This case is one of at least 27 filed across the country by Plaintiff John Anthony Castro, ostensibly a candidate for the Republican Party’s 2024 nomination for President of the United States, seeking to prevent former President Donald J. Trump from appearing on the ballot in next year’s primary elections. See KC Downey, Judge dismisses candidate’s lawsuit to keep Trump off New Hampshire primary ballot, WMUR9 (Oct. 30, 2023), available at <https://www.wmur.com/amp/article/new-hampshire-donald-trump-ballot-lawsuit-dismiss/45682757>.¹ Already, four district courts have dismissed Castro’s cases for lack of standing. See *Castro v.  2 Civil Action No.: 22-2176 (RC), 2022 WL 17976630, at *3 (D.D.C. Dec. 6, 2022). For 3 reasons explained below, this Court becomes the fifth.

4 I. Background

5 On September 5, 2023, Castro filed this action to enjoin Arizona Secretary of State 6 Adrian Fontes from including Trump on Arizona’s Presidential Preference Election ballot.
 7 (Doc. 1 ¶ 14.) Castro claims he is running for the Republican Party’s nomination for 8 President. (Id. ¶ 3.) He purports to bring an implied private cause of action under Section 9 3 of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution, which states:

10 No person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress, or 11 elector of President and Vice-President, or hold any office, 12 civil or military, under the United States, or under any State, 13 who, having previously taken an oath, as a member of 14 Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member 15 of any State legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of 16 any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. But Congress may by a vote of two-thirds of each House, remove such disability.

(Id. ¶ 7; Doc. 72 at 9-11.)² Castro claims Section 3 disqualifies Trump from holding the 17 ² Whether such an implied cause of action exists is debatable. Several district courts 18 have concluded that Section 3 of the Fourteenth Amendment creates no private cause of 19 action. See Castro v. Weber, No. 2:23-cv-02172 DAD AC (PS), 2023 WL 6931322, at *2 20 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 19, 2023) (“[Section] 3 of the Fourteenth Amendment does not give 21 plaintiff a private right of action to bring this case.”); Rosberg v. Johnson, No. 8:22-cv-22 384, 2023 WL 3600895, at *3 (D. Neb. May 23, 2023) (“[Section] 3 of the Fourteenth 23 Amendment does not provide any private right of action to Plaintiff[.]”); Stencil v. Johnson, 605 F.Supp.3d 1109, 1115 (E.D. Wis. 2022) (“Although the plaintiffs seek a ruling on a 24 question of federal law—whether the defendants are ineligible for membership in the 118th 25 Congress by virtue of Section 3 of the Fourteenth Amendment—that question could only 26 be raised against the defendants in their capacities as candidates for office in a proceeding 27 brought under state ballot-access laws.”); Secor v. Oklahoma, No. 16-CV-85-JED-PJC, 2016 WL 6156316, at *4 (N.D. OK Oct. 21, 2016) (finding Section 3 of the Fourteenth 28 Amendment does “not provide any private right of action”). Castro cites no persuasive authority to the contrary.

Notably, Arizona has a state ballot-access law that allows “[a]ny elector [to] challenge a candidate for any reason relating to qualifications for the office sought as prescribed by law[.]” A.R.S. § 16-351(B). The Arizona Supreme Court recently concluded that § 16-351(B) “is not the proper proceeding to initiate a . . . challenge” under Section 3 of the Fourteenth Amendment. Hansen v. Finchem, No. CV-22-0099-AP/EL, 2022 WL 1468157, at *1 (Ariz. May 9, 2022). Hansen, however, is an unpublished decision order that does not qualify as binding precedent under Arizona Supreme Court Rule 111(c).
 What’s more, the decision appears to have been based on the belief that Section 3 of the Fourteenth Amendment is a disqualification from holding office, rather than a qualification for holding one, and that there is a material difference between the two. Id. For reasons

1 office of President because Trump gave aid and comfort to insurrectionists on January 6, 2 2021. (Doc. 1 ¶¶ 8-12.) Castro alleges that, as a fellow candidate for the Republican Party’s 3 presidential nomination, he will suffer “competitive injury in the form of a diminution of 4 votes and/or fundraising” if Secretary Fontes allows an ineligible candidate like Trump to 5 appear on Arizona’s Presidential Preference Election ballot. (Id. ¶¶ 7, 13, 18, 20-21.)

