

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON AT SEATTLE

STATE OF WASHINGTON ET AL.,

CASE NO. 2:25-cv-00602-JHC

Plaintiffs,

V.

DONALD TRUMP ET AL.,

ORDER RE: PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT AND DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO DISMISS

Defendants.

I INTRODUCTION

Plaintiffs challenge Executive Order 14,248, entitled “Preserving and Protecting the Integrity of American Elections.” Before the Court are Plaintiffs’ Motion for Partial Summary Judgment and Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss. Dkt. ## 37 & 64. The Court has considered the parties’ motions, responses, and replies (Dkt. ## 37, 64, 103, & 113); the briefs from amici curiae (Dkt. ## 53, 72, 81, 83, 88, & 89); the parties’ supplemental briefs and responses (Dkt. ## 122, 123, 124, & 125); and the governing law. Being fully advised, the Court GRANTS in part and DENIES in part both motions.

The Court believes it should state at the outset what this case and the parties' motions do and do not concern. This case is not about whether the states, Congress, or the executive offer

1 better or worse ways to run elections. It is also not about whether the current laws governing 2 American elections could benefit from updates or modifications. And the parties do not dispute 3 the importance of fair elections. Instead, the parties' motions concern four general issues: (1) 4 whether Plaintiffs' legal challenge to Executive Order 14,248 (the EO) is justiciable; (2) if so,
 5 whether Plaintiffs have a cause of action to support their claims; (3) if so, whether the President 6 has the authority to issue the directives contained in the challenged portions of the EO; and (4) if 7 the President lacks such authority, to what relief are Plaintiffs entitled.

8 As for the first question, the Court concludes that Plaintiffs have established standing and 9 ripeness for all but one of their claims. As for the second, it determines that Plaintiffs have an 10 equitable cause of action to support their separation-of-powers claims. It thus reviews Plaintiffs' 11 separation-of-powers challenges to EO §§ 2(a), 3(d), 4(a), 4(b), 4(d), 7(a), and 7(b). As for all 12 other claims in the Complaint, the Court dismisses them without prejudice.

13 As for the third issue, the heart of this matter, the Court concludes that Plaintiffs have 14 plausibly alleged, and for some provisions proved, that the EO violates separation of powers. As 15 stated by the Supreme Court, although the Constitution vests the executive power in the 16 President, “[i]n the framework of our Constitution, the President’s power to see that the laws are 17 faithfully executed refutes the idea that he is to be a lawmaker.” Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co.
 18 v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579, 587 (1952). Accordingly, the “Constitution entrusts Congress and the 19 States—not the President—with the authority to regulate federal elections.” League of United 20 Latin Am. Citizens v. Exec. Off. of President (LULAC I), 780 F. Supp. 3d 135, 155 (D.D.C.
 21 2025).<sup>1</sup> The Court thus concludes that Plaintiffs have plausibly alleged that EO §§ 3(d) and 4(d)

 24 The Founders recognized the dangers of granting the President unilateral power over the time, place, or manner of elections, so they gave the presidency no such power. Congress

1 violate separation of powers. It also concludes that there is no genuine dispute as to any material 2 fact that EO §§ 2(a), 4(a), 4(b), 7(a), and 7(b) violate the separation of powers doctrine and are 3 therefore unlawful. The Court's reasoning and outcome accords with the opinions of the other 4 federal courts that have considered challenges to this EO.<sup>2</sup>

5 As for the fourth and final question, the Court concludes that Plaintiffs are entitled to 6 various forms of equitable relief. It thus grants Plaintiffs' request to hold that EO §§ 2(a), 4(a), 7 4(b), 7(a), and 7(b) are unlawful and permanently enjoin the named Defendants from taking any 8 action to implement or give effect to these provisions in a manner that would harm Plaintiffs. It 9 also grants Plaintiffs' request to declare that Washington's and Oregon's ballot-receipt deadlines 10 are not preempted by 2 U.S.C. § 7 and 3 U.S.C. § 1. In granting this relief, the Court seeks to 11 award Plaintiffs the complete relief to which they are entitled to under the Constitution and 12 restore the proper balance of power among the Executive Branch, the states, and Congress 13 envisioned by the Framers.

 likewise refused to delegate any such authority in creating the [Election Assistance 20 Commission]. The potential for abuse was then, as it is now, self-evident. In the words of 21 Senator McConnell, sanctioning this improper assertion of presidential power could ease 22 the way for future presidents to "carry out a complete federal takeover of American 23 elections."

 MOTION TO DISMISS - 3

II
BACKGROUND

A. The Parties

1. Plaintiffs

Plaintiffs Washington and Oregon are sovereign states of the United States of America.

Both have extensive legal codes governing elections. See Revised Code of Washington (RCW) 6 Title 29A; Oregon Revised Statutes (ORS) Title 23. These laws govern various aspects of the 7 states' elections, including voter registration, assessment of voter eligibility requirements, 8 certification of state-level voting systems, and procedures and timelines for processing ballots.

9 See generally id.

10 Plaintiffs require all voters to be U.S. citizens.<sup>3</sup> Plaintiffs also require all voters to verify 11 citizenship prior to being added to the state's voter registration rolls, typically via attestation 12 under penalty of perjury on a voter registration application form. See RCW 29A.08.010(1); ORS 13 247.171(3). Attesting to citizenship under penalty of perjury accords with the current method for 14 verifying citizenship on the national mail voter registration form (the Federal Form), adopted 15 pursuant to the National Voter Registration Act of 1993 (NVRA), Pub. L. No. 103-31, 107 Stat.

17 <sup>3</sup> Washington law states:

18 The minimum required information provided on a voter registration application in order to 19 place a voter registration applicant on the voter registration rolls includes: . . . [a] signature 20 attesting to the truth of the information provided on the application . . . and [a]ffirmation 21 of citizenship which confirms the individual is a United States citizen, in one of the 22 following forms: (i) A check or indication in the box on a voter registration form 23 confirming citizenship; or (ii) Presentation of documents as part of another government 24 transaction confirming citizenship.

RCW 29A.08.010(1).

Oregon law states:

Each voter registration card designed or approved by the Secretary of State shall describe the penalties for knowingly supplying false information on the registration card and shall contain space for a person to provide[:] . . . [a]n indication that the person is a citizen of the United States[ ] and [a] signature attesting to the fact that the person is qualified to be an elector.

ORS 247.171(3).

1 77 (1993).<sup>4</sup> A person who provides false information when registering to vote in Washington or 2 Oregon, including by falsely claiming to be a U.S. citizen, can be criminally prosecuted and 3 subject to penalties of imprisonment for up to five years, fines, and deportation.<sup>5</sup>

4 As for voting systems,<sup>6</sup> Plaintiffs “use a variety of voting systems from different 5 manufacturers.” Dkt. # 37 at 13 (citing Dkt. ## 39 at 13–14 & 40 at 6). “These voting systems 6 include tabulators, which scan ballots and count the votes for each race, and accessible voting 7 units, which provide assistive technology for voters with disabilities.” Id. Plaintiffs allege that 8 in Washington,<sup>7</sup> “any voter may use an accessible voting unit” and “at least one county uses

10 <sup>4</sup> The NVRA states:

11 The mail voter registration form . . . shall include a statement that— (A) specifies each 12 eligibility requirement (including citizenship); (B) contains an attestation that the applicant 13 meets each such requirement; and (C) requires the signature of the applicant, under penalty 14 of perjury[.]
 15 52 U.S.C. § 20508(b)(2); see also 11 C.F.R. § 9428.4(b) (setting the contents of each eligibility 16 requirement on the Federal Form, including the citizenship requirement).

17 <sup>5</sup> See RCW 29A.84.130(2), 9A.20.021(c) (maximum penalty of five years in prison, a fine in an 18 amount fixed by the court of $10,000, or both); ORS 260.715(1), 260.993(2), 161.605(3), 161.625(d) 19 (maximum penalty of five years in prison, a fine in an amount fixed by the court of $125,000, or both); 18 20 U.S.C. § 1015(f) (maximum penalty of five years in prison, a fine, or both); 8 U.S.C. § 1227(a)(3)(D)(i) 21 (defining false representation of citizenship for any purpose or benefit under the chapter as a deportable 22 offense).

23 <sup>6</sup> Federal law defines a “voting system” as:

24 (1) the total combination of mechanical, electromechanical, or electronic equipment 25 (including the software, firmware, and documentation required to program, control, and 26 support the equipment) that is used— (A) to define ballots; (B) to cast and count votes; (C) 27 to report or display election results; and (D) to maintain and produce any audit trail 28 information; and 29 (2) the practices and associated documentation used— (A) to identify system components 30 and versions of such components; (B) to test the system during its development and 31 maintenance; (C) to maintain records of system errors and defects; (D) to determine 32 specific system changes to be made to a system after the initial qualification of the system; 33 and (E) to make available any materials to the voter (such as notices, instructions, forms, 34 or paper ballots).

35 52 U.S.C. § 21081(b). Washington and Oregon have adopted similar definitions. See RCW 29A.12.005 36 (defining “voting system”); ORS 254.005(11)–(12) (defining “voting machine” and “vote tally system”); 37 OR. ADMIN. R. 165-007-0350 (2025) (referring to voting machines and vote tally systems submitted for 38 certification pursuant to ORS 246.550 as “voting systems”).

39 <sup>7</sup> Neither the Complaint nor Plaintiffs’ Motion mention accessible voting units or use of barcodes 40 in Oregon. See generally Dkt. ## 1 & 37.

1 accessible voting units that print a ballot containing a barcode that contains votes.” Id. (citing 2 Dkt. ## 39 at 13–14 & 43 at 11).

3 In both Washington and Oregon, all voting systems must receive approval from the 4 respective Secretary of State before they can be used in an election. See RCW 29A.12.050; ORS 5 246.550. In Washington, “[n]o voting device shall be approved by the Secretary of State unless 6 it[:] . . . has been tested and certified by an independent testing authority designated by the 7 United States election assistance commission [(the EAC)].” RCW 29A.12.080(5). In Oregon, 8 all voting systems submitted for certification “must be certified by the [EAC] or be examined by 9 a federally accredited voting systems testing laboratory” before being approved by the Secretary 10 of State. OR. ADMIN. R. 165-007-0350(1) (2025); see also ORS 246.550. The EAC, in turn, will 11 certify voting systems that meet certain criteria. See 52 U.S.C. § 20971. One such criterion is 12 that the system must comply with the Voluntary Voting System Guidelines (VVSGs), a set of 13 technical standards for voting systems designed and adopted by the EAC pursuant to the Help 14 America Vote Act of 2002 (HAVA), Pub. L. No. 107-252, 116 Stat. 1666 (2002). See 52 U.S.C.
 15 §§ 20961–20962, 20971. Plaintiffs attest that as of the filing of this action, “[a]ll the voting 16 systems used by counties in Plaintiff States were certified under [formerly applicable] VVSG 17 testing standards” and none “have been certified under the VVSG 2.0 testing standard” (or any 18 later standard).<sup>8</sup> Dkt. # 1 at 22.

 21       <sup>8</sup> The VVSG 2.0 testing standard, adopted by the EAC in February 2021, replaced the VVSG 1.1
 22 testing standard and is now the current federal testing standard for voting systems. See Voluntary Voting
 23 System Guidelines, United States Election Assistance Commission (Dec. 23, 2025), 24 <https://www.eac.gov/voting-equipment/voluntary-voting-system-guidelines>. The EAC is currently in the process of updating the VVSGs. See, e.g., Voluntary Voting System Guidelines VVSG 2.1, United States Election Assistance Commission, https://www.eac.gov/sites/default/files/2025-06/DRAFT\_Voluntary\_Voting\_System%20Guidelines\_Version\_2.1\_TGDC\_Member\_Review.pdf (last visited Jan. 6, 2026) (draft of the VVSG 2.1).

1 As for election dates, Plaintiffs hold general elections, including elections for federal 2 office, “on the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November[.]” RCW 29A.04.321(1); see 3 also ORS 254.056 (“The general election shall be held on the first Tuesday after the first 4 Monday in November[.]”). This date accords with the date for federal general elections set forth
 5 by Congress in the Election Day statutes—2 U.S.C. §§ 1, 7 and 3 U.S.C. §§ 1, 21.<sup>9</sup>

6 As for voting procedures, Plaintiffs are universal vote-by-mail states. See Dkt. # 1 at 12, 7 14; see also RCW 29A.40.010, .070; ORS 254.470(2)(a). This means that before every election, 8 Plaintiffs mail an official ballot to every actively registered voter in the state. But despite 9 automatically receiving a ballot in the mail, Washington and Oregon voters do not have to cast 10 their ballots by mail. Instead, they may vote by mailing their ballot to the county auditor with a 11 postmark no later than the day of the election or by: returning their ballot to their county auditor 12 no later than 8:00 p.m. on Election Day; depositing their ballot in a secure ballot drop box no 13 later than 8:00 p.m. on Election Day; going in person to a designated early voting location and

 15 <sup>9</sup> 2 U.S.C. § 1 states:

16 At the regular election held in any State next preceding the expiration of the term for which 17 any Senator was elected to represent such State in Congress, at which election a Representative to Congress is regularly by law to be chosen, a United States Senator from 18 said State shall be elected by the people thereof for the term commencing on the 3d day of 19 January next thereafter.

20 2 U.S.C. § 7 states:

21 The Tuesday next after the 1st Monday in November, in every even numbered year, is 22 established as the day for the election, in each of the States and Territories of the United 23 States, of Representatives and Delegates to the Congress commencing on the 3d day of 24 January next thereafter.

20 3 U.S.C. § 1 states:

21 The electors of President and Vice President shall be appointed, in each State, on election 22 day, in accordance with the laws of the State enacted prior to election day.

23 3 U.S.C. § 21 states:

24 “[E]lection day” means the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November, in every 20 fourth year succeeding every election of a President and Vice President held in each State, 21 except, in the case of a State that appoints electors by popular vote, if the State modifies 22 the period of voting, as necessitated by force majeure events that are extraordinary and 23 catastrophic, as provided under laws of the State enacted prior to such day, “election day” 24 shall include the modified period of voting.

1 casting their ballot during the location's operating hours; or going in person to a designated 2 voting location on Election Day and casting their ballot prior to 8:00 p.m. (or after 8:00 p.m. if 3 they were inside the voting location or in line to vote by 8:00 p.m.).<sup>10</sup>

4 Plaintiffs do not certify their election results on the day of the election, nor does any other 5 U.S. state or territory.<sup>11</sup> This allows Plaintiffs (and many other states<sup>12</sup>) to count mail-in ballots 6 received after Election Day, so long as the ballot is: (1) mailed and post-marked no later than 7 Election Day; and (2) received by the appropriate state official before certification and within the 8 state's designated time frame for receiving mail-in ballots.<sup>13</sup> See RCW 29A.60.190; ORS 9 254.470(6)(e). Plaintiffs allege that during the 2024 general election, "election officials in 10 Washington received 119,755 otherwise-valid ballots after election day that had a postmark 11 dated no later than election day" and Oregon officials received 13,596 such ballots. Dkt. # 1 at 12 13, 15.

13 In terms of election administration more generally, Plaintiffs allege (and Defendants do 14 not contest) that state-wide elections are massive undertakings, requiring significant resources 15 and planning by state officials long before the election occurs. See generally Dkt. ## 1 & 37. To certified their election results on the same day as the day of the federal election).

20 <sup>12</sup> In their amicus brief, the National Vote at Home Institute contends that "at least sixteen states, including Washington and Oregon, plus Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Washington D.C., accept mail-in or absentee ballots if those ballots are postmarked on or before Election Day." Dkt. # 88 at 10.
 21 Due to recent legislative enactments, sources indicate that it is now 14 states, plus Guam, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Washington, D.C., that accept such ballots. See Table 11: Receipt and Postmark

22 <sup>13</sup> Washington will accept ballots received up to 20 days after a general election and 13 days after a primary election. See RCW 29A.60.190. Oregon will accept ballots received up to seven days after the 23 date of the election. See ORS 254.470(6)(e).

1 help mitigate these costs, Congress has allocated substantial funds to support election 2 administration at the state and local levels. These funds include those disbursed by the EAC, 3 with Congress requiring the EAC to “make a requirements payment each year . . . to each State 4 which meets” certain eligibility criteria. 52 U.S.C. § 21001(a). Plaintiffs allege that they both 5 meet these eligibility requirements and have received regular payments from the EAC. See Dkt 6 # 1 at 22. Plaintiffs’ EAC grants have totaled over $33 million since 2020, with Washington 7 receiving more than $20 million and Oregon receiving more than $13 million. Id. Plaintiffs also 8 allege that they have benefited—and are now benefitting—from various other federal grant 9 programs designed to improve state and local elections, including those overseen by the 10 Department of Homeland Security (DHS), the Federal Emergency Management Agency 11 (FEMA), and the Department of Defense (DOD). See id. at 23–24.

