking them to identify how many times these kind of occurrences have occurred?

And then in the event that they refuse to do so or claim it's unduly burdensome or whatever, then you come back and asking to do -- to get the databases and do the work yourself.

Go ahead.

MR. FREEMAN: Your Honor, I'm not certain that the State would be willing or able to conduct this analysis with the sort of degree of accuracy and expertise that the experts that the United States has retained have been able to do in the past.

Courts have relied on experts retained by the United States when conducting this sort of match during a Veasey litigation, a voter right litigation. The State opposed an alternative algorithm for matching the voter file to DPS files. The State ultimately abandoned that algorithm, as it determined -- well, I won't speak for the State.

The State abandoned the algorithm that it had proposed, and the United States, and ultimately the court moved forward with the analysis that the United States was able to provide.

The various claims that the State has made about the burden of this production, in fact, the State has done this before. The code has been written before.

I personally at the State's request flew down to Texas to pick up a copy of the database extract in the Texas v Holder litigation so that we could address security concerns the State had. The United States is happy to agree to the same types of protective orders to address the State's concerns.

We see this as critical to the United States' claims under the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and we believe that the State's immediate assertion, the burden of the request outweighs the benefit.

One, it's contrary to the spirit of Rule 26, and the committee notes to the 2015 amendment specifically said that these type of default assertions -- I mean, immediate assertions that no discovery in response to a particular request is possible because of the burden should not be allowed.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. FREEMAN: And we're not asking the State to produce immediately. We're simply asking them to allow us to tee this up.

THE COURT: Thank you.

So at this point there's not a motion to compel before me to rule on. You-all continue to meet and confer.

I will say this, Mr. Sweeten, in light of the representations that are being made that this has happened before, any arguments of unduly burdensomeness, you're going to have a steep hill to climb to overcome that, but I'm not making any rulings.

And so, again, to the extent that you can enter into protective orders to protect the sensitivity of this information, but again this is premature for me to make any rulings. I'm not making any rulings.

MR. SWEETEN: Your Honor, let me just say. I won't argue the motion because I hear the Court.

I agree. I think right now what's happening is this issue, we're jumping the gun on this. We will have discussions with DOJ regarding this issue. I wanted to raise these concerns to the extent that they impact scheduling.

But, you know, we also just -- I want the Court to know that there is going to be a lot of interfacing with our team and experts at both of these agencies about, you know -- about these issues, and these things take time.

So we will address their discovery requests. We'll be happy to talk to DOJ about this. But overall, I think, you know, I think this is something we can deal with as this goes along, but I wanted to flag this issue to the Court.

THE COURT: No, thank you.

So now, we still -- we walked away from privilege.

To the extent that the State is not -- is going to claim privilege to any documents, I want a privilege log. And so it's going to have to articulate clearly the authors, author, or authors, plural, the recipient, or recipients, plural.

And if the author or the recipient wasn't a legislative -- a legislator, or a legislative aid, it seems highly improbable that you can in good faith articulate legislative privilege in those kind of scenarios.

To the extent that you think you can in good faith articulate legislative privilege, I want a log, and the Bates stamp, and I will review, in camera if need be, any documents subject to any privilege.

Okay. We've covered a lot today. Hopefully we're going to move things along. I'll be very disappointed if I don't get amended complaints, folks. I don't know how to make that point anymore clear.

MR. MORALES DOYLE: Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. MORALES DOYLE: I do not want to necessarily represent that I'm speaking on behalf of all the plaintiffs here, although I think I may be. We hear you. We are dealing right now with a response deadline on the motions to dismiss of this Thursday.

And so --

THE COURT: That deadline is extended for 15 days.

Hopefully that deadline will never be met and we see amended complaints well before that.

MR. MORALES DOYLE: Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. SWEETEN: Your Honor, may I get a reciprocal extension on any replies?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SWEETEN: Thank you, Your Honor.

I do think there was one issue that I don't know that we addressed to the Court, and that is the order with the deposition limitations. I don't know if the Court wants to entertain that at this point.

THE COURT: Let me backtrack here because I didn't finish off on trial now.

What I'm contemplating is setting the trial date for July right now, just so for purposes of my calendaring I can hold something as a placeholder that we can all try to aspire to.

But I will tell everybody that, you know, I will be reasonable to all parties in the event that circumstances don't allow us to meet that. But for a placeholder, that's what I'm going to set for now.

Now, with regard to numbers of depositions, until I see the amended initial disclosures I really can't say right now what I think is an appropriate first tier of discovery depositions. So once I get the initial disclosures, the amended initial disclosures then I will set a first round of deposition -- number of depositions to be had for the first tier of discovery.

MR. SWEETEN: Thank you, Your Honor.

And Your Honor, if I may just say, the one issue I think that we are -- you know, we want to be -- you know, alert the Court to, is the number of plaintiffs that are in this case.

There are -- I think the count -- it's in our filing, but there's something like 30 organizational plaintiffs and six individual plaintiffs. I think that's right.