6 On September 18, 2023, Castro filed a motion seeking a temporary restraining order 7 (“TRO”) and preliminary injunction enjoining Secretary Fontes from accepting any ballot 8 access paperwork Trump submits. (Doc. 11.) Castro also requested that the Court expedite 9 a hearing on his preliminary injunction motion and consolidate that hearing with the final 10 trial on the merits pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 65(a)(2). The Court denied 11 Castro’s motion for a TRO and set a briefing and hearing schedule on his request for a 12 preliminary injunction. (Doc. 12; Doc. 24; Doc. 25.) Subsequently, the parties stipulated 13 that Secretary Fontes would not participate substantively in this matter because Castro 14 named Secretary Fontes as a nominal defendant for the sole purpose of effectuating any 15 relief the Court might order (Doc. 33; Doc. 37; Doc. 38; Doc. 44; Doc. 45); Trump filed a 16 motion to dismiss Castro’s complaint for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction and for failure 17 to state a claim upon which relief may be granted (Doc. 30); and the Court granted a motion 18 by the Arizona Republican Party (“ARP”) to intervene, the ARP filed a third-party 19 complaint against Castro, and Castro moved to dismiss that third-party complaint (Doc.
20 26; Doc. 40; Doc. 43; Doc. 46).

21 _____
22 discussed by Judge Julius N. Richardson in his concurring opinion in Cawthorn v. Amalfi, 23 there are compelling reasons to conclude that Section 3 of the Fourteenth Amendment is a 24 qualification for office, similar to age and residency. 35 F.4th 245, 275-282 (4th Cir. May 25 24, 2022) (Richardson, J. concurring in the judgment). The Arizona Supreme Court did not 26 have the benefit of Judge Richardson’s opinion at the time it decided Hansen. But, 27 considering (1) states may enact and enforce neutral ballot-access laws designed to keep 28 ineligible candidates off the ballot, see Lindsay v. Bowen, 750 F.3d 1061, 1063-65 (9th Cir.
2014); Hassan v. Colorado, 495 Fed. App’x 947, 948 (10th Cir. 2012), (2) the plain language of § 16-351(B) does not distinguish between qualifications prescribed by state versus federal law, or between qualifications that are easy to determine (like age) versus those that might be more evidentiarily complex, and (3) in Arizona “[t]he proper method of challenging the inclusion of a candidate’s name on election ballots is through an action for injunction” under §16-351, Bearup v. Voss, 690 P.2d 790, 791 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1984), the Arizona Supreme Court might reasonably reach a different outcome were § 16-351(B) used to challenge Trump’s qualifications for office.

1 The Court held a telephonic hearing on all three motions on November 14, 2023.
2 (Doc. 61.) At Castro’s request, and with the consent of all parties, the Court consolidated 3 this hearing with the final trial on the merits pursuant to Rule 65(a)(2). (Doc. 11; Doc. 32; 4 Doc. 48.) Further, the parties agreed that no evidence would be presented during this 5 hearing. Instead, the hearing consisted of oral argument on the parties’ briefs and any 6 admissible documentary evidence submitted with them. (Doc. 24.) During the hearing, 7 counsel for the ARP confirmed that, if the Court denies Castro’s requested relief, either by 8 granting Trump’s motion to dismiss or by denying Castro’s motion for a preliminary 9 injunction on some other basis, the ARP’s third-party complaint against Castro could be 10 dismissed as moot. (Doc. 72 at 62-63.)

11 On December 4, 2023, Castro filed a motion for leave to amend his verified 12 complaint, largely to supplement his standing-related allegations. (Doc. 73.)

13 After careful consideration, the Court finds that this case must be dismissed for lack 14 of subject-matter jurisdiction because Castro lacks standing to bring his claim. This holds 15 true even with respect to Castro’s proposed amended verified complaint. Because this 16 conclusion moots Castro’s motion for a preliminary injunction and the ARP’s third-party 17 complaint, the balance of this order is devoted to the standing question and Castro’s motion 18 for leave to amend.