12       2. Defendants

13       Defendants consist of federal officials and federal government agencies involved in 14 election administration and enforcement of federal election laws. The Individual Defendants are: 15 President Donald Trump, Attorney General Pamela Bondi, Secretary of Homeland Security 16 Kristi Noem, Secretary of Defense Pete Hegseth, Acting DOGE Administrator Amy Gleason, 17 EAC Chairman Donald Palmer, EAC Vice Chair Thomas Hicks, EAC Members Christy

1 tasked with administering the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act of 1986
 2 (UOCAVA), Pub. L. No. 99-410, 100 Stat. 924 (1986), and ensuring that uniformed 3 servicemembers and other U.S. citizens overseas are able to vote while overseas; and the U.S.
 4 Department of Justice, the agency tasked with enforcing violations of federal law, including 5 federal election law. They also include the other executive offices and agencies implicated by 6 EO 14,248—the Executive Office of the President, the DHS, the U.S. Department of 7 Government Efficiency (DOGE), and FEMA.

8 B. The Executive Order

9 On March 25, 2025, President Donald Trump signed into law Executive Order 14,248, 10 “Preserving and Protecting the Integrity of American Elections.” See Exec. Order 14,248, 90 11 Fed. Reg. 14005 (Mar. 25, 2025). The order provides that “[f]ree, fair, and honest elections 12 unmarred by fraud, errors, or suspicion are fundamental to maintaining our constitutional 13 Republic.” Id. § 1. It also states, “It is the policy of [the] Administration to enforce Federal law 14 and to protect the integrity of [the U.S.] election process.” Id. In pursuit of this goal, the order 15 directs various federal officials and government agencies to take certain actions to safeguard the 16 integrity of American elections. See generally id.

17 As pertinent to this action, EO § 2, entitled “Enforcing the Citizenship Requirement for 18 Federal Elections,” sets forth several measures to “enforce the Federal prohibition on foreign 19 nationals voting in Federal elections[.]” Id. § 2. Section 2(a) states, “Within 30 days of the date 20 of this order, the [EAC] shall take appropriate action to require . . . documentary proof of United 21 States citizenship” on the Federal Form. Id. § 2(a)(i). It also defines “documentary proof of 22 citizenship” (DPOC), indicating that § 2(a)’s DPOC requirement can be satisfied only via:

23 (A) a United States passport; (B) an identification document compliant with the 24 requirements of the REAL ID Act of 2005 (Public Law 109-13, Div. B) that indicates the applicant is a citizen of the United States; (C) an official military

1 identification card that indicates the applicant is a citizen of the United States; or 2 (D) a valid Federal or State government-issued photo identification if such 3 identification indicates that the applicant is a United States citizen or if such 4 identification is otherwise accompanied by proof of United States citizenship.

5 Id. § 2(a)(ii). Section 2 then directs various federal officials to enforce the citizenship 6 requirement: § 2(b) instructs the Secretary of Homeland Security, the Secretary of State, and the 7 DHS, in coordination with the DOGE Administrator, to take a series of prescribed actions to 8 “identify unqualified voters registered in the States”; § 2(d) directs “[t]he head of each Federal 9 voter registration executive department or agency” under the NVRA to “assess citizenship prior 10 to providing a Federal voter registration form to enrollees of public assistance programs”; and 11 § 2(e) directs the Attorney General to “prioritize enforcement” of laws “that restrict non-citizens 12 from registering to vote or voting[.]” Id. § 2.

13 Section 3, “Providing Other Assistance to States Verifying Eligibility,” sets forth 14 additional measures that federal officials must take to “assist States in determining whether 15 individuals are eligible to register and vote[.]” Id. § 3. One such measure is § 3(d)’s 16 requirement that the Secretary of Defense “update the Federal Post Card Application [(FPCA)], 17 pursuant to the [UOCAVA], to require: (i) documentary proof of United States citizenship, as 18 defined by section 2(a)(ii) of this order; and (ii) proof of eligibility to vote in elections in the 19 State in which the voter is attempting to vote.” Id. § 3(d).

20 Section 4, meanwhile, is aimed at “improving the [EAC].” Id. § 4. Section 4(a) directs 21 the EAC to 22 take all appropriate action to cease providing Federal funds to States that do not 23 comply with the Federal [election] laws set forth in 52 U.S.C. 21145, including the 24 requirement . . . that States accept and use the [Federal Form], including any requirement for documentary proof of United States citizenship adopted pursuant to section 2(a)(ii) of this order.

1 Id. § 4(a). Section 4(b) then instructs the EAC to “initiate appropriate action to amend the 2 [VVSG] 2.0 and issue other appropriate guidance establishing standards for voting systems to 3 protect election integrity.” Id § 4(b)(i). The provision clarifies that

4 The amended guidelines and other guidance shall provide that voting systems 5 should not use a ballot in which a vote is contained within a barcode or quick-6 response code in the vote counting process except where necessary to accommodate 7 individuals with disabilities, and should provide a voter-verifiable paper record to 8 prevent fraud or mistake.

9 Id. Section 4(b) also requires the EAC to “take appropriate action to review and, if appropriate, 10 re-certify voting systems under the new standards established under [§ 4(b)(i)], and to rescind all 11 previous certifications of voting equipment based on prior standards” within “180 days of the 12 date of this [EO.]” Id. § 4(b)(ii). Section 4 concludes by instructing the DHS Secretary and 13 FEMA Administrator to “heavily prioritize compliance with the [VVSG] 2.0 developed by the 14 [EAC] and completion of testing through the Voting System Test Labs accreditation process” 15 when “considering the provision of funding for State or local election offices or administrators 16 through the Homeland Security Grant Programs.” Id. § 4(d).

17 Section 5, entitled “Prosecuting Election Crimes,” directs the Attorney General to act to 18 “protect the franchise of American citizens and their right to participate in fair and honest 19 elections[.]” Id. § 5. In pursuit of this goal, § 5 instructs the Attorney General to “take all 20 appropriate action to enter into information-sharing agreements, to the maximum extent possible, 21 with the chief State election official or multimember agency of each State.” Id. § 5(a). It also 22 provides,

23 To the extent that any States are unwilling to enter into such an information sharing 24 agreement or refuse to cooperate in investigations and prosecutions of election 25 crimes, the Attorney General shall: (i) prioritize enforcement of Federal election 26 integrity laws in such States . . . ; and (ii) review for potential withholding of grants 27 and other funds that the Department awards and distributes, in the Department’s 28 discretion, to State and local governments for law enforcement and other purposes, 29 as consistent with applicable law.

1 Id. § 5(b).

2 Section 7, “Compliance with Federal Law Setting the National Election Day,” instructs 3 certain federal officials to act to implement the “Federal laws that set the uniform day for 4 appointing Presidential electors and electing members of Congress[.]” Id. § 7. Specifically, 5 § 7(a) instructs the Attorney General to 6 take all necessary action to enforce 2 U.S.C. 7 and 3 U.S.C. 1 against States that 7 violate these provisions by including absentee or mail-in ballots received after 8 Election Day in the final tabulation of votes for the appointment of Presidential 9 electors and the election of members of the United States Senate and House of 10 Representatives.

11 Id. § 7(a). Section 7(b), meanwhile, requires the EAC to “condition any available funding to a 12 State on that State’s compliance” with the ballot-receipt deadline set forth in § 7(a), excluding 13 ballots cast in that state under the UOCAVA. Id. § 7(b).

14 The EO concludes with two general provisions addressing severability and 15 implementation. Section 10 states, “If any provision of this order, or the application of any 16 provision to any agency, person, or circumstance, is held to be invalid, the remainder of this 17 order and the application of its provisions to any other agencies, persons, or circumstances shall 18 not be affected thereby.” Id. § 10. Section 11 provides “This [EO] shall be implemented 19 consistent with applicable law” and nothing in it “shall be construed to impair or otherwise 20 affect: (i) the authority granted by law to an executive department or agency, or the head thereof; 21 or (ii) the functions of the Director of the Office of Management and Budget relating to 22 budgetary, administrative, or legislative proposals.” Id. § 11.

23 The EO has not been repealed or modified since its issuance in March 2025. See generally id. Thus, apart from the injunctions discussed in part II.C below, all provisions of the 24 EO remain operative.

1 C. Other Challenges to the EO

2 EO 14,248 is currently facing two other legal challenges. The first, League of United 3 Latin American Citizens (LULAC) v. Executive Office of the President (Case No. 25-cv-00946-4 CKK), was filed in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia by three groups
5 of organizational plaintiffs. In April 2025, the LULAC plaintiffs moved to preliminarily enjoin 6 certain named defendants and their agents from taking any action to implement or give effect to 7 EO §§ 2(a), 2(b), 2(d), 7(a), and 7(b), “arguing that the President lacks the power to issue those 8 orders.” LULAC I, 780 F. Supp. 3d at 154. On April 24, 2025, the Honorable Colleen Kollar-9 Kotelly granted the plaintiffs’ motions in part and denied in part. Id. at 225. The court 10 concluded that the plaintiffs presented justiciable claims and were substantially likely to succeed 11 on the merits of their challenges to §§ 2(a) and 2(d). Id. at 203, 212. Accordingly, it granted the 12 plaintiffs a preliminary injunction as to §§ 2(a) and 2(d). Id. at 225. The court denied the 13 plaintiffs’ motions as to §§ 2(b), 7(a), and 7(b), concluding that on the record at that time, the 14 plaintiffs had not shown that they were substantially likely to succeed on the merits of their 15 claims. Id. at 206, 214, 219. In rejecting the plaintiffs’ § 7 challenge, the court noted that the 16 plaintiffs had not adequately demonstrated standing, suggesting that “the most natural parties to 17 seek an injunction against enforcement under Section 7(a) are the States themselves,” not the 18 organizations. Id. at 214.

19 The parties then cross-moved for partial summary judgment on the plaintiffs’ § 2(a) 20 separation-of-powers claim. See LULAC II, 2025 WL 3042704, at *1. On October 31, 2025, 21 Judge Kollar-Kotelly granted the plaintiffs’ motion, thereby permanently enjoining the “EAC, its 22 Commissioners, and its Executive Director, from taking any action to implement or give effect to 23 [EO § 2(a)], including taking any action based on the Executive Order to modify the content of 24 the Federal Form to require documentary proof of U.S. citizenship.” Id. at *38. The decision

1 was appealed, and as of the date of this order, is pending before the D.C. Circuit. See LULAC II, 2 2025 WL 3042704 (D.D.C. Oct. 31, 2025), appeal docketed, No. 25-5476 (D.C. Cir. Dec. 31, 3 2025).

4 The second case, California v. Trump (Case No. 25-cv-10810-DJC), was filed in the 5 United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts by 19 states' Attorneys General on 6 behalf of their states. See California I, 786 F. Supp. 3d at 371. In May 2025, the California 7 plaintiffs moved to preliminarily enjoin certain named defendants and their agents from 8 implementing EO §§ 2(a), 2(d), 3(d), 7(a), and 7(b), arguing that these provisions are ultra vires
 9 and violate separation of powers. See id. at 377–89. On June 13, 2025, the Honorable Denise 10 Casper granted the plaintiffs' motion, concluding that the plaintiffs presented justiciable claims 11 and were substantially likely to succeed on the merits of their constitutional claims. Id. at 395– 12 96. The court thus preliminarily enjoined the named defendants and their agents from 13 implementing §§ 2(a), 2(d), 3(d), and 7(b) in full, and § 7(a) as to civil and criminal enforcement 14 actions.<sup>15</sup> Id. Soon after, the California defendants moved to dismiss the plaintiffs' challenges 15 to §§ 2(a), 2(d), 3(d), 7(a), 7(b), and 4(a)<sup>16</sup> for lack of standing and failure to state a claim.
 16 California II, 2025 WL 2663106, at *1. On September 17, 2025, Judge Casper denied the 17 defendants' motion, concluding that the plaintiffs' claims are justiciable and that the plaintiffs 18 plausibly allege a constitutional violation. Id. at *13.

 21
 22 <sup>15</sup> The defendants immediately appealed this decision and as of the date of this Order, such appeal 23 remains pending before the First Circuit. See California I, 786 F. Supp. 3d 359 (D. Mass. 2025), appeal 24 docketed, No. 25-1726 (1st Cir. Aug. 1, 2025).

<sup>16</sup> The § 4(a) argument was raised for the first time in defendants' reply, but the court still addressed it as though it was part of the motion to dismiss. See California II, 2025 WL 2663106, at *3–4, 12.

1 D. The Present Action

2 In 2025, Plaintiffs filed this equitable challenge to EO 14,248 in this District. Dkt. # 1.

3 The Complaint alleges that EO §§ 2(a), 2(b)(iii), 2(d), 2(e)(ii), 3(d), 4(a), 4(b), 4(d), 5(b), 7(a),

4 and 7(b) are ultra vires, violate the U.S. Constitution, and are otherwise unlawful under the

5 NVRA, HAVA, UOCAVA, and Election Day statutes. Id. at 2. Plaintiffs now move for partial 6 summary judgment, requesting that the Court: (1) “hold that sections 2(a), 4(a), 4(b), and 7 of the

7 Executive Order are ultra vires and a violation of the separation of powers”; (2) “permanently

8 enjoin Defendants from implementing [said sections]”; and (3) “enter a declaratory judgment

9 that Plaintiff States’ ballot-receipt deadlines are not preempted by 2 U.S.C. § 7 or 3 U.S.C. § 1.”

10 Dkt. # 37 at 10, 33. Defendants cross-move to dismiss the Complaint, arguing that the Court

11 should dismiss all of Plaintiffs’ claims for lack of subject matter jurisdiction or failure to state a 12 claim. Dkt. # 64 at 1–2.<sup>17</sup>

13 Based on its initial review of the briefing, the Court directed the parties to provide 14 supplemental briefing on various topics. Dkt. # 114. Because of the lapse in government

15 appropriations, the Court temporarily stayed the case. See Dkt. ## 115 & 116. After the stay

16 was lifted, the parties filed their supplemental briefs and responses.<sup>18</sup> See Dkt. ## 122, 123, 124, 17 & 125. The parties’ motions are now fully briefed and ripe for decision.

18 The Court also received amicus briefs from Local Elections Officials (Dkt. # 53), Former 19 Republican Members of Congress (Dkt. # 72), the Republican Party of Arizona and RITE PAC (Dkt.
 20 # 81), Bipartisan Former State Secretaries of State (Dkt. # 83), the National Vote at Home Institute (Dkt.
 21 # 88), and the Brennan Center for Justice (Dkt. # 89).

22 <sup>18</sup> Because the supplemental briefing addressed the Court’s questions, the Court does not find oral 23 argument necessary. Also, Defendants did not request oral argument. See generally Dkt. ## 64 & 113.

PROCEDURAL STANDARDS

2 A. Plaintiffs' Motion for Partial Summary Judgment

3 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56 governs Plaintiffs' Motion for Partial Summary 4 Judgment (Dkt. # 37). Under the rule, summary judgment is appropriate if the evidence viewed 5 in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party shows "that there is no genuine dispute as to 6 any material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." Fed. R. Civ. P.
 7 56(a). A fact is "material" if it "might affect the outcome of the suit[.]" Anderson v. Liberty
 8 Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248 (1986). A factual dispute is "genuine" only if there is sufficient 9 evidence for a reasonable fact finder to find for the non-moving party." Far Out Prods., Inc. v.
 10 Oskar, 247 F.3d 986, 992 (9th Cir. 2001) (citing Anderson, 477 U.S. at 248–49).

11 The party moving for summary judgment bears the initial burden of showing that there is 12 no genuine dispute as to any material fact and that they are entitled to prevail as a matter of law 13 on all claims for which they seek summary judgment. See Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S.
 14 317, 323 (1986). If the moving party meets its burden of production, the burden then shifts to 15 the nonmoving party to identify specific facts from which a factfinder could reasonably find in 16 its favor. See id. at 324; see also Anderson, 477 U.S. at 250. Although the court must draw all 17 "justifiable inferences" in favor of the nonmoving party, the nonmoving party may not rely on 18 "mere allegations or denials" to create a genuine issue of material fact. Endy v. Cnty. of L.A., 19 975 F.3d 757, 763 (9th Cir. 2020) (citing Anderson, 477 U.S. at 248, 255). At the summary 20 judgment stage, conclusory, nonspecific statements in affidavits cannot create a genuine dispute 21 of material fact, and missing facts will not be presumed. See Lujan v. Nat'l Wildlife Fed'n, 497 22 U.S. 871, 888–89 (1990).