We don't need -- you know, some are making ADA claims. Some are making others. We don't need a full seven hours for those folks, but we need the number that might be necessary to take those plaintiffs.

And so that was our concern with, you know, just picking a fixed number, because I think that judicial economy, you know, can be increased by, you know, taking a shorter deposition but not being constrained by, you know, this hard number, particularly when we're faced, you know, with basically the number of plaintiffs that they are asking to limit us to. So we're more for hours than limitations but we can certainly address that down the road if the Court prefers.

THE COURT: Yeah. Continue to meet and confer on this.

I mean, I'll tell you this, plaintiff groups, I've just completed a very difficult trial on the Sutherland Springs mass shooting case. It was at least four dozen, five dozen plaintiffs with at least two dozen plaintiffs' attorneys, and they all managed to have a unified front, and so I don't understand your reluctance to an amended complaint and you-all going forward on that basis.

Mr. Morales was very articulate about why he thought that was not feasible. It sounded real great.

But honestly, Mr. Morales, as I heard it, I mean, it sounded great, you delivered it great, but it really wasn't persuasive to me about why you-all can't join together.

I think an amended omnibus complaint will make this case go much smoother for everyone involved. And so I highly recommend that after this call you-all try to get together and try to figure that out.

MR. FREEMAN: Your Honor, may I --

MR. MORALES DOYLE: Excuse me.

THE COURT: Mr. Freeman.

MR. FREEMAN: Your Honor, I was just going to ask, do you include the United States in that request, because it would be exceedingly difficult for us to be able to confer with private plaintiffs.

THE COURT: I see that. You have a different representation to this. So I exclude the U.S. from that discussion.

MR. FREEMAN: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Who else wanted to chime in?

MR. COX: Judge, it also implicates the issue that we do have one party, Isabel Longoria, who is both a plaintiff and a defendant in the case, and how we would manage to have a unified omnibus complaint in that respect; I'm not sure.

THE COURT: Yeah. So I'm not making any rulings. I can't force you to do that. You-all continue to talk among yourselves and see what's best.

Even if you don't do an omnibus complaint, you-all really need to treat this almost as an MDL. You need to have one or two of your group serve as the lead lawyer to speak on behalf of discovery issues and so forth. We've got to make this case more manageable, and an MDL analogy makes most sense to me.

MR. MORALES DOYLE: We will absolutely discuss with one another. I want to assure you, Your Honor, that all of plaintiffs' counsel have been in touch with one another. We are not trying to make this more complicated than it needs to be and we will discuss what you proposed.

THE COURT: Okay. What have I forgotten? Anybody want to speak up?

MR. SWEETEN: Nothing from the State, Your Honor.

MR. FREEMAN: Nothing from the United States, Your Honor.

THE COURT: So I didn't give a deadline for amended complaints.

So I guess the deadline needs to be whatever date I gave you to file the response to motion to dismiss. So you either file a response to a motion to dismiss, or you file an amended complaint, by the --

Did I say the 29th? Did I give you a date or not? I don't remember.

MR. MORALES DOYLE: You said 15 days, Your Honor, which I believe would put us at December 1st. Unless that is 15 days from today, or 15 days from the deadline.

THE COURT: Let's just make this simple.

Amended initial disclosures by everybody due by December 1.

Responses to motion to dismiss or amended complaints due by December 1st.

If there's responses to motions to dismiss, then the State has 14 days thereafter to file any reply briefs.

Was that clear enough?

MR. MORALES DOYLE: Yes, Your Honor.

MR. ENNIS: May I raise one more thing, from Medina County? This is Chad Ennis.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. ENNIS: You mentioned, and I think we got sidetracked, was, is there a way to get rid of some of these claims, or at least deal with some of these claims that are purely legal claims?

And I think it may make sense for Your Honor to order us or get us to meet and confer on are there any of these claims that present purely legal issues that we can agree that we can brief early and get them to Your Honor and get them disposed of without the need for discovery or back and forth, and really kind of focus the case.

Obviously, we think omnibus pleadings would help a ton, but if we don't get that, at least we could try to focus this down on what are factual issues that we have to fight about and how do we get this thing ready for trial in July.

THE COURT: So I already ordered you-all to do that in my first order. It was in there in the laundry list.

Meet and confers are not a one-time occasion, so they can be continuing. And so continue to meet and confer on that and all the other issues. It would benefit us all, if we're going to be in this push to July, if we can take up some strictly legal matter.

Now, Mr. Sweeten, I'm not saying your side is being unreasonable, but if you start arguing that, you know, everything can be disposed of by summary judgment, well, you know, that's not going to help me either.

And so, I mean, for example intentional discrimination. You can't tee that up by summary judgment without discovery, just as an example.

And so you-all continue to meet and confer to figure out what, if any, discrete issues are solely legal issues and that I can take up earlier rather than later.

MR. SWEETEN: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Anybody else?

Okay. We'll meet again.

Thank you.