19 II. Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Subject-Matter Jurisdiction

20 A. Legal Standard

21 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(1) authorizes the Court to dismiss claims over 22 which it lacks subject-matter jurisdiction. A Rule 12(b)(1) motion may challenge subject-23 matter jurisdiction facially or factually. White v. Lee, 227 F.3d 1214, 1242 (9th Cir. 2000).
24 “When a defendant argues that the claims in the complaint, even if true, are insufficient to 25 establish subject-matter jurisdiction, the challenge is a facial one.” Taylor v. City of 26 Flagstaff, No. CV-19-08176-PCT-MTL, 2019 WL 5066827, at *2 (D. Ariz. Oct. 9, 2019)
27 (citing Safe Air for Everyone v. Meyer, 373 F.3d 1035, 1039 (9th Cir. 2004)). On a facial 28 challenge, the Court accepts the complaint’s material factual allegations (but not legal

1 conclusions) as true. White, 227 F.3d at 1242. In a factual challenge, the defendant disputes 2 the truth of the complaint’s allegations, which otherwise would confer federal jurisdiction.
3 Safe Air for Everyone, 373 F.3d at 1039. On a factual challenge, the Court may consider 4 evidence beyond the complaint. White, 227 F.3d at 1242. Even in the absence of a Rule 5 12(b)(1) motion, however, “federal courts are required sua sponte to examine jurisdictional 6 issues such as standing.” B.C. v. Plumas Unified School Dist., 192 F.3d 1260, 1264 (9th 7 Cir. 1999). “The party asserting jurisdiction has the burden of proof to show that the court 8 has subject matter jurisdiction.” Humphreys & Partners Architects LP v. Atl. Dev. & Invs.
9 Inc., No. CV-14-01514-PHX-JJT, 2016 WL 1535175, at *2 (D. Ariz. Apr. 15, 2016) (citing 10 Indus. Tectonics, Inc. v. Aero Alloy, 912 F.2d 1090, 1092 (9th Cir. 1990)). The Court must 11 dismiss an action for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction if it determines that the plaintiff 12 lacks standing. Id. (citing Ervine v. Desert View Reg. Med. Ctr. Holdings, LLC, 753 F.3d 13 862, 868 (9th Cir. 2014)).

14 B. Discussion

15 Trump brings a facial challenge to the Court’s subject-matter jurisdiction, arguing 16 that the allegations in Castro’s verified complaint do not plausibly establish standing. (Doc.
17 30 at 3-9; Doc. 47 at 2-5.) Such a challenge ordinarily would limit the Court to the 18 allegations in the verified complaint.³ Castro, however, urges the Court to consider 19 evidentiary materials he submitted on a rolling basis between October 12, 2023, and 20 November 16, 2023 (two days after the hearing). (Doc. 28; Doc. 53; Doc. 60; Doc. 65.)
21 The Court will examine standing based both on the verified complaint’s factual allegations 22 and on the extra-pleading evidentiary materials Castro has submitted.

23 The Constitution limits federal court jurisdiction to “Cases” and “Controversies.”

25 ³ Trump cites to Castro’s campaign finance reports filed with the Federal Election 26 Commission (“FEC”). (Doc. 30 at 7; Doc. 47 at 3 n.1.) Though these reports are not 27 attached to Castro’s verified complaint, this information falls within the scope of a facial 28 challenge because Castro’s verified complaint refers to his status as an FEC-registered candidate, provides his FEC candidate identification number, and relies on his FEC registration to support his standing allegations. (Doc. 1 at 18.) The Court “may take judicial notice of documents referenced in the complaint and matters in the public record.”
Wittbecker v. Cupertino Electric, Inc., Case No. 20-cv-06217-BLF, 2021 WL 1400959, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 14, 2021).

1 U.S. Const., Art. III, § 2. “The doctrine of standing gives meaning to these constitutional 2 limits by ‘identify[ing] those disputes which are appropriately resolved through the judicial 3 process.’” Susan B. Anthony List v. Driehaus, 573 U.S. 149, 157 (2014) (quoting Lujan v.
4 Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 560 (1992)). To have standing, a plaintiff must have 5 suffered an injury in fact—meaning one that is concrete, particularized, and actual or 6 imminent, rather than conjectural or hypothetical—caused by the challenged conduct and 7 redressable by a favorable judicial decision. Lujan, 504 U.S. at 560-61. “The existence of 8 standing turns on the facts as they existed at the time the plaintiff filed the complaint.”
9 Skaff v. Meridien N. Am. Beverly Hills, LLC, 506 F.3d 832, 838 (9th Cir. 2007).