1 B. Defendants' Motion to Dismiss

2 Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 12(b)(1) and 12(b)(6) govern Defendants' Motion to 3 Dismiss (Dkt. # 64). Rule 12(b)(1) applies to motions to dismiss for lack of subject matter 4 jurisdiction, including for lack of Article III standing. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1); see also White v.
 5 Lee, 227 F.3d 1214, 1242 (9th Cir. 2000) (“Because standing . . . pertain[s] to a federal court’s 6 subject-matter jurisdiction under Article III, [it is] properly raised in a motion to dismiss under 7 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(1), not Rule 12(b)(6).”). The party invoking federal 8 jurisdiction bears the burden of proving it. See FW/PBS, Inc. v. Dallas, 493 U.S. 215, 231
 9 (1990). A defendant may contest jurisdiction through a “facial attack,” which “accepts the truth 10 of the plaintiff’s allegations but asserts that they ‘are insufficient on their face to invoke federal 11 jurisdiction.’” Leite v. Crane Co., 749 F.3d 1117, 1121 (9th Cir. 2014) (quoting Safe Air for 12 Everyone v. Meyer, 373 F.3d 1035, 1039 (9th Cir. 2004)). A “district court resolves a facial 13 attack as it would a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6): Accepting the plaintiff’s allegations 14 as true and drawing all reasonable inferences in the plaintiff’s favor, the court determines 15 whether the allegations are sufficient as a legal matter to invoke the court’s jurisdiction.” Id.
 16 (citing Pride v. Correa, 719 F.3d 1130, 1133 (9th Cir. 2013)).

17 Rule 12(b)(6) applies to motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim. Fed. R. Civ. P.
 18 12(b)(6). In considering a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, “the district court must accept all material 19 allegations in the complaint as true, and construe them in the light most favorable to the non-20 moving party.” Chubb Custom Ins. Co. v. Space Sys./Loral, Inc., 710 F.3d 946, 956 (9th Cir.
 21 2013) (citing Moyo v. Gomez, 32 F.3d 1382, 1384 (9th Cir. 1994)). It must also draw all 22 reasonable inferences in favor of the nonmoving party. Wyler Summit P’ship v. Turner Broad.
 23 Sys., Inc., 135 F.3d 658, 663 (9th Cir. 1998). “To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must 24 contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to ‘state a claim to relief that is plausible on its

1 face.”” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550
 2 U.S. 544, 570 (2007)). “A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content 3 that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the 4 misconduct alleged.” Id. (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556). Dismissal is proper only if 5 plaintiffs have not alleged a “cognizable legal theory” or there is an “absence of sufficient facts 6 alleged to support a cognizable legal theory.” Navarro v. Block, 250 F.3d 729, 732 (9th Cir.
 7 2001).

8 When evaluating a motion to dismiss, the court considers the complaint but may also 9 consider other materials, such as “documents attached to the complaint, documents incorporated 10 by reference in the complaint, [and] matters of judicial notice—without converting the motion to 11 dismiss into a motion for summary judgment.” United States v. Ritchie, 342 F.3d 903, 908 (9th 12 Cir. 2003). When parties have already briefed the question of summary judgment, the court may 13 also consider the summary judgment record in its resolution of the motion to dismiss. See Jones 14 v. L.A. Cent. Plaza LLC, 74 F.4th 1053, 1061 (9th Cir. 2023).

15 IV
 16 DISCUSSION

17 Plaintiffs seek partial summary judgment. They ask the Court to: (1) hold that EO 18 §§ 2(a), 4(a), 4(b), 7(a), and 7(b) are ultra vires and violate constitutional separation of powers; 19 (2) permanently enjoin Defendants from implementing the challenged provisions; and (3) enter a 20 declaratory judgment stating that “the federal election day statutes, 2 U.S.C. § 7 and 3 U.S.C.
 21 § 1, do not preempt Washington and Oregon’s ballot-receipt deadline laws.” Dkt. # 37 at 10, 33.

22 Defendants cross-move to dismiss all of Plaintiffs’ claims. See generally Dkt. # 64.
 23 Defendants contend that this Court lacks jurisdiction to hear Plaintiffs’ challenges to EO §§ 2(a),

1 2(b)(iii), 2(d), 2(e)(ii), 3(d), 4(a), 4(b), 4(d), 5(b), and 7(a)<sup>19</sup> because “Plaintiffs either lack 2 standing” or “their claims are not ripe.” Id. at 6. They also contend that the Court lacks 3 jurisdiction to consider Claim 6 from the Complaint—Violation of Article II, Section 3 of the 4 U.S. Constitution. Id. at 14. Defendants argue that even if this Court determines that it has 5 jurisdiction, it should still dismiss the Complaint because: (1) Plaintiffs “lack a cause of action to 6 bring any claim in their Complaint[,]” id. at 16; (2) the text of the EO forecloses Plaintiffs’
 7 challenges to §§ 2(b)(iii), 2(e)(ii), and 2(d), id. at 23, 25; and (3) the directives contained in EO 8 §§ 2(a), 3(d), 4(a), 4(b), 4(d), 5(b), 7(a), and 7(b) represent lawful exercises of the President’s 9 power. Id. at 18, 26–28, 30, 33.

10 Because Plaintiffs do not oppose dismissal of their challenges to §§ 2(b)(iii), 2(e)(ii), and 11 5(b), see Dkt. ## 103 at 47 & 123 at 7, nor their Constitutional Right to Vote and Take Care 12 Clause claims (Claims 3 and 6 in the Complaint), see Dkt. # 123 at 10, the Court dismisses these 13 claims without prejudice and declines to address them below. As for the other claims, for the 14 reasons below, the Court accepts the parties’ arguments in part and rejects them in part.<sup>20</sup>

15 A. Subject Matter Jurisdiction

16 1. Standing

17 “Article III of the Constitution limits the jurisdiction of federal courts to ‘Cases’ and 18 ‘Controversies.’” Murthy v. Missouri, 603 U.S. 43, 56 (2024); see also U.S. Const. art. III, § 2, 19 cl. 1. For an Article III case or controversy to exist, “the plaintiff must have a ‘personal stake’ in 20 the case—in other words, standing.” TransUnion LLC v. Ramirez, 594 U.S. 413, 423 (2021)

 22 <sup>19</sup> Defendants do not specifically move to dismiss § 7(b) on justiciability grounds. See generally
 23 Dkt. # 64. But as the Court can consider Plaintiffs’ § 7(b) challenge only if it has subject matter 24 jurisdiction over the claim, it addresses the justiciability of this claim in its analysis below.

<sup>20</sup> All other arguments raised in the motions and not specifically addressed in this Order have been considered by the Court but are rejected as moot, unsupported by the caselaw, or otherwise legally insufficient.

1 (citing Raines v. Byrd, 521 U.S. 811, 819 (1997)). “The party invoking federal jurisdiction bears 2 the burden of establishing” it. Lujan v. Defs. of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 561 (1992).

3 Accordingly, “plaintiffs must demonstrate standing for each claim that they press and for each 4 form of relief that they seek[.]” TransUnion, 594 U.S. at 431.

5 To establish standing, “a plaintiff must show (i) that [they] suffered an injury in fact that 6 is concrete, particularized, and actual or imminent; (ii) that the injury was likely caused by the 7 defendant; and (iii) that the injury would likely be redressed by judicial relief.” Id. at 423; see also Lujan, 504 U.S. at 560–61. “[A]n injury is ‘actual or imminent’ where there is a ‘credible 8 threat’ that a probabilistic harm will materialize.” Nat. Res. Def. Council v. U.S. EPA, 735 F.3d 9 873, 878 (9th Cir. 2013); see also Clapper v. Amnesty Int’l USA, 568 U.S. 398, 409 (2013) 10 (quoting Whitmore v. Arkansas, 495 U.S. 149, 158 (1990) (“[T]hreatened injury must be 11 certainly impending to constitute injury in fact[.]”)). Meanwhile, causation exists if the injury in 12 fact is “fairly traceable to the challenged action of the defendant[.]” Lujan, 504 U.S. at 560 13 (quoting Simon v. E. Ky. Welfare Rts. Org., 426 U.S. 26, 41–42 (1976)) (cleaned up). But 14 “[c]ausation may be found even if there are multiple links in the chain connecting the 15 defendant’s unlawful conduct to the plaintiff’s injury, and there’s no requirement that the 16 defendant’s conduct comprise the last link in the chain.” Mendia v. Garcia, 768 F.3d 1009, 1012 17 (9th Cir. 2014) (citing Bennett v. Spear, 520 U.S. 154, 168–69 (1997)). As for redressability, the 18 plaintiff must show that a favorable judicial decision will relieve them of a discrete injury. See 19 Massachusetts v. E.P.A., 549 U.S. 497, 525 (2007) (citing Larson v. Valente, 456 U.S. 228, 244 20 n. 15 (1982)). But redressability can be found even if a favorable ruling will not provide the 21 plaintiff with total relief. Id.

22 The party asserting standing must support each element “in the same way as any other 23 matter on which the plaintiff bears the burden of proof, i.e., with the manner and degree of 1 evidence required at the successive stages of the litigation.” Lujan, 504 U.S. at 561. On a 2 motion to dismiss, “general factual allegations of injury resulting from the defendant’s conduct 3 may suffice [to establish standing.]” Id. On a motion for summary judgment, the plaintiff must 4 “set forth by affidavit or other evidence specific facts which for purposes of the summary 5 judgment motion will be taken to be true.” Id. (internal quotation marks and citations omitted).

 6 If “the plaintiff does not claim to have suffered an injury that the defendant caused and the court 7 can remedy, there is no case or controversy for the federal court to resolve[,]” and the claim must 8 be rejected. TransUnion, 594 U.S. at 423 (quoting Casillas v. Madison Ave. Assocs., Inc., 926 9 F.3d 329, 333 (7th Cir. 2019)).

10 Here, the parties address standing in connection with both motions: Defendants say that 11 the Court should not grant Plaintiffs summary judgment and should dismiss most of Plaintiffs’ 12 claims for lack of standing. See Dkt. # 64 at 5–16. The Court addresses standing for each such 13 claim below.

14 a. Voter Eligibility Requirements (§§ 2(a), 2(d), 3(d), 4(a))

15 (1) Section 2(a)

16 Plaintiffs have established the three elements of Article III standing for their challenge to 17 EO § 2(a).

18 Plaintiffs have shown that § 2(a) will cause concrete and particularized injuries to their 19 proprietary interests<sup>21</sup> that are actual or imminent. Plaintiffs state that § 2(a) will: (1) require 20 state voter registration agencies to “make time-consuming and costly changes to their voter 21 registration processes”; (2) “increase the time required to assist applicants for public assistance”;

22

23 <sup>21</sup> Courts have recognized injury to proprietary interests as a valid basis for standing in suits by 24 states against the federal government. See, e.g., Kentucky v. Biden, 23 F.4th 585, 601–02 (6th Cir. 2022) (holding that states likely had standing to sue the federal government based on harm to their proprietary and sovereign interests).

(3) require Washington election officials “to spend approximately $237,000 to reprogram the State’s voter registration database”; and (4) require state and local election officials to spend considerable time and expend millions of dollars to assist voters and resolve the confusion created by the new DPOC requirement. Dkt. # 37 at 15–16 (citing Dkt. ## 39 at 8, 11, 42 at 3–6, 43 at 6–7, 44 at 2, 46 at 3–5, & 48 at 4–5). Plaintiffs also state that these injuries are imminent, as implementing § 2(a)’s “DPOC requirement will require extensive administrative planning well in advance of [the] election[,]” thereby requiring states to begin preparing to implement DPOC now. Id. at 16 (citing Dkt. ## 40 at 3, 42 at 4, 43 at 4–5, & 44 at 2). Plaintiffs have supported these assertions with evidence in the form of declarations by various state and local officials involved in election administration and voter registration activities. See Dkt. ## 38–48. Plaintiffs have thus met their burden at the summary judgment stage of setting forth “specific facts” to demonstrate injury in fact based on harm to their proprietary interests. See Lujan, 504 U.S. at 561.

Plaintiffs have also shown that § 2(a) will cause concrete and particularized injuries to their sovereign interests<sup>22</sup> that are actual or imminent. The Constitution expressly grants states a sovereign interest in regulating “[t]he Times, Places and Manner” of holding elections for federal office. U.S. Const. art. I, § 4, cl. 1; see also id. art. II, § 1, cl. 2. Based on this constitutional grant of authority, Plaintiffs have enacted laws regulating the time, place, and manner of elections within their states, including laws about citizenship verification. See RCW 29A.08.010(1); ORS 247.171(3). As § 2(a) directly interferes with Plaintiffs’ sovereign interests

<sup>22</sup> Courts have recognized injury to sovereign interests as a valid basis for standing in suits by states against the federal government. See, e.g., Washington v. U.S. Food & Drug Admin., 108 F.4th 1163, 1176 (9th Cir. 2024) (recognizing harm to sovereign interests as a basis for a state to assert standing in a suit against the federal government); Arizona v. Yellen, 34 F.4th 841, 851 (9th Cir. 2022) (recognizing standing for a state based on injury to its sovereignty); Kentucky, 23 F.4th at 601–02 (holding that states likely had standing to sue the federal government based on harm to their proprietary and sovereign interests).

1 in regulating the times, places, and manner of holding elections for federal office, Plaintiffs have 2 met their burden of proving injury in fact based on harm to their sovereign interests.

3 Defendants have provided no evidence to contradict Plaintiffs' claims that § 2(a) will 4 cause injury to their proprietary and sovereign interests. See generally Dkt. ## 64 & 113.
5 Instead, Defendants say that Plaintiffs have not established injury in fact because they have 6 failed to demonstrate that their alleged injuries are "actual or imminent." Specifically, 7 Defendants claim that because there is no "final agency action" and § 2(a) "contemplates [ ]" 8 future action" by the EAC, Plaintiffs have failed to establish sufficiently definite injuries to give 9 rise to Article III standing. See Dkt. # 64 at 6-7.

10 Defendants' argument, however, is misguided. Contrary to their contention, § 2(a) does 11 more than "contemplate" future action by the EAC, see id. at 6, or merely instruct the EAC to 12 add a DPOC requirement to the Federal Form "if it determines such a requirement is necessary" 13 after engaging in notice-and-comment-rulemaking. See Dkt. # 113 at 3. By its very terms, 14 § 2(a) states that within 30 days, the EAC "shall take appropriate action to require . . .
15 documentary proof of United States citizenship" on the Federal Form. EO 14,248 § 2(a)(i) 16 (emphasis added). By using the terms "shall take" and "to require," § 2(a) does more than 17 suggest that the EAC should begin to consider whether it should incorporate DPOC: it mandates 18 "in no uncertain terms" that the EAC "take action to require documentary proof of citizenship on 19 the Federal Form." LULAC I, 780 F. Supp. 3d at 184. Also, by explicitly including a list of 20 documents that satisfy the DPOC requirement in § 2(a)(ii), the EO "leaves no uncertainty about 21 what it requires from the EAC" nor what the DPOC requirement will look like if § 2(a) is 22 implemented. Id. at 185.

23 As noted by Plaintiffs, it is § 2(a)'s mandatory language and the nature of the DPOC 24 requirement itself, not the uncertain outcome of a future notice-and-comment rulemaking, that is

1 the source of Plaintiffs' injuries. See Dkt. ## 37 at 15–17 & 103 at 17. Additionally, as 2 Plaintiffs are bringing a non-statutory, equitable challenge to § 2(a), see part IV.B below, the 3 lack of a “final rule” or “final agency action” is irrelevant to Plaintiffs’ Article III standing to 4 challenge § 2(a).<sup>23</sup> Plaintiffs’ claimed injuries from § 2(a) are thus “certainly impending,” 5 thereby satisfying Article III’s imminence requirement. See Clapper, 568 U.S. at 409.<sup>24</sup>

6 Plaintiffs have also established the other two elements of Article III standing: causation 7 and redressability.<sup>25</sup> Plaintiffs have shown that their sovereign and proprietary injuries are 8 “fairly traceable” to the EO, as these injuries stem directly from § 2(a)’s mandate that the EAC
 9 add a DPOC requirement to the Federal Form. Plaintiffs have also satisfied the redressability 10 requirement, as Plaintiffs have shown that a permanent injunction against § 2(a) would eliminate 11 the need for Plaintiffs to make changes to their voter registration systems and implement voter 12 education campaigns, thereby eliminating their proprietary harms. The requested injunction 13 would also eliminate the harm to Plaintiffs’ sovereign interests, as it would restore Plaintiffs’ 14 power to regulate the time, place, and manner of elections, subject only to limitations by

 18 <sup>23</sup> Plaintiffs do not bring an APA challenge to § 2(a) (nor to any other provision of the Executive 19 Order). See generally Dkt. ## 37, 103, & 123. Defendants’ cited case, Texas v. Equal Emp. Opportunity 20 Comm’n, 933 F.3d 433 (5th Cir. 2019), is therefore inapt. That case involved an APA challenge to a 21 guidance document issued by an executive agency, but Plaintiffs’ case involves a non-statutory, equitable 22 challenge to an executive order issued by the President. Thus, while the existence of a “final agency 23 action” was critical to the Fifth Circuit’s analysis in Texas (and to APA review more generally), see id. at 24 441; see also 5 U.S.C. § 704, it is irrelevant to the Court’s ability to review Plaintiffs’ challenge to § 2(a).

<sup>24</sup> The DOJ’s position in other litigation, as well as the EAC’s actions both before and after the 25 preliminary injunction in LULAC I, also support Plaintiffs’ claim of imminent harm. See, e.g., Dkt. # 38-1 at 4–8 (DOJ lawyer confirming that “the bottom line” of § 2(a) is that DPOC will be added to the 2 state official describing communications between the EAC executive 3 director and state election officials regarding updates to the Federal Form).

