 Arizona Secretary of State, et al.,

15 Defendant.

No. 2:22-cv-00509-SRB (Lead)

SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE BEN
 TOMA AND SENATE PRESIDENT
 WARREN PETERSEN'S MOTION TO INTERVENE AS DEFENDANTS

16 17 AND CONSOLIDATED CASES

18 Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 24, Proposed Intervenor-Defendants Ben Toma, Speaker 19 of the Arizona House of Representatives, and Warren Petersen, President of the Arizona 20 Senate (the "Speaker" and "President," respectively) move to intervene as defendants in 21 this consolidated action.

22 Counsel for Defendants Attorney General Kris Mayes and the State of Arizona and 23 counsel for Intervenor-Defendant Republican National Committee ("RNC") have indicated 24 that they do not oppose the filing of this motion and consent to the Speaker and President's 25 participation in this action as Intervenor-Defendants.

1 Arizona law recognizes that the Speaker and President have a unique interest in 2 defending the constitutionality of laws duly enacted by the Arizona Legislature and gives 3 them authority to intervene and file briefs in any case challenging the constitutionality of 4 state laws. See A.R.S. § 12-1841. Because it appears that Attorney General Mayes may 5 not fully defend the constitutionality of the two state statutes at issue in this case and thus 6 will not adequately represent the Speaker and President’s interests, the Speaker and 7 President should be allowed to intervene.

8 I. FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND.

9 This is a consolidated case which involves eight matters brought by the United States 10 of America as well as numerous private entities, such as Mi Familia Vota, Promise Arizona, 11 and the Democratic National Committee (the “Plaintiffs”). Though the Plaintiffs filed eight 12 different lawsuits, the core allegations of each lawsuit challenge the constitutionality of two 13 Arizona laws regarding voting regulations, H.B. 2492 and H.B. 2243 (the “Voting Laws”).
14 The Court granted orders to consolidate all eight cases. [See Doc. 193.] Mi Familia Vota v.
15 Adrian Fontes et al., 2:22-CV-00509, became the lead case.

16 A. The Challenged Laws

17 The Voting Laws became effective on January 1, 2023. They require certain proof 18 of citizenship and proof of residence from Arizonans seeking to register to vote and 19 implement certain consequences if a registrant fails to provide this proof of citizenship.
20 These laws also implement additional authority for election officials to regulate Arizona 21 voter rolls.

22 More specifically, under H.B. 2492, when registering to vote in Arizona, registrants 23 are required to provide proof of citizenship and proof of residence in the State of Arizona.
24 H.B. 2492 §§ 4(A),5. For proof of residence, registrants are required to provide one of the 25 acceptable forms of documents enumerated by A.R.S. § 16-579(A)(1). If an election official 26 is unable to match the appropriate citizenship information, the election official will notify

1 the registrant that they will not be qualified to vote. H.B. 2492 § 4(E). Further, election 2 officials will provide the Attorney General with a list of all those who did not provide 3 satisfactory evidence of citizenship. Id. § 7(B).

4 H.B. 2243 requires the County Recorder provide notice to registrants who have not 5 provided satisfactory proof of citizenship. H.B. 2243 § 2(A)(10). If the County Recorder 6 does not receive satisfactory proof of citizenship from the registrant within thirty-five days 7 of the notice, the County Recorder must notify the County Attorney and Attorney General 8 for possible investigation. Id. H.B. 2243 also requires the County Recorder to review the 9 voter rolls each month and purge persons who the County Recorder believes are not citizens.
10 Id. § 2(H). The County Recorder is to conduct checks among other databases, like the Social 11 Security Administration, Verification of Vital Events System, and other state and federal 12 databases the County Recorder has access to. Id. § 2(G), (I)-(J).

13 B. The Consolidated Lawsuit

14 On September 16, 2022, the State filed a motion to dismiss, alleging lack of 15 standing, ripeness, and failure to state viable claims. [Doc. 127.] The motion was briefed 16 and the Court held oral argument on December 15, 2022. [Doc. 187.] On February 16, 17 2023, the Court denied Defendants' Motion to Dismiss, finding the Plaintiffs have proper 18 standing to bring their claims and stated plausible claims for relief. [Doc. 304.] The State 19 and the RNC filed answers to most of the complaints on or about March 17, 2023. [Doc.
20 317-329.]

21 On March 23, 2023, the Court held a Rule 16 Scheduling Conference. At the 22 Conference, the Court informed the parties this case would be on a fast track for discovery.
23 The Court ordered dispositive motions due by May 1, 2023 and discovery be due by July 24 14, 2023. [Doc. 338.]