10 Where, as here, the Court is asked to weigh in on important and novel constitutional 11 issues, “the requirement of concrete injury . . . serves the function of insuring that such 12 adjudication does not take place unnecessarily.” Schlesinger v. Reservists Committee to 13 Stop the War, 418 U.S. 208, 222 (1974). “To permit a complainant who has no concrete 14 injury to require a court to rule on important constitutional issues in the abstract would 15 create the potential for abuse of the judicial process, distort the role of the Judiciary in its 16 relationship to the Executive and the Legislature and open the Judiciary to an arguable 17 charge of providing ‘government by injunction.’” Id. at 221.

18 Castro alleges that he “will suffer a concrete competitive injury” in the form of “a 19 diminution of votes and/or fundraising” if Trump appears on Arizona’s Presidential 20 Preference Election ballot. (Doc. 1 ¶ 21.) “[A] candidate or his political party has standing 21 to challenge the inclusion of an allegedly ineligible rival on the ballot, on the theory that 22 doing so hurts the candidate’s or party’s own chances of prevailing in the election.” Drake 23 v. Obama, 664 F.3d 774, 782 (9th Cir. 2011) (quoting Hollander v. McCain, 566 24 F.Supp.2d 63, 68 (D.N.H. 2008)). Because the injury unpinning competitive standing is 25 the potential loss of an election, however, the plaintiff must genuinely be competing with 26 the allegedly ineligible candidate. See Grinols v. Electoral College, No. 2:12-cv-02997-27 MCE-DAD, 2013 WL 2294885, at *8 (E.D. Cal. May 23, 2013). For example, a plaintiff 28 cannot establish competitive standing merely by self-declaring as a write-in candidate,

1 even though write-in candidates theoretically compete with those whose names appear on 2 the ballot. Sibley v. Obama, No. 12-5198, 2012 WL 6603088, at *1 (D.C. Cir. Dec. 6, 3 2012). If a cognizable injury could be manufactured so easily, then “any citizen could 4 obtain standing (in violation of Article III of the U.S. Constitution) by merely ‘self-5 declaring[.]’” Id.

6 The facts as they existed at the time Castro filed his verified complaint do not show 7 that Castro is truly competing with Trump or will be injured in any concrete way by 8 Trump’s appearance on Arizona’s Presidential Preference Election ballot. Castro alleges 9 only that he is registered with the FEC as a Republican primary presidential candidate and 10 that he intends to appear on Arizona’s Presidential Preference Election ballot. (Doc. 1 at 11 18.) Castro alleges no facts demonstrating a campaign presence in Arizona or that he is 12 genuinely competing with Trump for contributions or votes in the state. To the contrary, 13 according to the FEC’s website, between January 1, 2023, and September 30, 2023, 14 Castro’s campaign reported a total of $678.00 in contributions ($677.00 of which was 15 donated by Castro himself; the other $1.00 is unaccounted for) and $0.00 in expenditures.
16 See Financial Summary for John Anthony Castro, available at 17 https://www.fec.gov/data/candidate/P40007312/?cycle=2024&election_full=true#cash- 18 summary (last visited December 4, 2023). Based on nearly identical factual allegations, the 19 First Circuit Court of Appeals recently affirmed the United States District Court for the 20 District of New Hampshire’s determination that Castro had not alleged a concrete 21 competitive injury. Castro, 2023 WL 8078010, at *8-9. The Court largely agrees with the 22 First Circuit’s analysis.

23 The Court reaches the same conclusion accounting for post-complaint 24 developments. On October 12, 2023, Castro filed an “Affidavit of Arizona Ballot Access 25 Qualification,” averring that he filed declarations of candidacy in Nevada and New 26 Hampshire, rendering him eligible to appear on Arizona’s Presidential Preference Election 27 ballot pursuant to A.R.S. § 16-242(E). (Doc. 28.) On November 1, 2023, Castro filed an 28 “Affidavit of Candidacy and Media Coverage,” in which he claims that he has incurred

1 unidentified and unquantified “expenses associated with campaigning in this state, 2 launched [his] own online show called the Truth Addict, and [has] digitally targeted voters 3 in this state,” and provides links to a selection of online articles that he claims are about his 4 campaign, but which actually are about his serial litigation. (Doc. 53.) On November 14, 5 2023, Castro submitted to the Court a copy of the ballot access paperwork he filed with 6 Secretary Fontes’ office. (Doc. 60.) And finally, on November 16, 2023, Castro filed an 7 “Affidavit of Ballot Placement and Arizona Expenses,” elaborating on the campaign 8 expenses he has incurred. (Doc. 65.)