<sup>25</sup> Defendants do not appear to challenge Plaintiffs’ standing on traceability or redressability 2 grounds. See generally Dkt. ## 64 & 113.

Accordingly, the Court declines to dismiss Plaintiffs' § 2(a) challenge for lack of standing.<sup>26</sup>

(2) Section 2(d)

Because Defendants maintain that EO § 2(d) does not apply to any state-level agencies, Plaintiffs have not established Article III standing for their challenge to § 2(d).

Section 2(d) mandates that the “[t]he head of each Federal voter registration executive department or agency [ ] under the [NVRA] shall assess citizenship prior to providing a Federal voter registration form to enrollees of public assistance programs.” EO 14,248 § 2(d). Section 2(d), however, does not define “Federal voter registration executive department or agency.” See generally id. According to Plaintiffs, the term must encompass all agencies and departments that are required to provide voter registration services under 52 U.S.C. § 20506(a), which includes exclusively state-level agencies. See Dkt. # 103 at 46. Under this interpretation, Plaintiffs assert that they have Article III standing because § 2(d) will require state-level agencies to undergo costly changes to their voter registration processes. Id.

Defendants, however, say that “Federal voter registration executive department or agency” applies only to federal departments and agencies designated as “voter registration agencies” under 52 U.S.C. § 20506(a). See Dkt. # 64 at 9. Accordingly, Defendants contend that Plaintiffs lack standing, as “section 2(d) does not apply to State voter registration agencies” and thus Plaintiffs will suffer no harm. Id. at 25.

While Defendants' assertion that "Federal voter registration executive department or agency" encompasses only federal agencies is peculiar given both the NVRA's text and <sup>26</sup> The Court’s conclusion accords with Judge Casper’s opinions in California I, 786 F. Supp. 3d at 379, and California II, 2025 WL 2663106, at *3–4. It also aligns with Judge Kollar-Kotelly’s analysis of § 2(a) in LULAC I, 780 F. Supp. 3d at 191–94, and LULAC II, 2025 WL 3042704, at *14–18.

1 Defendants' position in prior cases, see California I, 786 F. Supp. 3d at 384, the Court still finds 2 that this interpretation is reasonable. As courts are required to give "significant weight to an 3 agency interpretation of an executive order" so long as the interpretation is "reasonable," see 4 City & Cnty. of S.F. v. Trump (S.F.), 897 F.3d 1225, 1241–42 (9th Cir. 2018), the Court accepts 5 Defendants' interpretation of EO § 2(d) for the purposes of its analysis.

6 Because Plaintiffs "do not assert that they have standing to challenge [§ 2(d)]" if it 7 "applies only to agencies of the federal government[,]" Dkt. # 123 at 2, the Court dismisses 8 Plaintiffs' § 2(d) challenge for lack of subject matter jurisdiction.<sup>27</sup>

9 (3) Section 3(d)

10 Plaintiffs have alleged sufficient facts to establish Article III standing for their challenge
 11 to EO § 3(d).

12 Plaintiffs have adequately alleged that § 3(d) will cause concrete and particularized 13 injuries that are actual or imminent. Plaintiffs contend that § 3(d) "will increase the burden on 14 state and local officials" who process FPCAs and impose "significant monetary costs" on their 15 states. Dkt. # 1 at 33. Plaintiffs allege that this harm is imminent, as § 3(d)'s directives are 16 mandatory and the "changes necessary to process DPOC on the FPCA" and the "something 17 more" to prove voter eligibility "must begin to be made well in advance of the 2026 election."
 18 Dkt. ## 103 at 43 & 123 at 3.

19 Defendants do not challenge Plaintiffs' allegation that § 3(d) will cause concrete and 20 particularized injuries to Plaintiffs. Instead, Defendants argue that the harm is too speculative 21 because "[t]here are no facts to suggest what proof of eligibility might suffice, or how a

23 <sup>27</sup> The Court is dismissing Plaintiffs' § 2(d) challenge based on Defendants' contention that the 24 provision applies only to federal voter registration agencies. Defendants are thus estopped from advancing the position that EO § 2(d) applies to state-level voter registration agencies.

1 UOCAVA voter might obtain such proof.” Dkt. # 64 at 10. They also argue that the harm is not 2 immediate, as the Secretary of Defense “has not yet updated the FPCA, and the EO does not 3 establish a deadline to do so.” Id. But as noted in California I, “[e]ven if the timeframe for 4 implementation and the specific form of identification § 3(d) requires are yet to be 5 determined . . . [§ 3(d)] leaves no doubt that [DPOC and further proof of eligibility] will be 6 required.” 786 F. Supp. 3d at 382. Like with § 2(a), the directions in § 3(d) are not speculative 7 or discretionary: EO § 3(d) states that “[t]he Secretary of Defense shall update the [FPCA] to 8 require: (i) documentary proof of United States citizenship, as defined by [§ 2(a)(ii)]; and (ii)
 9 proof of eligibility to vote in elections in the State in which the voter is attempting to vote.” EO 10 14,248 § 3(d) (emphasis added). Thus, like with § 2(a), § 3(d)’s mandatory language, coupled 11 with the new voter eligibility requirements, suffices to support Plaintiffs’ injury-in-fact 12 argument.

13 Plaintiffs have also alleged, and Defendants do not contest, that their injuries are “fairly 14 traceable” to § 3(d) and would likely be redressed by a favorable ruling by this Court. Plaintiffs 15 have thus plausibly alleged Article III standing for their § 3(d) challenge, and so the Court denies 16 Defendants’ request to dismiss this claim on standing grounds.<sup>28</sup>

17 (4) Section 4(a)

18 Plaintiffs have established the three elements of Article III standing for their challenge to 19 EO § 4(a).

20 Plaintiffs have shown that § 4(a) will cause concrete and particularized harm that is actual 21 and imminent. Section 4(a) requires the EAC to “cease providing Federal funds to States” that 22 do not “accept and use the national mail voter registration form issued pursuant to 52 U.S.C.

 24 <sup>28</sup> The Court’s conclusion tracks Judge Casper’s opinions in California I, 786 F. Supp. 3d at 382, and California II, 2025 WL 2663106, at *4.

20508(a)(1)" and EO § 2(a)(ii). EO 14,248 § 4(a). Plaintiffs have thus shown that § 4(a) will cause injury, as § 4(a) requires states to either use a Federal Form that is promulgated pursuant to § 2(a), and thus suffer the injuries described in part IV.A(1)(a)(1), or fail to comply, and thus face a substantial loss of funds. Further, like with § 2(a), § 4(a) contains mandatory language, making Plaintiffs' claimed harms actual and imminent, not "conjectural" or "speculative" as argued by Defendants. See Dkt. # 113 at 4.<sup>29</sup> Plaintiffs' cited injuries are also traceable to EO § 4(a) and likely redressable by favorable judicial relief. Accordingly, the Court declines to dismiss Plaintiffs' § 4(a) challenge for lack of standing.<sup>30</sup>

b. Voting System Requirements (§§ 4(b), 4(d))

(1) Section 4(b)

Plaintiffs have established the three elements of Article III standing for their challenge to EO § 4(b).

Plaintiffs have established that they will experience concrete and particularized injuries if § 4(b) is implemented. Section 4(b) requires the EAC to alter the existing VVSGs and take action to review, decertify, and re-certify voting systems under new standards.<sup>31</sup> See EO 14,248 § 4(b). As Plaintiffs' voting systems rely on the VVSGs and the EAC's federal certification

<sup>29</sup> As the Court concludes that Plaintiffs have standing to bring their § 2(a) challenge, see part IV.A(1)(a)(1) above, it rejects Defendants' § 4(a) standing arguments that hinge on the non-justiciability of Plaintiffs' § 2(a) challenge. See Dkt. ## 64 at 11 & 113 at 4.

<sup>31</sup> The Court finds perplexing Defendants' statement in their supplemental brief that the "EAC has not yet formed an interpretation of Section 4(b)(ii) that is either consistent or inconsistent with Plaintiffs' [interpretation]." Dkt. # 122 at 3. The Court thus concludes that while the timeline for decertification may be disputed, there is no genuine dispute that EO § 4(b) requires the EAC to decertify all voting systems currently certified under the pre-EO federal testing standards at some point in time.

1 process, see Dkt. # 1 at 22; see also RCW 29A.12.080(5); ORS 246.550; OR. ADMIN. R. 165-2 007-0350(1) (2025), Plaintiffs will no doubt be injured if these mandated changes take effect.

3 Contrary to Defendants' argument, see Dkt. ## 64 at 11-12 & 113 at 11-12, Plaintiffs 4 have also established that their injuries are actual or imminent. While Defendants ask the Court 5 to focus on the phrase "appropriate action," the fact that the EAC has certified only one voting 6 system under the VVSG 2.0 testing standard, and the fact that the EAC has yet to take any action
 7 to decertify voting systems, see id., the Court cannot ignore § 4(b)(i)'s express mandate: it states 8 that the EAC "shall initiate appropriate action to amend the [VVSG] 2.0" and that the amended 9 guidelines "shall provide that voting systems should not use a ballot in which a vote is contained 10 within a barcode or quick-response code in the vote counting process except where necessary to 11 accommodate individuals with disabilities[.]" EO 14,248 § 4(b)(i) (emphasis added). Section 12 4(b)(ii) further provides that the EAC "shall take appropriate action to review and, if appropriate, 13 re-certify voting systems under the new standards established under [§ 4(b)(i)], and to rescind all 14 previous certifications of voting equipment based on prior standards" within "180 days of the 15 date of this order[.]" Id. § 4(b)(i)(ii) (emphasis added). This mandatory language, coupled with 16 the 180-day deadline,<sup>32</sup> makes Plaintiffs' claimed harms sufficiently imminent to satisfy Article 17 III's injury-in-fact requirement.

18 Plaintiffs have also shown causation and redressability. As they explain, without § 4(b), 19 there would be no mandate for the EAC to amend the VVSGs to eliminate certain ballots from 20 the vote counting process or decertify and re-certify voting systems under new standards. See

 23 <sup>32</sup> The Court notes that its imminence analysis is not affected by the EAC failing to act before 24 September 21, 2025 (the 180-day deadline)—because the EO's mandate remains intact, the EAC could, at any point, decide to give effect to § 4(b). Plaintiffs' claimed harms thus remain imminent.

1 Dkt. # 37 at 31. This makes Plaintiffs' injuries fairly traceable to the EO and likely redressable 2 by favorable judicial relief.

3 Defendants' argument that any alleged injury suffered by Plaintiffs is not traceable to the 4 EO because Plaintiffs' adoption of the VVSGs is "completely voluntary," see Dkt. # 64 at 11–12, 5 misses the mark for at least three reasons. First, Plaintiffs' role in adopting the VVSGs does not 6 automatically negate standing. According to the Supreme Court, a plaintiff can establish 7 causation even if the harm is not solely, or even primarily, caused by the government's actions.
 8 See Massachusetts, 549 U.S. at 523–24; Mendia, 768 F.3d at 1012; see also California v. Azar, 9 911 F.3d 558, 574 (9th Cir. 2018) ("Courts regularly entertain actions brought by states and 10 municipalities that face economic injury, even though those governmental entities theoretically 11 could avoid the injury by enacting new legislation."). Thus, causation can still be satisfied even 12 if other factors are contributing to Plaintiffs' injuries. Second, some of Plaintiffs' claimed harms 13 do not relate to Plaintiffs' adoption of the VVSGs and instead stem directly from the nature of 14 federal decertification itself.<sup>33</sup> Third, other provisions of the EO cast serious doubt on 15 Defendants' argument that adoption of the new VVSGs is "completely voluntary." For example, 16 § 4(d) explicitly directs the DHS Secretary and FEMA Administrator to "heavily prioritize

 22
 23

<sup>33</sup> See, e.g., Dkt # 39 at 17 ("[I]f counties use voting systems that are federally decertified as a result of this executive order, that will result in decreased confidence in election integrity."); Dkt. # 43 at 12 ("Using voting systems that have been decertified by the federal government will only further decrease public confidence and undermine [the Thurston County Auditor's] efforts to build trust in the election process."); Dkt. # 44 at 5 ("Using a voting system that has been decertified by the EAC would undermine voters' confidence in election results, even though that voting system would still accurately record and count votes and had been certified by the Secretary of State.").

1 compliance with the [VVSG] 2.0 . . . and completion of testing through the [federal certification
 2 process]” in considering funding to states. EO 14,248 § 4(d)

3 As a result, Plaintiffs have shown sufficient “personal stake” to satisfy Article III 4 standing. See TransUnion, 594 U.S. at 423. The Court thus declines to dismiss Plaintiffs’ § 4(b) 5 challenge for lack of standing.

6 (2) Section 4(d)

7 Plaintiffs have alleged sufficient facts to establish Article III standing for their challenge
 8 to EO § 4(d).

9 Plaintiffs have adequately alleged that § 4(d) will cause concrete and particularized harm 10 that is actual and imminent. Section 4(d) requires the DHS Secretary and FEMA Administrator 11 to “heavily prioritize compliance with the [VVSG] 2.0 developed by the [EAC] and completion 12 of testing through the Voting System Test Labs accreditation process” when “considering the 13 provision of funding for State or local election offices or administrators through the Homeland 14 Security Grant Programs[.]” EO 14,248 § 4(d). As Plaintiffs both currently receive funding 15 from the DHS and FEMA, and do not have voting systems certified under the VVSG 2.0, see 16 Dkt. # 1 at 22–23, Plaintiffs are at serious risk of suffering a significant loss of funding.

17 Contrary to Defendants’ conclusory assertion, see Dkt. # 64 at 13, the Court finds that 18 this potential loss of funding is sufficiently imminent such that it is a “relevant” and “non-19 speculative” injury under Article III.<sup>34</sup> As this harm is also traceable to EO § 4(d) and likely

 22 <sup>34</sup> See, e.g., The U. S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) Notice of Funding Opportunity EAC-accredited laboratory).

redressable by favorable judicial relief, the Court will not dismiss Plaintiffs' § 4(d) challenge for lack of standing.

c. Ballot-Receipt Deadline (§§ 7(a), 7(b))

Plaintiffs have established the three elements of Article III standing for their challenges to EO §§ 7(a) and 7(b).

Plaintiffs have shown that EO § 7 will cause concrete and particularized injuries to their sovereign interests. As noted in part IV.A(1)(a)(1), the Constitution expressly grants states a sovereign interest in regulating “[t]he Times, Places and Manner” of holding elections for federal office. See U.S. Const. art. I, § 4, cl. 1; see also id. art. II, § 1, cl. 2. In exercising this authority, Plaintiffs have enacted laws that dictate the time, place, and manner in which ballots for federal elections must be received by the state. See generally RCW Title 29A; ORS Title 23. By both establishing a national ballot-receipt deadline,<sup>35</sup> and directing the Attorney General and the EAC to enforce said deadline via compulsive actions, EO § 7 infringes on Plaintiffs’ sovereign interests in regulating the times, places, and manner of holding elections.

Plaintiffs have also shown that EO § 7 will cause concrete and particularized economic injuries.<sup>36</sup> Plaintiffs have presented specific facts in declarations by state and local election officials that § 7 will cause financial harm to Plaintiffs. See Dkt. ## 38–48. Specifically, Plaintiffs say that compliance with § 7’s deadline will require Plaintiffs to: place more drop boxes, increase the number of county staff, educate the electorate on new processes, and substantially alter the process for counting votes in their states, particularly those received after

<sup>36</sup> The Ninth Circuit has recognized economic injury as a valid basis for standing in suits by states against the federal government. See, e.g., Washington, 108 F.4th at 1174 (discussing economic injury as a valid basis for a plaintiff state to assert standing).

1 Election Day. See Dkt. ## 39 at 18, 40 at 5–7, 41 at 3–6, 42 at 8, 43 at 9–10, 12, 44 at 4, 45 at 2– 2 3, 48 at 9–10. Plaintiffs contend that these changes will require them to amend statutes, adopt 3 new administrative rules, and incur significant costs. Id. Plaintiffs have also shown that failure 4 to comply with § 7 will cause Plaintiffs financial harm, as noncompliance would trigger a loss in 5 EAC and DOJ funding. Id.