1           C. Proposed Intervenors

2           Ben Toma is the Speaker of the Arizona House of Representatives and Warren 3 Petersen is the President of the Arizona Senate. The Speaker and the President seek to 4 intervene in their official capacities, and on behalf of their respective legislative chambers, 5 which together comprise the Fifty-Sixth Legislature of Arizona. Each chamber has passed 6 rules authorizing its presiding officer to raise and defend “any claim or right arising out of 7 any injury to the [chamber]’s powers or duties under the constitution or laws of this state.”<sup>1</sup> 8 Arizona House of Representatives Rule 4(K), available at 9 <https://www.azhouse.gov/alispdfs/AdoptedRulesofthe56thLegislature.pdf>; Arizona State 10 Senate Rule 2(N), available at https://www.azsenate.gov/alispdfs/SenateRules2023-
11 2024.pdf. Speaker Toma was a Co-Sponsor of H.B. 2492, and both Speaker Toma and 12 President Petersen voted for H.B. 2492 and H.B. 2243.

13           II. THE PRESIDENT AND SPEAKER ARE ENTITLED TO INTERVENE AS A 14           MATTER OF RIGHT.

15           Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 24 (a)(2), intervention as a matter of right is available to 16 a party who “claims an interest relating to the property or transaction that is the subject of 17 the action, and is so situated that disposing of the action may as a practical matter impair or 18 impede the movant’s ability to protect its interest, unless existing parties adequately 19 represent that interest.”

20           The Ninth Circuit employs a four-factor test to analyze intervention of right: (1) the 21 motion must be timely; (2) the applicant must claim a significantly protectable interest 22 relating to the property or transaction which is the subject of the action; (3) the applicant 23 must be so situated that the disposition of the action may as a practical matter impair or 24 impede its ability to protect that interest; and (4) the applicant's interest must be

25 _____
26 <sup>1</sup> See Ariz. Const. art. 4, pt. 2 § 8 (authorizing each house of the Legislature to “determine its own rules of procedure”).

1 inadequately represented by the parties to the action.” Wilderness Soc. v. U.S. Forest Serv., 2 630 F.3d 1173, 1177 (9th Cir. 2011) (internal quotation omitted).

3 Courts broadly construe these requirements because “a liberal policy in favor of 4 intervention serves both efficient resolution of issues and broadened access to the courts.” 5 Id. Furthermore, the Court’s intervention analysis is “‘guided primarily by practical 6 considerations,’ not technical distinctions.” Sw. Ctr. for Biological Diversity v. Berg, 268 7 F.3d 810, 818 (9th Cir. 2001). “Courts are to take all well-pleaded, nonconclusory 8 allegations in the motion to intervene . . . and declarations supporting the motion as true 9 absent sham, frivolity or other objections.” Id. at 820.

10 A. The Motion Is Timely.

11 Whether a motion to intervene is timely is based on three primary considerations: 12 “(1) the stage of the proceeding at which the applicant seeks to intervene; (2) the prejudice 13 to the other parties; and (3) the reason for and length of delay.” See U.S. ex rel. McGough 14 v. Covington Techs. Co., 967 F.2d 1391, 1394 (9th Cir. 1992). “[T]he crucial date for 15 assessing the timeliness of a motion to intervene is when proposed intervenors should have 16 been aware that their interest would not be adequately protected by the existing parties.”
17 Smith v. L.A. Unified Sch. Dist., 830 F.3d 843, 854 (9th Cir. 2016) (quotation omitted).
18 However, “hasty intervention” is not required. Kalbers v. United States Dep’t of Justice, 19 22 F.4th 816, 823 (9th Cir. 2021).

20 Here, the Speaker and President first learned that Kris Mayes would become the 21 Attorney General of Arizona on December 29, 2022, when the results of the recount 22 were released.<sup>2</sup> But this change in the administration did not necessarily mean that the 23 State would take different positions with respect to the bills at issue in the lawsuit, 24 especially given that the State’s motion to dismiss had been fully briefed and argued

25 _____
26 <sup>2</sup> See Democrat wins Arizona attorney general race after recount, Politico, <https://www.politico.com/news/2022/12/29/kris-mayes-arizona-attorney-general-recount-00075815..>

1 by that point. It is the Speaker and President's understanding that within the last few 2 weeks, however, outside counsel for the State indicated to the other parties that the 3 State would soon issue a letter to all counsel addressing what positions the Attorney 4 General's Office would take going forward. That letter has not yet been sent, and thus 5 we do not know the exact parameters of the State's position. But as a logical matter, if 6 the State simply intended to continue all the positions taken by the previous Attorney 7 General, there would be no need for such a letter.