9 Although this evidence shows Castro’s name likely will appear on the Republican 10 ballot in Arizona’s Presidential Preference Election, it does not convince the Court that 11 Castro is genuinely competing with Trump for votes or contributions, or that he has any 12 chance or intent to prevail in that election. Castro offers no evidence that he has Arizona 13 supporters, that he has received contributions from any voter anywhere in the country, or 14 that he would gain support or contributions if Trump could not appear on the ballot. See 15 Castro, 2023 WL 7110390, at *5 (“Castro has not provided any evidence suggesting that 16 he has voters or contributors in New Hampshire or elsewhere, or that he will benefit from 17 voter or contributor defections from Trump to himself.”), aff’d, 2023 WL 8078010, at *11 18 (“Thus, on this record, any claim that the former President’s presence on the ballot in the 19 contest at issue will diminish Castro’s votes or contributions is simply too speculative to 20 credit, even allowing for the probabilistic nature of a claim of competitive injury. And we 21 see no reason to conclude that a claim of political competitive injury that is purely 22 conjectural fares any better than a purely conjectural claim of injury otherwise does.”).

23 Instead, this evidence shows that Castro is attempting to manufacture a competitive 24 injury solely for purposes of pursuing litigation. Castro candidly admitted as much to the 25 Associated Press in an article he invited the Court to consider: “I’m not going to lie and 26 pretend my candidacy is anything more than trying to enforce the United States 27 Constitution, and that’s what I’m here to do[.]” Holly Ramer, New Hampshire’s 28 presidential primary filing period opens with candidates critical of Biden and Trump, The 2 presidential-primary-2024-5bd66ceac3df40f3b0ec7676422f40bc. This statement aligns 3 with Castro’s representations to the United States District Court for the District of New 4 Hampshire:

5 [T]he evidence indicates that Castro is creating his own injury 6 in order to manufacture standing to challenge Trump’s 7 eligibility to run for president. Indeed, by his own admission, 8 Castro declared as a candidate and paid the filing fee to show 9 the impermissibility of Trump’s presidency. He asserts that one of his goals in the campaign is “to demonstrate his legal ingenuity, ability to effectuate a national litigation strategy with minimal resources (i.e. guerrilla lawfare), and demonstrate executive leadership capabilities.”

10 Castro, 2023 WL 7110390, at *5.

11 “This practice of manufacturing standing to pursue a cause through litigation is not 12 supported by the law.” Id.; see also Clapper v. Amnesty Intern. USA, 568 U.S. 398, 422 13 (2013) (“[R]espondents lack Article III standing . . . because they cannot manufacture 14 standing by incurring costs in anticipation of non-imminent harm.”); La Asociacion de 15 Trabajadores de Lake Forest v. City of Lake Forest, 624 F.3d 1083, 1088 (9th Cir. 2010) 16 (noting that an organization “cannot manufacture [an] injury by incurring litigation costs 17 or simply choosing to spend money fixing a problem that otherwise would not affect the 18 organization at all”). Since losing his case in the District of New Hampshire, Castro has 19 continued his transparent efforts to manufacture standing for the sole purpose of pursuing 20 litigation by taking actions that attempt to remedy defects other courts identified as 21 demonstrating his lack of standing. The clearest illustration of this strategy is Castro’s 22 affidavit here regarding his campaign expenses. On October 27, 2023—the same day the 23 United States District Court for the District of New Hampshire dismissed his case for lack 24 of standing—Castro’s “campaign” purchased a digital billboard from OUTFRONT Media 25 for $4,150.00. (Doc. 65-2.) The digital billboard is located in downtown Phoenix, roughly 26 three blocks from the federal courthouse (a fact Castro took care to point out). (Doc. 65 at 27 1.) And it began running on November 13, 2023, the day before the hearing in this matter.
28 If Article III’s injury-in-fact requirement is to serve as a meaningful restraint on judicial

1 power, it must allow federal courts to recognize such shenanigans for what they are—an 2 attempt to manufacture a controversy in order to pursue a political agenda through 3 litigation.