6 Plaintiffs have also established that these injuries are imminent. Contrary to Defendants’ 7 contentions, Plaintiffs’ injuries are not “entirely speculative.” See Dkt. # 64 at 15. Although 8 Defendants are correct that the Attorney General and EAC have yet to take direct action against 9 Plaintiffs, “[w]here threatened action by government is concerned, [the Supreme Court] do[es] 10 not require a plaintiff to expose himself to liability before bringing suit to challenge the basis for 11 the threat[.]” MedImmune, Inc. v. Genentech, Inc., 549 U.S. 118, 128–29 (2007) (emphasis 12 omitted). Section 7(a) states that the Attorney General “shall take all necessary action to enforce 13 2 U.S.C. 7 and 3 U.S.C. 1 against States” that include “absentee or mail-in ballots received after 14 Election Day in the final tabulation of votes.” EO 14,248 § 7(a) (emphasis added). Similarly, 15 § 7(b) states that the EAC “shall condition any available funding to a State on that State’s 16 compliance with the requirement . . . [that] there be a uniform and nondiscriminatory ballot 17 receipt deadline of Election Day[.]” EO 14,248 § 7(b) (emphasis added). This mandatory 18 language gives rise to a clear and imminent threat of enforcement against states, like Plaintiffs, 19 that permit ballots to be received and counted after Election Day.<sup>37</sup>

20 Contrary to Defendants’ argument, see Dkt. # 64 at 15, the Executive Branch’s inherent 21 enforcement discretion does not affect this imminence analysis. Although the Court 22

23 <sup>37</sup> The DOJ’s position in other litigation provides further support that Plaintiffs face an imminent 24 threat of criminal prosecution if they maintain their current ballot-receipt deadlines. See Dkt. # 38-1 at 9 (DOJ lawyer stating that “[a]ny number of actions, including criminal actions” may be lawfully used against states to enforce the Election Day statutes pursuant to the EO).

1 acknowledges that “the choice of how to prioritize and how aggressively to pursue legal actions 2 against defendants who violate the law falls within the discretion of the Executive Branch[,]” see 3 TransUnion, 594 U.S. at 429; see also United States v. Texas, 599 U.S. 670, 679 (2023), the 4 Court does not find that Plaintiffs’ harms stem from the Attorney General’s enforcement 5 discretion. Instead, these harms stem from “the Executive Order’s [alleged] misapplication of 6 the federal election day statutes” itself. Dkt. # 103 at 28. As Plaintiffs currently count ballots 7 received after Election Day, Plaintiffs’ claimed harms are actual and imminent, not “riddled with 8 contingencies and speculation that impede judicial review.” Trump v. New York, 592 U.S. 125, 9 131 (2020).

10 Defendants’ final argument, that Plaintiffs cannot establish injury in fact because of the 11 “consistent with applicable law” language in EO § 11(b), is also misguided. Defendants contend 12 that whether the Attorney General’s actions pursuant to EO § 7 violate Plaintiffs’ legal rights is 13 “necessarily speculative,” as the Attorney General may lawfully enforce the Election Day 14 statutes. See Dkt. # 64 at 15. But if, as Plaintiffs allege, the national ballot-receipt deadline 15 proposed by § 7 is unlawful, there is no way the Attorney General or the EAC can, “consistent 16 with applicable law,” compel states to adopt said deadline. Further, saving clauses must be read 17 in context and “cannot be given effect when the Court, by rescuing the constitutionality of a 18 measure, would override clear and specific language.” S.F., 897 F.3d at 1239. Where, as here, 19 the Court would have to nullify clear and specific language in the EO, the Court may decline to 20 give effect to a saving clause. See id. The EO’s saving clause thus does not affect Plaintiffs’ 21 ability to establish Article III injury in fact.<sup>38</sup>

23 <sup>38</sup> The Court also notes that Defendants’ cited cases on saving clauses are distinct. The cases 24 Trump v. New York and Trump v. American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE) both involved speculative injuries, as the implicated agencies had yet to alter census operations in a concrete manner,

1 As Plaintiffs have adequately demonstrated traceability and redressability, Plaintiffs have 2 satisfied their burden of establishing Article III standing as to their § 7 claims. The Court thus 3 declines to dismiss Plaintiffs' §§ 7(a) and 7(b) challenges for lack of standing.<sup>39</sup>

4 2. Ripeness

5 Article III "requires that a plaintiff's claim be ripe for adjudication." Stavrianoudakis v.
 6 Fish & Wildlife Serv., 108 F.4th 1128, 1138 (9th Cir. 2024). In evaluating ripeness, a court must 7 consider both constitutional and prudential ripeness. See id. at 1139.<sup>40</sup> "Constitutional ripeness 8 overlaps with the injury-in-fact element of Article III standing, and 'therefore the inquiry is 9 largely the same: whether the issues presented are definite and concrete, not hypothetical or 10 abstract.'" Id. (quoting Ass'n of Irritated Residents v. EPA, 10 F.4th 937, 944 (9th Cir. 2021)).
 11 "Prudential ripeness concerns 'the fitness of the issues for judicial decision and the hardship to 12 the parties of withholding court consideration.'" Id. (quoting Abbott Lab's v. Gardner, 387 13 U.S. 136, 149 (1967)). To demonstrate a claim is "fit for decision," the party must show that the

15 see New York, 592 U.S. at 132, or issue a specific reorganization plan, see AFGE, 222 L. Ed. 2d 1159, 16 1159 (2025), pursuant to the President's directives. As such, it was unclear in these cases how, and even 17 if, the plaintiffs would be harmed, especially because the agencies were instructed to develop their plans 18 only to the extent "practicable" and in a manner "consistent with applicable law." See New York, 592 19 U.S. at 131–32; AFGE, 222 L. Ed. 2d at 1159 (Sotomayor, J., concurring). In contrast, here, Plaintiffs' 20 claimed harms are not speculative. Although it is unclear what precise actions the Attorney General will 21 take to "enforce" § 7's ballot receipt-deadline, it is clear that any action to compel Plaintiffs to adopt an 22 unlawful ballot-receipt deadline will cause harm and cannot be effectuated "consistent with applicable 23 law" if § 7's ballot-receipt deadline is unlawful. As Defendants have not suggested that § 7 is limited to 24 non-compulsive actions, nor does the Court find any reason to interpret "enforce" under § 7 so narrowly, it sees no reason to apply the reasoning of New York or AFGE here. The Court also finds Judge Kollar-Kotelly's § 7 standing analysis in LULAC I distinguishable, as the LULAC plaintiffs were organizations, not states, and the opinion specifically states that the standing of other parties, including states, is beyond the scope of the opinion. 780 F. Supp. 3d at 212–19.

<sup>39</sup>The Court's conclusion accords with Judge Casper's opinions in California I, 786 F. Supp. 3d at 384–85, and California II, 2025 WL 2663106, at *5. It also aligns with Judge Kollar-Kotelly's dicta in LULAC I, 780 F. Supp. 3d at 214.

 vitality of the prudential ripeness doctrine." See Susan B. Anthony List v. Driehaus, 573 U.S. 149, 167 (2014). Because the Supreme Court has not definitively ruled on this issue, the Court assumes that the prudential ripeness requirement remains intact.

1 “issues raised are primarily legal, do not require further factual development, and the challenged 2 action is final.” Id. (quoting Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky, 586 F.3d 1109, 1126 (9th Cir. 2009)). To 3 demonstrate hardship, a party “must show that withholding review would result in direct and 4 immediate hardship and would entail more than possible financial loss.” Id. In this analysis, 5 “[r]elevant considerations include whether the regulation requires an immediate and significant 6 change in the plaintiffs’ conduct of their affairs with serious penalties attached to 7 noncompliance.” Id. (internal quotation marks and citations omitted).

8 Defendants argue that the Court should dismiss Plaintiffs’ claims as unripe. See Dkt.
 9 # 64 at 5–16. The Court addresses ripeness below for each claim for which Plaintiffs have 10 established Article III standing.

11 a. Voter Eligibility Requirements (§§ 2(a), 3(d), 4(a))

12 Plaintiffs have established that their challenge to the additional voter eligibility 13 requirements in EO §§ 2(a), 3(d), and 4(a) are ripe. As explained in part IV.A(1)(a), these 14 provisions use mandatory language. This causes Plaintiffs’ harms, and the associated legal 15 issues, to be “definite and concrete,” not “hypothetical or abstract.” See Stavrianoudakis, 108 16 F.4th at 1139. Plaintiffs have thus established constitutional ripeness for these claims.

17 Plaintiffs have also established prudential ripeness. Plaintiffs’ claims are fit for judicial 18 review, as the “issues raised are primarily legal” and “do not require further factual 19 development.” See id. Contrary to Defendants’ assertion, see Dkt. # 64 at 7, Plaintiffs need not 20 show that the challenged action is a “final agency action.” As explained in part IV.A(1)(a), 21 Plaintiffs’ harms stem from the EO’s mandate that certain federal officials add voter eligibility 22 requirements to the Federal Form and the FPCA, not from the hypothetical outcome of a future 23 agency rulemaking. Accordingly, Plaintiffs’ §§ 2(a) and 4(a) claims are not “unripe” just 24 because “a final [EAC] rule does not yet exist[.]” See Dkt. # 64 at 7. Likewise, Plaintiffs’ § 3(d) claims are not “unripe” even though the Secretary of Defense has yet to update the FPCA. Plaintiffs have also established that they would suffer hardship if this Court were to withhold review, as the Court finds that the EO has a “direct effect on [Plaintiffs’] day-to-day business[.]” See Dkt. # 37 at 18 (quoting Abbott, 387 U.S. at 152). The Court thus declines to dismiss Plaintiffs’ challenges to EO §§ 2(a), 3(d), and 4(a) as unripe.<sup>41</sup>

b. Voting System Requirements (§§ 4(b), 4(d))

Plaintiffs have established that their challenges to EO §§ 4(b) and 4(d) are constitutionally and prudentially ripe. As explained in part IV.A(1)(b), these provisions use mandatory language. Thus, even though Defendants have yet to give effect to § 4’s directives, Plaintiffs’ claimed harms, and the associated legal issues, are still “definite and concrete,” not “hypothetical or abstract.” See Stavrianoudakis, 108 F.4th at 1139. Plaintiffs have also established that the issues raised are primarily legal, further factual development is not required, and they would suffer hardship absent review. See id. Although Defendants summarily state that Plaintiffs’ § 4 claims are “unripe,” see Dkt. ## 64 at 11–13 & 113 at 11–13, the Court does not find any legal support for these arguments.<sup>42</sup> The Court thus concludes that Plaintiffs’ §§ 4(b) and 4(d) claims are ripe, and declines Defendants’ request to dismiss these challenges for lack of ripeness.

<sup>41</sup> The Court's conclusion is consistent with the opinions of the other district court judges on this topic. See California I, 786 F. Supp. 3d at 379, 382; California II, 2025 WL 2663106, at *4; LULAC I, 780 F. Supp. 3d at 185–88; LULAC II, 2025 WL 3042704, at *18–23.

<sup>42</sup> Defendants contend that Plaintiffs' § 4(b) claims are unripe based on a lack of imminence. See Dkt # 64 at 11–12. But as the Court concludes that decertification is imminent, see part IV.A(1)(b)(1) above, this argument fails. As for § 4(d), Defendants argue that Plaintiffs' challenge is unripe because the provision "does not contain a date certain or otherwise define the Agencies' review and prioritization[.]" Dkt. # 64 at 13. But neither a "date certain" nor a definition of "review and prioritization" are requirements under the constitutional and prudential ripeness doctrines. See generally part IV.A(2) above. Nor would development of either fact be relevant to the legal question before the Court: whether the President may direct the DHS Secretary and FEMA Administrator to add compliance with the VVSG 2.0 as a funding condition for the Homeland Security Grant Program.

c. Ballot-Receipt Deadline (§§ 7(a), 7(b))

Plaintiffs have established that their challenge to EO § 7 is ripe. As explained in part IV.A(1)(c), although the precise contours of enforcement have yet to be defined, § 7 contains mandatory language that requires the Attorney General and the EAC to act against Plaintiffs so long as they maintain their current ballot-receipt deadlines. The issues here are thus sufficiently “definite and concrete” to satisfy constitutional ripeness. See Stavrianoudakis, 108 F.4th at 1139.

Plaintiffs’ § 7 claims are also prudentially ripe. Plaintiffs have established, and Defendants do not appear to contest, that the issues raised are predominantly legal, do not require further factual development, and stem from a final action. See id. Plaintiffs have also shown that they will suffer hardship in the absence of judicial review—§ 7 requires Plaintiffs to choose between altering their current ballot-receipt deadlines, which would cause financial injury and violate their sovereign rights, or maintain their current deadlines, and risk being subjected to enforcement actions. As a result, Plaintiffs have established ripeness, and the Court declines to dismiss Plaintiffs’ §§ 7(a) and 7(b) claims on this ground.<sup>43</sup>

In sum, the Court concludes that Plaintiffs lack standing to bring their challenge to EO § 2(d). It thus dismisses Plaintiffs' § 2(d) claim for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. As for Plaintiffs' other claims, the Court concludes that Plaintiffs have adequately alleged and proved <sup>43</sup> The Court's conclusion also tracks Judge Casper's opinions in California I, 786 F. Supp. 3d at 385–86, and California II, 2025 WL 2663106, at *5.

1 standing and ripeness. It thus denies Defendants' request to dismiss Plaintiffs' challenges to EO 2 §§ 2(a), 3(d), 4(a), 4(b), 4(d), 7(a), and 7(b) for lack of subject matter jurisdiction.<sup>44</sup>

3 B. Equitable Cause of Action

4 To bring a claim in federal court, a plaintiff must have a valid cause of action. See Davis 5 v. Passman, 442 U.S. 228, 236–41 (1979). While plaintiffs typically rely on statutory causes of 6 action, such as the cause of action provided by the Administrative Procedure Act (APA), the lack 7 of a statutory cause of action is not always fatal to a plaintiff's case. See LULAC I, 780 F. Supp.
 8 3d at 171–73 (collecting cases). In the context of equitable challenges to executive actions, 9 American courts, including the Supreme Court and the Ninth Circuit, have repeatedly held that a 10 plaintiff may challenge an executive order or other executive act using an implied, equitable 11 cause of action.<sup>45</sup>

12 But the Supreme Court has also made clear that a federal court's equitable powers in this 13 arena are limited. See Dalton v. Specter, 511 U.S. 462, 472 (1994) (“Our cases do not support 14 the proposition that every action by the President, or by another executive official, in excess of

15 <sup>44</sup> The Court also notes that this conclusion is not disturbed by other courts preliminarily and 16 permanently enjoining Defendants from implementing or giving effect to EO §§ 2(a), 3(d), 7(a), and 7(b).
 17 See California v. U.S. Dep't of Health & Hum. Servs., 941 F.3d 410, 421 (9th Cir. 2019), vacated on 18 other grounds, Little Sisters of Poor Jeanne Jugan Residence v. California, 207 L. Ed. 2d 1118 (2020)
 19 (“[T]o our knowledge, no court has adopted the view that an injunction imposed by one district court 20 against a defendant deprives every other federal court of subject matter jurisdiction over a dispute in 21 which a plaintiff seeks similar equitable relief against the same defendant.”).

22 <sup>45</sup> See, e.g., Armstrong v. Exceptional Child Ctr., Inc., 575 U.S. 320, 327 (2015) (holding that the 23 “ability to sue to enjoin unconstitutional actions by state and federal officers is the creation of courts of 24 equity, and reflects a long history of judicial review of illegal executive action”); Free Enter. Fund v. Pub. Co. Acct. Oversight Bd., 561 U.S. 477, 491 n.2 (2010) (recognizing the existence of implied private 25 rights of action under the Constitution); Youngstown, 343 U.S. at 582–89 (recognizing an implied 26 equitable cause of action against an executive order); Murphy Co. v. Biden, 65 F.4th 1122, 1129–30 (9th 27 Cir. 2023) (recognizing a court's power to review ultra vires actions and rejecting the government's claim 28 that an executive action is unreviewable because of a lack of a statutory cause of action); Sierra Club v. Trump, 963 F.3d 874, 888–93 (9th Cir. 2020), vacated on other grounds, Biden v. Sierra Club, 210 L. Ed.
 29 2d 985 (2021) (recognizing a constitutional and ultra vires cause of action to challenge an unlawful act by 30 the Executive Branch); Chamber of Com. of U.S. v. Reich, 74 F.3d 1322, 1327–30 (D.C. Cir. 1996) 31 (recognizing a cause of action and rejecting the government's claim that an executive action is 32 unreviewable in the absence of a statutory cause of action).

1 his statutory authority is ipso facto in violation of the Constitution.”). Specifically, it has held 2 that judicial review is available only if the Executive Branch has “taken action entirely ‘in excess 3 of its delegated powers and contrary to a specific prohibition’ in a statute.” Nuclear Regul.
 4 Comm’n v. Texas (NRC), 605 U.S. 665, 681 (2025) (quoting Ry. Clerks v. Ass’n for Benefit of 5 Non-contract Emps., 380 U.S. 650, 660 (1965)). The Supreme Court has also held that judicial 6 review is unavailable if an existing “statutory review scheme provides aggrieved persons ‘with a 7 meaningful and adequate opportunity for judicial review’” or “forecloses all other forms of 8 judicial review.” Id. (quoting Bd. of Governors, FRS v. MCorp Fin., Inc., 502 U.S. 32, 43–44 9 (1991)). Absent a cause of action, equitable or otherwise, the court must dismiss the case for 10 failure to state a claim. See generally Davis, 442 U.S. at 236–41.

11 Defendants contend that the Court should deny summary judgment, and dismiss all of 12 Plaintiffs’ claims, because “Plaintiffs lack a cause of action to bring any claim in their 13 Complaint.” Dkt. # 64 at 16. Plaintiffs respond that they appropriately rely on an equitable 14 cause of action for all<sup>46</sup> of their claims. See Dkt. ## 103 at 15–16 & 123 at 1–2. The Court 15 concludes that Plaintiffs have a valid cause of action to support some, but not all, of their claims.