8 In that correspondence, outside counsel for the State also offered to stipulate to 9 a stay of the enforcement of the Voting Laws pending a combined preliminary 10 injunction hearing and trial on the merits on all claims that could be decided as a matter 11 of law. The State reaffirmed this position to the Court at the March 23 Rule 16 12 Scheduling Conference. The Speaker and President would not agree to such an 13 injunction, and therefore move to intervene in order to protect their interests.

14 Based on these considerations, this motion satisfies the timeliness requirement.

15 1. Stage of the Proceedings.

16 First, the case is still in its early stages. The Court issued its orders on the State's 17 motions to dismiss on February 16, 2023 and March 17, 2023. [Doc. 304 and 316.] The 18 State and the RNC filed answers to many of the various complaints on or about March 19 17, 2023. The Court held its Rule 16 Scheduling Conference approximately one week 20 ago, on March 23, and issued its order setting discovery and dispositive motion 21 deadlines the following day. [Doc. 338.]

22 Undersigned counsel attended the Rule 16 Scheduling Conference via Zoom and 23 is aware of the deadlines, including the upcoming deadline for motions for summary 24 judgment on May 1. The Speaker and President will certainly abide by the scheduling 25 deadlines imposed in the Court's March 24 order.

26

1           Accordingly, this consideration supports intervention. See, e.g., Safari Club Int'l
2 v. Jewell, No. CV-16-00094-TUC-JGZ, 2016 WL 7786478, at *1 (D. Ariz. May 13, 2016) 3 (holding motion to intervene filed after issuance of a scheduling order and within three 4 months of scheduled merits briefing was timely).

5                           2.     Prejudice to the Other Parties.

6           Second, the existing parties will not suffer any prejudice from the Speaker and 7 President's intervention. To be clear, the only relevant "prejudice" in an intervention 8 analysis is that which arises from the intervenor's failure to timely intervene after he 9 should have known that his interests were not adequately represented. Kalbers, 22 10 F.4th at 825. The mere fact that adding another party might make resolution of the case 11 "more difficult does not constitute prejudice." Id.

12           Again, this case is still in its early stages and summary judgment briefing has 13 not yet started. The Speaker and President are willing to comply with the existing case 14 deadlines set by the court, which militates against a finding of prejudice. See id. at 826 15 (finding that there was no prejudice where intervenor "offered to comply with this 16 existing summary judgment briefing schedule).

17                           3.     Reason for and Length of Delay

18           Lastly, there was no delay. The Speaker and the President contacted counsel and 19 began work to intervene upon learning that the State had offered to stipulate to an 20 injunction enjoining the enforcement of the Voting Laws pending a preliminary 21 injunction hearing and final trial on the merits. In these circumstances, the motion is 22 timely. See Kalbers, 22 F.4th at 825 (intervention motion filed "just a few weeks" after 23 notice of inadequate representation was timely); Smith, 830 F.3d at 853, 856 (intervention 24 motions filed more than two months after learning of inadequate representation were 25 timely).

26                           B.     The President and Speaker Have Protectable Interests in the                                   Litigation.

1           The second Rule 24 factor concerns whether the intervenor has a significantly 2 protectable interest in the action. The Ninth Circuit has held that “Rule 24(a)(2) does not 3 require a specific legal or equitable interest.” Wilderness Soc., 630 F.3d at 1179. Rather, the 4 “‘interest’ test is primarily a practical guide to disposing of lawsuits by involving as many 5 apparently concerned persons as is compatible with efficiency and due process.” Id.
6 (citation omitted). “[I]t is generally enough that the interest is protectable under some law, 7 and that there is a relationship between the legally protected interest and the claims at issue.” 8 Id. (quotation omitted). In sum, an intervenor has a sufficient interest “if it will suffer a 9 practical impairment of its interests as a result of the pending litigation.” Id. (quotation 10 omitted). Here, the Speaker and President easily meet this standard.

11           Pursuant to A.R.S. 12-1841(A), the Speaker and the President “shall be entitled 12 to be heard” “[i]n any proceeding in which a state statute . . . is alleged to be 13 unconstitutional.” Section 12-1841(D) further authorizes the Speaker and the President 14 to “intervene as a party” and file briefs in any such case. To that end, Section 12-1841 15 requires notice to be served upon the Speaker and President when constitutional 16 challenges are made. In addition, the Arizona State Senate and the Arizona House of 17 Representatives have authorized the Speaker and President to bring claims on behalf 18 of their respective bodies as a whole. Arizona House of Representatives Rule 4(K); 19 Arizona State Senate Rule 2(N). In short, Arizona law and the rules of the House and 20 Senate expressly empower the Speaker and the President to defend duly enacted 21 Arizona laws against constitutional claims.