4 Regardless of whether the Court focuses solely on the allegations in the verified 5 complaint or also accounts for post-complaint developments and evidence outside the 6 pleadings, Castro lacks standing to pursue his alleged implied private right of action 7 because he will not suffer any real, genuine competitive injury by Trump’s inclusion on 8 Arizona’s Presidential Preference Election ballot. And to be clear, the Court’s conclusion 9 is not based on political prognostication or a perception that Castro is unlikely to win.
10 Instead, it is based on a finding that Castro is not truly running for office. His campaign’s 11 raison d’être is to contrive standing in order to pursue litigation to keep Trump off the 12 ballot. Because Castro is not, in any real or concrete sense, competing with Trump for the 13 Republican Party’s presidential nomination, Trump’s motion to dismiss for lack of subject-14 matter jurisdiction will be granted.

15 III. Motion for Leave to Amend (Doc. 73)

16 In a last-ditch effort to resurrect this case after a series of other adverse rulings, 17 Castro moves for leave to file an amended verified complaint. Leave to amend should be 18 given freely “when justice so requires.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2). When assessing whether 19 to grant leave to amend, the Court considers factors such as: “(1) bad faith, (2) undue delay, 20 (3) prejudice to the opposing party, (4) futility of amendment; and (5) whether plaintiff has 21 previously amended his complaint.” Allen v. City of Beverly Hills, 911 F.2d 367, 373 (9th 22 Cir. 1990). Here, all four factors weigh against granting Castro’s motion.

23 First, Castro is not genuinely competing for the Republican Party’s presidential 24 nomination; he is transparently and in bad faith attempting to manufacture an injury for the 25 sole purpose of pursuing litigation, not to obtain redress for any concrete, non-speculative 26 injury.

27 Second, Castro unduly delayed seeking leave to amend. Trump moved to dismiss 28 Castro’s verified complaint for lack of standing on October 13, 2023, yet Castro waited

1 until December 4, 2023—over three weeks after the consolidated hearing and final trial on 2 the merits in this action—to seek leave to amend. And Castro’s proposed amended verified 3 complaint does little more than formally incorporate into the body of the pleading all the 4 evidentiary material he has previously submitted to the Court in the form of affidavits and 5 argument between October 12, 2023, and November 16, 2023. (Compare Doc. 73-1 at 9, 6 18, with Doc. 28; Doc. 53; Doc. 60; Doc. 65; Doc. 72 at 18-20.) Nothing prevented Castro 7 from seeking leave earlier.

8 Third, granting leave to amend would unfairly prejudice the opposing parties. At 9 Castro’s request, the Court expedited the preliminary injunction hearing and consolidated 10 it with the final trial on the merits. And Secretary Fontes informed the Court during a 11 September 25, 2023 scheduling conference that he would need a decision from this Court 12 by no later than December 11, 2023 to avoid disruptions to his office’s operations. There 13 simply is not time to allow Trump, the ARP, and Secretary Fontes to respond to an amended 14 complaint and to hold a new hearing before December 11.

15 Finally, Castro’s proposed amendments are futile. The beefed-up standing 16 allegations in Castro’s proposed verified amended complaint mirror the evidence 17 previously submitted to the Court in the form of affidavits. The Court already has 18 considered this information and concluded that it does not establish a genuine, concrete 19 competitive injury. Accordingly, Castro’s motion for leave to amend will be denied.

20 IV. Conclusion

21 Castro is not genuinely competing with Trump for votes or contributions, and 22 therefore is not suffering a concrete competitive injury. This is true even considering the 23 allegations in Castro’s proposed amended verified complaint. Because the Court lacks 24 subject-matter jurisdiction over this case,

25 IT IS ORDERED as follows:

- 26 1. Trump’s motion to dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction (Doc. 30) is 27 GRANTED.
- 28 2. Castro’s motion for leave to amend (Doc. 73) is DENIED.

- 3. The ARP’s third-party complaint (Doc. 43) is DISMISSED as moot.
- 4. All remaining motions (Doc. 11 and Doc. 46) are DENIED as moot.
- 5. The Clerk of the Court is directed to terminate this case.