16 Plaintiffs have an equitable cause of action to support their separation-of-powers 17 challenges<sup>47</sup> to EO §§ 2(a), 3(d), 4(a), 4(b), 4(d), 7(a), and 7(b) for three reasons. First, each of 18 these claims is rooted in the argument that the President exceeded his delegated powers and 19 contravened specific prohibitions in the applicable statutes, thereby violating the Constitution’s 20 allocation of authority over elections to the states and Congress. See generally Dkt. ## 37 &

 22 <sup>46</sup> Although this was initially unclear, Plaintiffs’ supplemental briefing confirms that they are 23 exclusively relying on an equitable cause of action. See Dkt. # 123 at 1 (“For each of their claims, 24 Plaintiff States rely on an equitable cause of action[.]”); see also id. at 2 (Plaintiffs “do not rely on any other cause of action at this time.”).

<sup>47</sup> Based on the evolution of the briefing, the Court construes Claims 4 and 5 in the Complaint (“Ultra Vires Action” and “Separation of Powers”) to combine to form the equitable, separation-of-powers cause of action that is recognized in this Order.

1 103. As these challenges are constitutional, they fall squarely within the scope of the non-2 statutory, equitable cause of action caselaw.

3 Second, none of the limitations on judicial review discussed above apply to these claims.
 4 Contrary to Defendants' contentions, there is no statutory review scheme that would provide 5 Plaintiffs with a "meaningful and adequate opportunity for judicial review[.]" See NRC, 605 6 U.S. at 681. Although Defendants argue that the APA provides Plaintiffs with an adequate 7 review scheme, see Dkt. # 113 at 2, Plaintiffs' challenges are aimed at the contents of the EO, 8 not at any potential actions taken by executive agencies pursuant to the EO. See generally Dkt.
 9 ## 37 & 103. Additionally, parties cannot sue the President under the APA. See Franklin v.
 10 Massachusetts, 505 U.S. 788, 796 (1992). It thus cannot be said that the APA, nor any other 11 statutory review scheme, provides Plaintiffs with "a meaningful and adequate opportunity" for 12 judicial review of EO 14,248.<sup>48</sup>

13 Third, Defendants' cited cases do not directly support the proposition that Plaintiffs are 14 not entitled to judicial review here. Defendants' filings rely heavily on NRC, a case in which the 15 Supreme Court declined ultra vires review of a party's challenge to a licensing decision made by 16 the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. See NRC, 605 U.S. at 669. The Supreme Court, however, 17 did not deny review in NRC just because the plaintiffs asserted an equitable cause of action.
 18 Rather, it rejected the plaintiffs' claim because the plaintiffs: (1) had attempted to "dress up a 19 typical statutory-authority argument as an ultra vires claim"; and (2) had a guaranteed 20 "alternative path to judicial review." Id. at 682. In contrast, here, Plaintiffs are not making a 21 "typical statutory-authority argument." See generally Dkt. ## 37 & 103; see also LULAC II, 22 2025 WL 3042704, at *25 (concluding that "the plaintiffs' separation-of-powers claims [ ] are

 24 <sup>48</sup> Aside from the APA, Defendants point to no other statutory review scheme which would permit (or foreclose) judicial review here. See generally Dkt. ## 64 & 113.

1 best characterized as constitutional, not statutory”). Defendants also cite no “alternative path to 2 judicial review” that would encompass Plaintiffs’ claims. See generally Dkt. ## 64 & 113.

3 Plaintiffs’ case is also distinguishable from NRC on several other important grounds.<sup>49</sup>

4 Accordingly, the Supreme Court’s denial of ultra vires review in NRC does not affect Plaintiffs’
 5 entitlement to bring an equitable challenge to EO §§ 2(a), 3(d), 4(a), 4(b), 4(d), 7(a), or 7(b).<sup>50</sup>

6 For these three reasons, then, the Court concludes that Plaintiffs have an equitable cause 7 of action to support their separation-of-powers challenges to EO §§ 2(a), 3(d), 4(a), 4(b), 4(d), 8 7(a), and 7(b). It thus declines Defendants’ request to dismiss these claims for failure to state a 9 cause of action.

10 The Court does, however, agree with Defendants that Plaintiffs have not plausibly stated 11 a cause of action for the remaining “claims” in their Complaint—Claims 1, 2, 7, and 8. Claims 1 12 and 2 concern the Constitution’s Elections Clause (Article I, Section 4, Clause 1), Electors 13 Clause (Article II, Section 1), and the Tenth Amendment. See Dkt. # 1 at 34–37. While these 14 claims are constitutional in nature, they do not fall squarely within the implied equitable cause of 15 action caselaw discussed above. The Court is thus unable to find sufficient facts in the 17       <sup>49</sup> NRC concerned a challenge to a licensing decision by an executive agency, 605 U.S. at 672–74, whereas this case involves a challenge to an executive order issued by the President. In NRC, there was a 18 statute that governed review of final orders (the Hobbs Act), see id. at 674, but here, there is no 19 comparable statute that governs judicial review of executive orders. In NRC, the plaintiffs argued that an 20 executive agency exceeded its statutory authority, id. at 673, while here, Plaintiffs argue that the President 21 has no authority to issue the directives in the EO and that it violates the Constitution.

22       <sup>50</sup> The outcomes and reasoning in Defendants’ other cited cases also do not bear on Plaintiffs’ 23 entitlement to judicial review here. See, e.g., Davis, 442 U.S. at 249 (holding that the plaintiff has an 24 implied cause of action under the Fifth Amendment); Franklin, 505 U.S. at 796 (holding that a plaintiff cannot sue the President under the APA); Dalton, 511 U.S. at 469–74 (affirming Franklin’s holding that the President’s actions are not reviewable under the APA but noting that “some claims that the President has violated a statutory mandate” may still be judicially reviewable outside of the APA’s framework); City of Reno v. Netflix, Inc., 52 F.4th 874, 878 (9th Cir. 2022) (holding that the Declaratory Judgment Act does not provide a cause of action when the party seeking relief lacks a separate cause of action); Glob.
Health Council v. Trump, 153 F.4th 1, 13–17 (D.C. Cir. 2025) (affirming Dalton’s holding that parties cannot obtain judicial review merely by recasting statutory claims as constitutional ones).

1 Complaint to allege a plausible claim for relief under these constitutional provisions. It thus 2 dismisses these claims, without prejudice, for failure to state a cause of action.<sup>51</sup>

3 The Court likewise must dismiss Claim 7 for failure to state a cause of action. Claim 7, 4 titled “National Voter Registration Act,” suggests that the EO is unlawful because it violates the 5 NVRA. See Dkt. # 1 at 41–42. Because this claim says nothing about the Constitution, the 6 Court concludes that it must be characterized as a “statutory claim,” not a “constitutional claim.” 7 As Plaintiffs argue that they are challenging the EO under the “constitutional separation-of-8 powers doctrine,” see Dkt. # 123 at 2, and it is not apparent on the face of the Complaint that 9 Plaintiffs meet the more demanding standard for asserting an equitable, statutory cause of action, 10 see LULAC II, 2025 WL 3042704, at *23–25 (collecting cases), the Court cannot conclude based 11 on the present record that Plaintiffs have a valid cause of action to support Claim 7.<sup>52</sup>

12 The Court also must dismiss Claim 8 for failure to state a cause of action. Claim 8, titled 13 “Declaratory Judgment,” appears to suggest that Plaintiffs are seeking independent relief under 14 the Declaratory Judgment Act, i.e., that Plaintiffs are asserting a cause of action under the Act.
 15 See Dkt. # 1 at 42–43. But a declaratory judgment is a remedy, not a claim. And the Declaratory 16 Judgment Act “does not provide an affirmative cause of action where none otherwise exists.”
 17 City of Reno, 52 F.4th at 878. Plaintiffs have also not framed Claim 8 as a constitutional claim, 18

20 <sup>51</sup> The Court notes that in dismissing Claims 1 and 2, it is not dismissing Plaintiffs’ arguments 21 that the EO violates the Elections Clause, Electors Clause, and Tenth Amendment to the extent that these 22 arguments relate to their separation-of-powers claims, i.e., their claims that the President exceeded his 23 delegated powers under the Constitution. The Court is only dismissing these arguments to the extent that 24 they present stand-alone, constitutional claims.

25 <sup>52</sup> The Court notes that in dismissing Claim 7, it is not dismissing Plaintiffs’ arguments that the 26 EO violates the NVRA to the extent that these arguments relate to their separation-of-powers claims, i.e., 27 their claims that the President exceeded his delegated powers and acted contrary to specific provisions in 28 the NVRA. The Court is only dismissing Plaintiffs’ NVRA arguments to the extent that they are rooted 29 in a pure statutory claim under the NVRA.

1 nor satisfied the standards for ultra vires review of a statutory claim. Thus, to the extent that 2 Claim 8 asserts a “claim” under the Declaratory Judgment Act, the Court must dismiss it.<sup>53</sup>

3 * * *

4 In sum, the Court concludes that Plaintiffs have established a non-statutory, equitable 5 cause of action for their separation-of-powers challenges to EO §§ 2(a), 3(d), 4(a), 4(b), 4(d), 6 7(a), and 7(b).<sup>54</sup> It thus declines Defendants’ request to deny summary judgment and dismiss 7 these claims for failure to state a cause of action. As the Court concludes that Plaintiffs have not 8 alleged a valid cause of action for Claims 1, 2, 7, and 8 in the Complaint, the Court dismisses 9 these claims, without prejudice, for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6).

10 C. Separation-of-Powers Claims

11 “Separation of powers was designed to implement a fundamental insight: Concentration 12 of power in the hands of a single branch is a threat to liberty.” Clinton v. City of New York, 524 13 U.S. 417, 450 (1998) (Kennedy, J., concurring). The Framers designed a governmental 14 framework that serves to both “prevent the accumulation of excessive power in any one branch” 15 and ensure “a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal Government[.]” 16 Gregory v. Ashcroft, 501 U.S. 452, 458 (1991). “The Framers recognized that, in the long term, 17 structural protections against abuse of power were critical to preserving liberty.’ Their solution to 18 governmental power and its perils was simple: divide it.” Seila L. LLC v. Consumer Fin. Prot.
 19 Bureau, 591 U.S. 197, 223 (2020) (quoting Bowsher v. Synar, 478 U.S. 714, 730 (1986)). The 20 Framers thus took care to divide the “powers of the new Federal Government into three defined

21
 22       <sup>53</sup> The Court notes that in dismissing Claim 8, it is only rejecting Plaintiffs’ assertion of a 23 declaratory judgment claim. It is not rejecting Plaintiffs’ request for a declaratory judgment as a remedy 24 for a separate, equitable claim.

 780 F. Supp. 3d at 171–73; LULAC II, 2025 WL 3042704, at *23–25; California II, 2025 WL 2663106, at *7–8.

1 categories, Legislative, Executive, and Judicial.” Id. (quoting INS v. Chadha, 462 U.S. 919, 951 2 (1983)).

3 As for the executive power, the Framers provided that it “shall be vested in a President of 4 the United States of America” and “the President shall take Care that the Laws be faithfully
 5 executed[.]” U.S. Const. art. II, § 1, cl. 1; id. § 3. But given the historical context, the Framers 6 were particularly wary of designing a system that would leave unchecked powers in the hands of 7 the President.<sup>55</sup> They thus took special care to impose boundaries on the executive power.
 8 These boundaries have been interpreted by federal courts to include certain key limits on the 9 President’s ability to issue directives to state and federal officials, including via an executive 10 order.<sup>56</sup>

11 As set forth by the Supreme Court in the seminal case of Youngstown:

12 In the framework of our Constitution, the President’s power to see that the laws are 13 faithfully executed refutes the idea that he is to be a lawmaker. The Constitution 14 limits his functions in the lawmaking process to the recommending of laws he 15 thinks wise and the vetoing of laws he thinks bad. And the Constitution is neither 16 silent nor equivocal about who shall make laws which the President is to execute.

17 <sup>55</sup> See, e.g., THE FEDERALIST No. 47 (James Madison) (“The accumulation of all powers 18 legislative, executive and judiciary in the same hands, whether of one, a few or many, and whether 19 hereditary, self appointed, or elective, may justly be pronounced the very definition of tyranny.”); THE 20 FEDERALIST No. 48 (James Madison) (quoting Thomas Jefferson, Notes on the state of Virginia 195 21 (1787)) (“An elective despotism was not the government we fought for; but one which should not only be 22 founded on free principles, but in which the powers of government should be so divided and balanced 23 among several bodies of magistracy, as that no one could transcend their legal limits, without being 24 effectually checked and restrained by the others.”) (emphasis omitted); Youngstown, 343 U.S. at 640 (Jackson, J., concurring) (“The example of such unlimited executive power that must have most impressed the forefathers was the prerogative exercised by George III, and the description of its evils in the Declaration of Independence leads me to doubt that they were creating their new Executive in his image.”).

25 <sup>56</sup> See, e.g., Youngstown, 343 U.S. at 589 (concluding that the President cannot order 26 governmental seizure of steel mills via executive order); Ex parte Milligan, 71 U.S. 2, 141 (1866)
 27 (concluding that the President cannot order military tribunals for civilians via executive order); *Little v.
 28 Barreme*, 6 U.S. 170, 179 (1804) (concluding that the President lacks the authority to order the seizure of 29 certain vessels via executive order).

1 343 U.S. at 587. Accordingly, whenever the President issues an executive order, the power “to 2 issue the order must stem either from an act of Congress or from the Constitution itself.” Id. at 3 585. If the President lacks a statutory or constitutional basis for issuing an executive order (or 4 any provision in it), the act is unlawful, and a federal court may use its equitable powers to 5 enjoin its implementation. See generally id. at 589.

6 Plaintiffs say that they are entitled to summary judgment because neither the Constitution 7 nor any act of Congress grants the President the authority to regulate or administer elections. See 8 generally Dkt. # 37. They thus contend that the EO’s attempt to add voter eligibility 9 requirements, interfere with the certification of voting systems, and create a national ballot-10 receipt deadline is unlawful. Id. Defendants respond that the President possesses the authority 11 to issue all the directives in the EO, and thus all of Plaintiffs’ separation-of-powers claims should 12 be dismissed on the merits. See generally Dkt. # 64. The Court addresses these arguments for 13 each of Plaintiffs’ remaining claims.

14 1. Voter Eligibility Requirements (§§ 2(a), 3(d), 4(a))

15 a. Section 2(a)

16 Plaintiffs contend that EO § 2(a) is ultra vires and violates separation of powers because 17 neither the Constitution nor the NVRA grants the President the authority to direct the EAC to 18 add a DPOC requirement to the Federal Form. See Dkt. # 37 at 18. Defendants counter that “the 19 President neither exceeded his constitutional authority nor violated the NVRA in directing the 20 EAC to ‘take appropriate action to require’ documentary proof of citizenship on the federal 21 form.” Dkt. # 64 at 18 (quoting EO 14,248 § 2(a)).

22 The Court concludes that EO § 2(a) is not authorized by the Constitution. The 23 Constitution’s “Elections Clause,” U.S. Const. art. I, § 4, cl. 1., establishes the general 24 constitutional framework for the regulation of federal elections. It states: “The times, places and

1 manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives, shall be prescribed in each state 2 by the legislature thereof; but the Congress may at any time by law make or alter such 3 regulations, except as to the places of chusing Senators.” Id. The “Electors Clause,” U.S. Const.
 4 art. II, § 1, cl. 2, likewise grants states the authority to control their own elections. See id. (“Each 5 State shall appoint, in such Manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a Number of Electors, 6 equal to the whole Number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in 7 the Congress[.]”). In this way, the Constitution assigns authority over federal election 8 administration to the states, subject only to regulations prescribed by Congress. See id. art. I, 9 § 4, cl. 1; see also Foster v. Love, 522 U.S. 67, 69 (1997) (“[The Elections Clause] invests the 10 States with responsibility for the mechanics of congressional elections, but only so far as 11 Congress declines to preempt state legislative choices[.]” (internal quotation marks and citations 12 omitted)). Neither clause assigns any authority over federal election administration to the 13 President or the Executive Branch, see U.S. Const. art. I, § 4, cl. 1; id. art. II, § 1, cl. 2, nor does 14 any other constitutional provision.<sup>57</sup> Accordingly, the President’s power to issue § 2(a) cannot 15 stem from the Constitution itself.

16 The Court also determines that § 2(a) is not authorized by an act of Congress. The 17 pertinent act of Congress here is the NVRA, as the NVRA both provides for the Federal Form 18 and regulates its contents. See 52 U.S.C. §§ 20505, 20508. But the NVRA cannot be said to 19 authorize the President’s directive in § 2(a).