22           In Berger v. N.C. State Conference of the NAACP, 142 S. Ct. 2191, 2197 (2022), the 23 U.S. Supreme Court recently reaffirmed that legislative leaders may be empowered under 24 state law to “participate in litigation on the State’s behalf . . . with counsel of their own 25 choosing.” Although some states have chosen to organize themselves to allow for a defense 26 through the attorney general alone, others have “chosen to authorize multiple officials to 1 defend their practical interest in cases like these.” Id. at 2197. In short, a State must be 2 allowed to designate its agents and may authorize its legislature to litigate on the State’s 3 behalf; the choice belongs to the State. Id. at 2202 (citing Va. House of Delegates v.

4 Bethune-Hill, 139 S. Ct. 1945, 1951–52 (2019); Cameron v. EMW Women’s Surgical Ctr., 5 142 S. Ct. 1002, 1011 (2022); Hollingsworth v. Perry, 570 U.S. 693, 710 (2013); Karcher
6 v. May, 484 U.S. 72, 75, 81–82 (1987)). This makes sense as a practical approach given 7 that, as here, an attorney general may “oppose[] laws enacted by the [state legislature] and 8 decline[d] to defend them fully in federal litigation.” Id. at 2197.

9 Judge Rayes recently granted a motion to intervene filed by the President and 10 Speaker involving similar circumstances. Isaacson v. Mayes, No. CV-21-01417-PHX-11 DLR, 2023 WL 2403519 (D. Ariz. Mar. 8, 2023). In Isaacson, the President and Speaker 12 sought to intervene to defend a challenge to the constitutionality of two state statutes 13 regarding abortions. Id. The plaintiffs opposed the intervention and argued that the 14 President and Speaker did not have a significantly protectable interest in the case. Id.

15 The court disagreed, holding that A.R.S. § 12-1841 “demonstrates Arizona has made 16 a policy decision to vest in its legislative leaders an interest in defending the 17 constitutionality of the legislature’s enactments.” Id. The court also rejected the plaintiffs’ 18 contention that A.R.S. § 12-1841 applied only to actions in state court: “[N]othing in the 19 language of § 12-1841 imposes such a limitation. To the contrary, § 12-1841(A) says it 20 applies ‘in any proceeding in which a state statute, ordinance, franchise or rule is alleged to 21 be unconstitutional[.]’ (Emphasis added.) Any means any.” Id. at *2. Accordingly, the court 22 held that the President and Speaker met all of the requirements for intervention as of right 23 under Rule 24. Id.

24 The same result is warranted here. A State “clearly has a legitimate interest in the 25 continued enforceability of its own statutes....” Cameron, 142 S. Ct. at 1011. (internal 26 quotation marks omitted). This means “that a State’s opportunity to defend its laws in

1 federal court should not be lightly cut off.” Id. This applies with special force to a state’s 2 election laws, since Art. I, § 4, cl. 1 of the Constitution commits to state legislatures the 3 right to determine the “Times, Places and Manner” of holding congressional elections. Here, 4 Arizona has authorized the Speaker and President “to defend the State’s practical interests 5 in litigation” involving constitutional challenges to state statutes. See Berger, 142 S. Ct. at 6 2202. Thus, the Speaker and President should be allowed to exercise their statutory 7 authority under A.R.S. § 12-1841 to intervene and defend the laws at issue in this case.

8 C. The Speaker and President’s Interests May Be Practically Impaired
9 Without Their Participation.

10 Once the other Rule 24 factors are met, courts often “have little difficulty concluding 11 that the disposition of [a] case may, as a practical matter, affect” an intervenor’s interests.
12 California ex rel. Lockyer v. United States, 450 F.3d 436, 442 (9th Cir. 2006).

13 Furthermore, because different officials may have “different interests and 14 perspectives, all important to the administration of state government,” the Supreme Court 15 in Berger cautioned that “federal courts should rarely question that a State’s interests will 16 be practically impaired or impeded if its duly authorized representatives are excluded from 17 participating in federal litigation challenging state law.” 142 S. Ct. at 2201.