20 The NVRA makes clear that not all changes to the Federal Form are automatically 21 authorized by Congress. The NVRA states that the Form “may require only such identifying

 23 <sup>57</sup> Despite many constitutional provisions addressing elections, voting, or both, none authorize the 24 President or the Executive Branch to exercise authority over the administration of federal elections. See, e.g., U.S. Const. art. II, § 1, cl. 4; id. art. I, § 2; id. amends. XII, XIV, XV, XVII, XIX, XXIII, XXIV, XXVI.

1 information . . . and other information . . . as is necessary to enable the appropriate State election 2 official to assess the eligibility of the applicant and to administer voter registration and other 3 parts of the election process[.]” 52 U.S.C. § 20508(b). It also provides that the Form “may not 4 include any requirement for notarization or other formal authentication[.]” Id. It thus follows 5 from the text of the statute that not all updates to the Federal Form stem from the NVRA. This is 6 particularly true for updates involving proof of citizenship, as the NVRA already contains a 7 provision that addresses this issue. Per 52 U.S.C. § 20508(b)(2), the Federal Form “shall include 8 a statement that—(A) specifies each eligibility requirement (including citizenship); (B) contains 9 an attestation that the applicant meets each such requirement; and (C) requires the signature of 10 the applicant, under penalty of perjury[.]” Notably absent from this provision is any mention of 11 “documentary proof of citizenship.” See generally id. Section 2(a)’s DPOC requirement thus 12 cannot be said to stem directly from the NVRA.

13 To circumvent this, Defendants argue that the NVRA authorizes the President to issue 14 § 2(a) under a more indirect theory of statutory authority. Defendants’ argument essentially 15 presents four steps. First, Defendants note that Congress lawfully enacted the NVRA, thereby 16 “empower[ing] the EAC to ‘prescribe such regulations as are necessary to . . . develop a mail 17 voter registration application form for elections for Federal office[.]’” Dkt. # 64 at 19 (quoting 18 52 U.S.C. § 20508(a)). Second, they contend that the phrase “such regulations as are necessary” 19 gives the EAC the authority to amend the Federal Form to include a DPOC requirement. Id.
 20 Third, they argue that “[t]he EAC exercises Executive power when it carries out these duties and 21 is therefore subject to the administrative control of the President.” Id. Finally, they assert that 22 because the EAC can add a DPOC requirement to the Federal Form and the President can 23 exercise control over the EAC, the President is “well within his authority to direct the EAC to 1 ‘take appropriate action to require . . . documentary proof of United States citizenship’ on the 2 federal form.” Id. (quoting EO 14,248 § 2(a)).

3 But this purported logic fails. Although it is unclear whether the NVRA permits the EAC 4 to add a DPOC requirement to the Federal Form,<sup>58</sup> the Court declines the parties’ invitations to 5 resolve this question,<sup>59</sup> as it finds § 2(a) unlawful irrespective of whether the EAC can lawfully 6 add DPOC to the Federal Form. This is because even if the EAC possesses the authority to 7 update the Federal Form to include DPOC, it is not permitted to amend the Form ad hoc.
 8 Instead, the NVRA and HAVA prescribe specific procedures that the EAC must follow when 9 updating the Federal Form. For example, the statutes state that the EAC,<sup>60</sup> “in consultation with 10 the chief election officers of the States,” may set or alter the contents of the Federal Form only 11 through notice-and-comment rulemaking. 52 U.S.C. §§ 20508(a)(1)–(2), 20929. They also 12 provide that the EAC may only require such information “as is necessary to enable the 13 appropriate State election official to assess the eligibility of the applicant and to administer voter 14 registration and other parts of the election process[.]” 52 U.S.C. § 20508(b). Although 15 Defendants emphasize the phrase “take appropriate action” and thus insist that § 2(a) 16 “contemplates” the EAC exercising its authority consistent with the NVRA and HAVA, see Dkt.
 17

18       <sup>58</sup> The Court agrees with Plaintiffs that the text of the NVRA, coupled with the legislative history 19 and cited cases, appear to cast doubt on whether the EAC can, consistent with the NVRA, update the 20 Federal Form to include DPOC. See Dkt. # 37 at 19–20. It also notes that Congress has previously 21 considered, and is currently considering, a measure that would amend the NVRA to require individuals to 22 provide documentary proof of citizenship when registering to vote. See Safeguard American Voter 23 Eligibility Act (SAVE Act), H.R. 8281, 118th Congress (2024).

24       <sup>59</sup> See, e.g., Dkt. # 37 at 19 (Plaintiffs asserting that “the NVRA precludes the Federal Form from 25 requiring DPOC”); Dkt. # 64 at 20 (Defendants arguing that the DPOC requirement does not violate the 26 NVRA); see also Dkt. # 81 at 18 (amici Republican Party of Arizona and RITE PAC requesting that the 27 Court hold that “the NVRA permits the EAC to include a documentary proof of citizenship field on the 28 federal form”).

29       <sup>60</sup> Congress first assigned responsibility over the Federal Form to the Federal Election 30 Commission (FEC). See 52 U.S.C. § 20505(a)(1); see also 52 U.S.C. § 30106(a) (establishing the FEC).
 31 HAVA reassigned this responsibility to the EAC. See 52 U.S.C. § 21132 (transferring functions from the 32 FEC to the EAC).

1 ## 64 at 6 & 113 at 3, § 2(a) does not mention consultation with state officials, notice-and-2 comment rulemaking, nor the statutory requirement that new information to assess voter 3 eligibility on the Federal Form must first be deemed “necessary.” Instead, § 2(a) states that the 4 EAC “shall take appropriate action to require” DPOC on the Federal Form within 30 days. EO 5 14,248 § 2(a) (emphasis added). Under a straightforward textual analysis, then, § 2(a) directs the 6 EAC to act in contravention of the NVRA’s specific procedures for altering the Federal Form.

7 But even if the Court were to ignore the text of the EO and accept Defendants’ contention 8 that § 2(a) “simply directs the EAC to begin the process” for adding DPOC to the Federal Form, 9 see Dkt. # 113 at 3, § 2(a) would still violate separation of powers. In establishing the EAC, 10 Congress explicitly provided that the EAC is an independent entity. See 52 U.S.C. § 20921 11 (“There is hereby established as an independent entity the Election Assistance Commission[.]”).
 12 Via the EAC’s structure and design, Congress also provided that the EAC is a bipartisan entity.
 13 See 52 U.S.C. § 20923(c)(1) (“[The EAC’s] chair and vice chair may not be affiliated with the 14 same political party.”); see also 52 U.S.C. § 20928 (“Any action which the Commission is 15 authorized to carry out under this chapter may be carried out only with the approval of at least 16 three of its [four] members.”). Although Congress granted the President the power to appoint the 17 EAC’s members by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, see 52 U.S.C. § 20923(a)(1), 18 Congress provided no other significant role for the President in the formation or operation of the 19 EAC. See generally 52 U.S.C. §§ 20501–20511, 20901–21145. Given these features, it is 20 puzzling as to how the President could lawfully order the EAC to carry out a specific policy 21 directive without violating the EAC’s enabling statutes.

22 While Defendants try to avoid this conclusion by arguing that the EAC exercises 23 executive power and thus is subject to the President’s supervisory authority, see Dkt. # 64 at 20, 24 Defendants cite no cases that would support the President’s authority to issue § 2(a)’s directive.

1 Defendants' cited cases, while supporting the notion that the President may exercise a certain 2 degree of supervisory authority over administrative agencies, all center on the removal power<sup>61</sup>
 3 or are otherwise irrelevant to the current dispute.<sup>62</sup> See Dkt. # 64 at 20. As noted by amici 4 Bipartisan Former State Secretaries of State, "there is no understanding of executive power that 5 grants the President the authority to control the day-to-day actions of the EAC." Dkt. # 83 at 21.
 6 Although Defendants' cited cases (and the Supreme Court's more recent cases) hold that 7 executive agencies must be subject to a certain degree of presidential control, in each of these 8 cases, the Supreme Court did not choose to remedy the identified constitutional violation by 9 ordering the transfer of the agency's rulemaking authority or other day-to-day responsibilities to 10 the President. Instead, the Supreme Court chose to remedy the violation by eliminating the 11 impediment to the President's removal power. The Court is thus unconvinced that the Supreme 12 Court's removal cases provide an adequate basis for it to find that the President may lawfully 13 issue an executive order that mandates that the EAC add a DPOC requirement to the Federal 14 Form.

 20 because the President may remove executive officers without cause); Seila, 591 U.S. at 213 (holding that 21 the removal protection in the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act violates 22 separation of powers); Myers v. United States, 272 U.S. 52, 176 (1926) (holding that a law which denies 23 the President removal power over postmasters violates separation of powers).

<sup>62</sup> See, e.g., Touby v. United States, 500 U.S. 160, 169 (1991) (holding that the challenged statute 24 did not unconstitutionally delegate legislative power to the Attorney General and that the Attorney 25 General's subdelegation to another officer was lawful); *Bldg. & Const. Trades Dep't, AFL-CIO v.
 26 Allbaugh*, 295 F.3d 28, 36 (D.C. Cir. 2002) (upholding an executive order that directed executive officials 27 at a non-independent agency to implement certain policies pursuant to their uncontested statutory 28 authority).

1           Because the Court finds that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact and 2 Plaintiffs are entitled to judgment as a matter of law on their § 2(a) claim, it denies Defendants' 3 Motion and grants Plaintiffs summary judgment as to this claim.<sup>63</sup>

4           b.       Section 3(d)

5           Defendants argue that Plaintiffs' challenge to EO § 3(d) must be dismissed because 6 § 3(d) lawfully directs the Secretary of Defense to update the FPCA to require DPOC. See Dkt.
 7 # 64 at 26.<sup>64</sup> Plaintiffs, meanwhile, contend that they have "sufficiently alleged that [EO § 3(d)]
 8 violates the separation of powers because it infringes upon Congress's exercise of its Elections 9 Clause power." Dkt. # 103 at 43.

10           As discussed in part IV.C(1)(a), the Constitution assigns no authority to the President 11 over federal election administration. The President's power to issue § 3(d) thus cannot stem 12 from the Constitution itself.

13           The Court also finds that Plaintiffs have plausibly alleged that the President's power to 14 issue § 3(d) does not stem from an act of Congress. The pertinent act of Congress here is the 15 UOCAVA, which regulates many aspects of the election process for servicemembers and other 16 U.S. citizens living overseas. Unlike the NVRA, Congress did not task a specific entity or 17 official with UOCAVA's administration. Instead, Congress provided that the "President shall 18 designate the head of an executive department to have primary responsibility for Federal 19 functions under [the UOCAVA]." 52 U.S.C. § 20301(a). These functions include: 20 "prescrib[ing] an official post card form, containing both an absentee voter registration

 22           <sup>63</sup> The Court's conclusion is consistent with the opinions of other district court judges on this 23 issue. See California I, 786 F. Supp. 3d at 382; California II, 2025 WL 2663106, at *10; LULAC I, 780
 24 F. Supp. 3d at 200; LULAC II, 2025 WL 3042704, at *26.

25           <sup>64</sup> Plaintiffs do not move for summary judgment on this claim. See generally Dkt. # 37.
 26 Accordingly, the Court addresses Plaintiffs' § 3(d) challenge only under the motion to dismiss standard.

1 application and an absentee ballot application, for use by the States[;]" "prescrib[ing] a suggested 2 design for absentee ballot mailing envelopes;" and "prescrib[ing] a standard oath for use with 3 any document under this chapter affirming that a material misstatement of fact in the completion 4 of such a document may constitute grounds for a conviction for perjury[.]" 52 U.S.C.

5 § 20301(b). But besides giving the President the power to designate the person responsible for 6 administering the FPCA, the UOCAVA provides no other role for the President in the creation or 7 administration of the FPCA. See generally 52 U.S.C. § 20301. UOCAVA thus does not 8 explicitly authorize the President to mandate changes to the FPCA's contents.

9 While the UOCAVA could perhaps indirectly authorize the President to issue § 3(d)'s 10 directive, Defendants have provided no caselaw to support this argument.<sup>65</sup> See generally Dkt.
 11 ## 64 at 26–27 & 113 at 10–11. Additionally, Plaintiffs have plausibly alleged that updating the 12 FPCA to include a DPOC requirement would contravene the UOCAVA's statutory text and 13 purpose. See Dkt. # 103 at 44. Accordingly, the Court denies Defendants' Motion as to this 14 claim.<sup>66</sup>

15       c.     Section 4(a)

16 Plaintiffs say that EO § 4(a) is unlawful because the EAC lacks the authority to withhold 17 funding from States that fail to adopt a Federal Form with a DPOC requirement adopted pursuant 18 to EO § 2(a)(ii). See Dkt. ## 37 at 21 & 103 at 25. Defendants contend that § 4(a) is lawful, as 19 "the statutory sections cited in the EO provide for the condition it directs the EAC to apply[.]" 20 the requirement that states adopt and use the EAC's Federal Form. Dkt. # 64 at 27.

 22       <sup>65</sup> While not explicitly mentioned in this section of Defendants' briefing, the Court notes that the 23 cases on the President's removal power discussed in part IV.C(1)(a) are similarly inapplicable here, as the 24 President's claimed authority to oversee the contents of the FPCA does not necessarily flow from the Supreme Court's removal cases.

25       <sup>66</sup> The Court's conclusion accords with Judge Casper's opinions in California I, 786 F. Supp. 3d 26 at 384, and California II, 2025 WL 2663106, at *10.

1       The Court concludes that § 4(a) exceeds the President’s statutory and constitutional 2 authority. The President has no authority to unilaterally impose new conditions on federal funds 3 or “thwart congressional will by canceling appropriations passed by Congress.” S.F., 897 F.3d at 4 1232. But that is what § 4(a) purports to do: it requires the EAC to cease providing federal funds 5 to states that fail to use a version of the Federal Form that “includ[es] any requirement for 6 documentary proof of United States citizenship adopted pursuant to [EO § 2(a)(ii)].” EO 14,248
7 § 4(a). As § 2(a)’s DPOC requirement is unlawful, see part IV.C(1)(a) above, § 4(a)’s 8 requirement that the EAC stop providing funds to states that fail to adopt and use a Federal Form 9 with § 2(a)’s DPOC requirement must also be unlawful.

10       Defendants try to avoid this conclusion by claiming that § 4(a) merely affirms the 11 NVRA’s requirement that states must adopt and use the Federal Form, “even if that federal form 12 is updated to require DPOC[,]” to be eligible for EAC funding. Dkt. # 113 at 8. But Defendants 13 mischaracterize § 4(a)’s directive. By its very text, § 4(a) mandates that the EAC cease 14 providing funds to states that do not use a Federal Form with DPOC. As the Federal Form 15 currently contains no DPOC requirement, and the President cannot lawfully direct the EAC to 16 amend the Federal Form to include such a requirement via executive order, see part IV.C(1)(a) 17 above, § 4(a) creates a new, presidentially imposed condition on EAC funding unsupported by 18 the EO’s cited statutes. As the President has no authority to unilaterally impose new conditions 19 on federal funds, see S.F., 897 F.3d at 1232, § 4(a) exceeds the President’s constitutional and 20 statutory authority.

1           Because the Court is convinced that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact 2 and Plaintiffs are entitled to judgment as a matter of law on their § 4(a) claim, the Court denies 3 Defendants' Motion and grants Plaintiffs summary judgment as to this claim.<sup>67</sup>

4           2.       Voting System Requirements (§§ 4(b), 4(d))

5           a.       Section 4(b)

6           Plaintiffs say that EO § 4(b) is unlawful because the "President has no authority to order 7 changes to election systems guidelines or dictate the outcome of the testing and certification 8 process [for voting systems]." Dkt. # 37 at 30. Defendants contend that § 4(b) is lawful because 9 the EAC is an executive agency, and "the President has the authority to direct Executive agencies 10 to carry out their statutory duties in a particular way, consistent with that statute." Dkt. # 64 at 11 29.

12           As discussed in part IV.C(1)(a), the Constitution assigns no authority to the President
 13 over federal election administration. The power to issue §§ 4(b)(i) and 4(b)(ii) thus cannot stem 14 from the Constitution itself.

15           The President's power to issue § 4(b)(i) also cannot be said to stem from an act of 16 Congress. In enacting the HAVA and NVRA, Congress assigned the duties relating to "the 17 adoption of voluntary voting system guidelines" and "the testing, certification, decertification, 18 and recertification of voting system hardware and software" to the EAC. 52 U.S.C. § 20922(1)– 19 (2); see also 52 U.S.C. § 20962. It also clearly articulated a process for altering the VVSGs. Per 20 52 U.S.C. § 20962, before adopting or modifying the VVSGs, the EAC must: (1) undergo notice-21 and-comment rulemaking; (2) consider the recommendations provided by the Technical 22 Guidelines Development Committee; (3) submit the proposed guidelines to the Board of

1 Advisors and the Standards Board, which must review and submit comments and 2 recommendations regarding the new guidelines (or modifications to the existing guidelines) to 3 the EAC; and (4) vote to approve the final adoption or modification (at least 90 days after the 4 proposal was submitted to the Board of Advisors and the Standards Board), taking into 5 consideration the comments and recommendations submitted by the Board of Advisors and the 6 Standards Board. Under the applicable statutes, then, only if the EAC completes all these steps 7 and the proposal receives approval from at least three of the four EAC members can the VVSGs 8 be amended. Id.; see also 52 U.S.C. § 20928.