18 To hold otherwise would not only evince disrespect for a State’s chosen 19 means of diffusing its sovereign powers among various branches and 20 officials. It would not only risk turning a deaf federal ear to voices the State 21 has deemed crucial to understanding the full range of its interests. It would 22 encourage plaintiffs to make strategic choices to control which state agents 23 they will face across the aisle in federal court. It would tempt litigants to 24 select as their defendants those individual officials they consider most 25 sympathetic to their cause or most inclined to settle favorably and quickly.
26 All of which would risk a hobbled litigation rather than a full and fair adversarial testing of the State’s interests and arguments.

As discussed above, the Speaker and President have been authorized to intervene and file briefs in cases challenging the constitutionality of an Arizona statute. The Speaker

1 and President, on behalf of their chambers, represent a unique perspective that is important 2 to a full understanding of the State's interests.

3 D. The Existing Parties Will Not Adequately Represent the Proposed 4 Intervenors' Interests.

5 Under the general standard articulated by the Supreme Court and adopted by the 6 Ninth Circuit, the burden of showing inadequate representation by an existing party "is 7 'minimal' and satisfied if the applicant can demonstrate that representation of its interests 8 'may be inadequate.'" Citizens for Balanced Use v. Montana Wilderness Ass'n, 647 F.3d 9 893, 898 (9th Cir. 2011) (quoting Arakaki v. Cayetano, 324 F.3d 1078, 1086 (9th Cir.
10 2003)). Courts consider three factors: "(1) whether the interest of a present party is such 11 that it will undoubtedly make all of a proposed intervenor's arguments; (2) whether the 12 present party is capable and willing to make such arguments; and (3) whether a proposed 13 intervenor would offer any necessary elements to the proceeding that other parties would 14 neglect." Perry v. Proposition 8 Official Proponents, 587 F.3d 947, 952 (9th Cir. 2009).

15 Here, the Speaker and President have a significant protectable interest in 16 defending the constitutionality of Arizona statutes regarding voting and elections, and 17 that interest may be impaired if they are not allowed to intervene. For example, at the 18 Rule 16 Scheduling Conference, the State was in favor of a stay of the enforcement of 19 the bills pending a combined preliminary injunction hearing and final trial on the 20 merits. The Speaker and President would not stipulate to such an injunction and seek 21 to fully defend the laws passed by the legislature.

22 For these reasons, the Speaker and President are entitled to intervene as a matter 23 of right.

24 III. ALTERNATIVELY, PERMISSIVE INTERVENTION IS MERITED.

25 Even if this Court were to find that the Speaker and President are not entitled to 26 intervene in this action as a matter of right, it should still permit the Speaker and President

1 to intervene because they satisfy the requirements for permissive intervention under Fed.
2 R. Civ. P. 24(b).

3 The Court may grant permissive intervention under Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1)(B) to 4 anyone who “has a claim or defense that shares with the main action a common question of 5 law or fact.” “[A] court may grant permissive intervention where the applicant for 6 intervention shows (1) independent grounds for jurisdiction; (2) the motion is timely; and 7 (3) the applicant’s claim or defense, and the main action, have a question of law or a 8 question of fact in common.” United States v. City of Los Angeles, 288 F.3d 391, 403 (9th 9 Cir. 2002) (citation omitted). “The district court is given broad discretion to make this 10 determination.” Perry v. Schwarzenegger, 630 F.3d 898, 905 (9th Cir. 2011).

11 When determining whether to grant permissive intervention, courts examine many 12 factors similar to those for intervention as a matter of right, including: “[T]he nature and 13 extent of the intervenors’ interest, their standing to raise relevant legal issues, the legal 14 position they seek to advance, and its probable relation to the merits of the case, . . . whether 15 the intervenors’ interests are adequately represented by other parties, whether intervention 16 will prolong or unduly delay the litigation, and whether parties seeking intervention will 17 significantly contribute to full development of the underlying factual issues in the suit and 18 to the just and equitable adjudication of the legal questions presented.” Spangler v.
19 Pasadena Bd. of Educ., 552 F.2d 1326, 1329 (9th Cir. 1977).

20 The Court should permit the Speaker and President to intervene in this action. As 21 discussed above, this motion is timely. The jurisdictional prong of the Rule 24(b) test is met 22 because the Speaker and President seek to defend federal constitutional challenges to the 23 Voting Laws. See, e.g., Venegas v. Skaggs, 867 F.2d 527, 529 (9th Cir. 1989). Finally, 24 common questions of law and fact abound, given that the Speaker and President are 25 interested in defending the constitutionality of the Voting Laws.

26