9 Section 4(b)(i), however, defies this congressionally established procedure. It not only 10 requires the EAC to take action to amend the guidelines (irrespective of whether the EAC 11 determines an update is necessary), but it also requires the EAC to amend the guidelines in a 12 particular way. See EO 14,248 § 4(b)(i) (“The amended guidelines and other guidance shall 13 provide that voting systems should not use a ballot in which a vote is contained within a barcode 14 or quick-response code in the vote counting process except where necessary to accommodate 15 individuals with disabilities, and should provide a voter-verifiable paper record to prevent fraud 16 or mistake.”). Contrary to Defendants’ contention, then, the directive in § 4(b)(i) cannot be 17 characterized as the President merely directing the EAC to “initiate appropriate action” to amend 18 the VVSGs in a way that accounts for the statutory process. See Dkt. # 64 at 29. Rather, 19 § 4(b)(i) directs the EAC to amend the guidelines to reach a particular outcome, in violation of 20 the statutory process prescribed by Congress.

21 Section 4(b)(ii)’s directive also cannot be said to stem from an act of Congress. As the 22 Court finds that the President cannot direct the EAC to promulgate “the new standards 23 established under [§ 4(b)(i),]” the Court also finds that the President lacks the authority to require 24 the EAC, “within 180 days of the date of this order,” to take action to “review and, if 1 appropriate, re-certify voting systems under" these unlawful standards. See EO 14,248 § 4(b)(ii).

2 Defendants also do not explain how such a mandate flows from the President's authority under 3 the NVRA or HAVA, especially when these laws prescribe a specific timeline for the 4 amendment process and assign no role to the President in overseeing the certification of voting 5 systems. Defendants also do not explain how the President can lawfully require the EAC "to 6 rescind all previous certifications of voting equipment based on prior standards" or "re-certify 7 voting systems" according to new standards in a way that complies with Congress's directive in 8 52 U.S.C. § 20971—the provision governing the certification and testing of voting systems.
9 Thus, the Court concludes that § 4(b) exceeds the President's statutory and constitutional 10 authority.

11 Rather than grapple with these arguments, Defendants instead attempt to argue that § 4(b) 12 is lawful because, as head of the Executive Branch, the President has the authority to direct the 13 EAC to carry out its duties consistent with the applicable statutes. See Dkt. # 64 at 29. But as 14 explained above, the Court does not find that § 4(b) contemplates the EAC carrying out its duties 15 in a manner that comports with the applicable statutes. The Court also does not find, for the 16 reasons discussed in part IV.C(1)(a), that the President's role as head of the Executive Branch 17 necessarily grants him the authority to control the day-to-day activities of the EAC such that he 18 may lawfully mandate that the EAC amend the VVSGs and rescind certifications for all voting 19 systems currently certified under the federal standards.

20 Because the Court finds that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact and 21 Plaintiffs are entitled to judgment as a matter of law on their § 4(b) claim, the Court denies 22 Defendants' Motion and grants Plaintiffs summary judgment as to this claim.

b. Section 4(d)

Defendants argue that Plaintiffs' challenge to EO § 4(d) must be dismissed because § 4(d) directs the DHS Secretary and FEMA Administrator to, “consistent with applicable law,” prioritize compliance with the VVSG 2.0 and completion of testing through the Voting System Test Labs accreditation process[.]” Dkt. # 64 at 30 (quoting EO 14,248 § 4(d)).<sup>68</sup> Defendants thus argue that § 4(d) is lawful, as “[d]efinitionally, directing executive agencies to take action to the extent consistent with applicable law cannot be interpreted as an order to violate the law.”

Id. Plaintiffs respond that “Defendants place far more weight on this savings clause than it can reasonably bear[,]” as “[t]here is no lawful way in which the agency heads could consider Plaintiff States’ compliance with these conditions that would be ‘in accordance with applicable law.’” Dkt. # 103 at 41.

As discussed in part IV.C(1)(a), the Constitution assigns no authority to the President over federal election administration. The President's power to issue § 4(d) thus cannot stem from the Constitution itself.

The Court also finds that Plaintiffs have plausibly alleged that the President’s power to issue § 4(d) does not stem from an act of Congress. Section 4(d) concerns the Homeland Security Grant Program, a program established by Congress and codified at 6 U.S.C. §§ 603–609a. In creating this program, Congress entrusted the DHS and FEMA with some discretion over certain aspects of the grant-making process. But while Congress authorized these agencies to exercise some discretion over grant-making, at no point in the enabling statutes did Congress mention compliance with the VVSG 2.0 or completion of testing through the Voting System Test Labs accreditation process as criteria for states to receive funding under the program.

<sup>68</sup> Plaintiffs do not move for summary judgment on this claim. See generally Dkt. # 37. Accordingly, the Court addresses Plaintiffs' § 4(d) challenge only under the motion to dismiss standard.

MOTION TO DISMISS - 59

1 Accordingly, § 4(d) can plausibly be described as the President acting contrary to an act of 2 Congress by directing the DHS Secretary and FEMA Administrator to add new funding criteria 3 for the Homeland Security Grant Program. As the President cannot unilaterally impose new 4 conditions on federal funds, see S.F., 897 F.3d at 1232, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have 5 plausibly stated a claim.

6 This conclusion is not disturbed by the “consistent with applicable law” language in 7 § 4(d). Although the Court agrees with Defendants that it is “lawful for the President to instruct 8 agencies to act within their own statutory authorities to implement the President’s priorities 9 consistent with applicable law[,]” see Dkt. # 64 at 30, it also finds that when viewed in the light 10 most favorable to Plaintiffs, § 4(d) does more than instruct the agency heads “to act within their 11 own statutory authorities”—it adds new funding criteria in violation of the statutory scheme 12 established by Congress. The Court likewise finds that Plaintiffs have plausibly alleged that the 13 discretion conferred to the DHS Secretary and the FEMA Administrator under 6 U.S.C.
 14 § 608(a)(1)(K) is not broad enough to encompass consideration of the states’ compliance with 15 the VVSG 2.0 or completion of testing through the Voting System Test Labs accreditation 16 process.

17 Accordingly, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have adequately alleged that the President 18 exceeded his constitutional and statutory authority by issuing EO § 4(d). It thus denies 19 Defendants’ Motion as to this claim.

20 3. Ballot-Receipt Deadline (§§ 7(a), 7(b))

21 a. The Ballot-Receipt Deadline

22 Before addressing the lawfulness of §§ 7(a) and 7(b), it is necessary to consider the 23 threshold question of whether the national ballot-receipt deadline contained in EO § 7 is lawful.
 24 Plaintiffs argue that this deadline is unlawful, as the President has no constitutional or statutory 1 authority to create a national ballot-receipt deadline via an executive order. See Dkt. # 37 at 24.

 2 Defendants respond that “the President did not create a ballot-receipt deadline for federal 3 elections [via EO § 7]—Congress did” when it enacted the Election Day statutes. Dkt. # 64 at 4 33. They thus contend that § 7’s deadline is lawful, as it “does not alter any federal statutes, it 5 merely interprets them[.]” Dkt. # 113 at 14.

6 As discussed in part IV.C(1)(a), the Constitution assigns the states all authority to 7 regulate the time, place, and manner of elections, subject only to limitations by Congress. As the 8 Constitution assigns no authority to the President over federal election administration, the 9 President’s authority to promulgate a national ballot-receipt deadline cannot stem from the 10 Constitution.

11 Section 7’s ballot-receipt deadline is also not authorized by an act of Congress. The 12 pertinent statutes here are the Election Day statutes, which establish a uniform day for federal 13 elections. The first statute, 2 U.S.C. § 7, states: “The Tuesday next after the 1st Monday in 14 November, in every even numbered year, is established as the day for the election, in each of the 15 States and Territories of the United States, of Representatives and Delegates to the Congress 16 commencing on the 3d day of January next thereafter.” The second statute, 3 U.S.C. § 1, states: 17 “The electors of President and Vice President shall be appointed, in each State, on election day, 18 in accordance with the laws of the State enacted prior to election day.” While Defendants argue 19 that EO § 7 merely “interprets” these statutes to require a national ballot-receipt deadline of 20 Election Day, see Dkt. ## 64 at 35 & 113 at 14, this argument simply cannot be squared with the 21 text, purpose, legislative history, nor historical application of the Election Day statutes.

22 To begin, although the statutes clearly establish a uniform “day for the election” 23 nationwide, the statutes are silent on ballot receipt. Neither statute includes the words “ballot,” 24 “deadline,” “receipt,” or any other term that could be fairly “interpreted” to create a ballot-

1 receipt deadline. See generally 2 U.S.C. § 7; 3 U.S.C. § 1. Defendants resist this conclusion, 2 arguing that the terms “day for the election” and “election day” provide the President with the 3 requisite room to “interpret” such a deadline. See Dkt. # 64 at 33. In making this argument, 4 Defendants rely heavily on Republican National Committee v. Wetzel, a recent out-of-Circuit
 5 opinion in which the Fifth Circuit determined that the term “day for the election” in 2 U.S.C. § 7 6 means “the day by which ballots must be both cast by voters and received by state officials.”
 7 120 F.4th 200, 204 (5th Cir. 2024) (emphasis omitted). But for the reasons below, this Court 8 declines to follow this decision.

9 First, as a Fifth Circuit opinion, Wetzel does not bind this Court. Its understanding of the 10 term “election” thus applies only to the extent that this Court finds its analysis persuasive.

11 Second, the Court questions Wetzel’s method for defining “day for the election” in 2 12 U.S.C. § 7. The opinion begins its analysis by stating that it must interpret the words in a statute 13 consistent with their ordinary meaning at the time Congress enacted the statute. Wetzel, 120 14 F.4th at 206. A sentence later, however, it summarily concludes that contemporaneous 15 definitions of “election” “do not shed light on Congress’s use of the word ‘election’ in the 16 nineteenth century.” Id. n.5. The opinion thus discards various dictionary definitions of 17 “election” from 19th century sources, all of which define the term as an act of choosing or 18 selecting a candidate for office and “make no mention of deadlines or ballot receipt.” Id.<sup>69</sup> It 19 then states that the court’s “understanding of the statutory text” will be guided by Foster v. Love,

 22 Of The English Language 288 (1830) (“The day of a public choice of officers.”); Election, 3 The Century
 23 Dictionary and Cyclopedie 1866 (1901) (“The act or process of choosing a person or persons for office 24 by vote . . . [A]lso, the occasion or set time and provision for making such choice.”); Election, James Stormonth, Etymological and Pronouncing Dictionary of the English Language 173 (W. Blackwood ed., 1881) (“[T]he choice or selection of a person or persons to fill some office”); Election, Black’s Law Dictionary (1st ed. 1891) (“The selection of one man from among several candidates to discharge certain duties in a state, corporation, or society.”). See Wetzel, 120 F.4th at 206 n.5.

1 a 1997 Supreme Court case regarding a challenge to Louisiana’s open primary system. See 2 Wetzel, 120 F.4th at 206. The opinion then lists, and applies, “three definitional elements” from 3 the Supreme Court’s decision in Foster—“(1) official action, (2) finality, and (3) 4 consummation”—to arrive at its conclusion that the term “election day” must encompass both 5 ballot casting and ballot receipt. Id. at 207–09.

6 But as the Fifth Circuit itself noted, in Foster, the Supreme Court specifically “declined 7 to pare the term ‘election’ in [2 U.S.C.] § 7 down to the definitional bone[.]” Id. at 207 (cleaned 8 up); see also Foster, 522 U.S. at 72. The Foster Court also did not purport to list “official 9 action,” “finality,” and “consummation” as core elements of the definition of “election.” See 10 generally Foster, 522 U.S. at 69–73. It is thus unclear to this Court how Wetzel arrives at its 11 conclusion that “official action,” “finality,” and “consummation” appropriately define the 12 ordinary meaning of “election” at the time Congress enacted 2 U.S.C. § 7.

13 The Court also questions several other aspects of Wetzel’s textual analysis. For example, 14 Wetzel states that a ballot cannot be “cast” before it is received, as it is “obvious that a ballot is 15 ‘cast’ when the State takes custody of it.” Wetzel, 120 F.4th at 207. But the opinion does not 16 explain what it means to cast a ballot, nor does this Court find it obvious that a ballot is cast only 17 when a state takes custody of it. Similarly, Wetzel states, without explanation, that an election 18 “is consummated when the last ballot is received and the ballot box is closed.” Id. at 208. But 19 given the meaning of “consummate,”<sup>70</sup> it is unclear to this Court why consummation of an 20 election occurs when the last ballot is received, rather than when the last ballot is cast, the last

 23       <sup>70</sup> Wetzel does not define “consummate.” See generally Wetzel, 120 F.4th at 208–09. The 24 common definition of the term is: to finish, to complete, or to make perfect. See, e.g., Consummate, Merriam-Webster’s Online Dictionary (11th ed. 2025), <https://www.merriam-webster.com/dictionary/consummate> (“complete in every detail: perfect”); Consummate, Black’s Law Dictionary (12th ed. 2024) (“Completed; fully accomplished.”).

1 ballot is counted, or perhaps most persuasively, when the last ballot is canvassed and the election
 2 results are certified. Accordingly, the Court declines to adopt Wetzel's definition of "election."

3 The Court instead considers the text, purpose, legislative history, and historical 4 application of the Election Day statutes to define "election" in 2 U.S.C. § 7 and 3 U.S.C. § 1.
 5 Starting with the text, the Court considers the ordinary meaning of "election" at the time the 6 Election Day statutes were enacted. According to the contemporaneous definitions cited in 7 Wetzel, "election" means the "selection of one man from among several candidates to discharge 8 certain duties in a state, corporation, or society" or the "[t]he act or process of choosing a person 9 or persons for office by vote." Black's Law Dictionary (1st ed. 1891); 3 The Century Dictionary 10 and Cyclopedia 1866 (1901).<sup>71</sup> In other words, an "election" occurs when a voter makes their 11 official selection for a candidate, such as when a ballot is cast in a voting booth, deposited in a 12 drop box, or dropped in the mail. Contemporary sources similarly define the term.<sup>72</sup> The Court 13 has found no definition of "election" from the 19th century (nor today) that mentions the receipt 14 of ballots. A straightforward textual analysis, then, does not permit the Election Day statutes to 15 be "interpreted" to require a national ballot-receipt deadline of Election Day.

1 The purpose and legislative history of the Election Day statutes bolster this conclusion.

2 As noted by the Supreme Court in Foster, the Election Day statutes were passed because

3 Congress was concerned both with the distortion of the voting process threatened 4 when the results of an early federal election in one State can influence later voting 5 in other States, and with the burden on citizens forced to turn out on two different election days to make final selections of federal officers in Presidential election

6 Foster, 522 U.S. at 73 (citing Cong. Globe, 42d Cong., 2d Sess., 141 (1871) (remarks of Rep.
 7 Butler)). This legislative record thus suggests that the purpose of the Election Day statutes was 8 to prevent early election results, not to prevent states from counting ballots received after 9 Election Day. The Court also finds nothing in the parties' briefing, nor the legislative record 10 more generally, that would suggest that Congress was concerned about votes being received or 11 tabulated after Election Day.

12 Historical practice also supports the Court's interpretation. As noted by Plaintiffs, the 13 historical record suggests that during the Civil War, some states permitted soldiers in the field to 14 give their ballots to military officials on Election Day, with the ballot transmitted and received 15 by election officials after the date of the election. Dkt. # 37 at 25–26 (citing Josiah Henry 16 Benton, Voting in the Field: A Forgotten Chapter of the Civil War 171–73, 186–87, 190 17 (1915)).<sup>73</sup> In the more than 150 years since the Election Day statutes were enacted, many states 18 have passed laws that allow ballots to be received after Election Day. As a result, around one-19 third of states, as well as Washington D.C., Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, currently allow 20 ballots received after Election Day to be counted.<sup>74</sup> And despite being aware of these laws and

 22 <sup>73</sup> The Court also notes that while Plaintiffs' historical analysis conflicts with that of Wetzel, 23 Plaintiffs' account provides a more accurate characterization of the excerpt from Voting in the Field that 24 is cited in Wetzel. Compare Wetzel 120 F.4th at 209–10, with Dkt. # 37 at 26.

 National Council of State Legislatures (Dec. 24, 2025), <https://www.ncsl.org/elections-and-campaigns/table-11-receipt-and-postmark-deadlines-for-absentee-mail-ballots>.

1 amending other federal election statutes, Congress has never amended the Election Day statutes 2 or otherwise indicated that these states' ballot-receipt deadlines are unlawful. In fact, in enacting 3 other legislation, like UOCAVA, Congress implicitly endorsed the existence of different ballot-4 receipt deadlines among the states.<sup>75</sup> Although courts must be wary about inferring 5 congressional intent from congressional silence or inaction, see United States v. Wells, 519 U.S.
 6 482, 495–96 (1997), this record provides a strong basis for a court to assume that Congress did 7 not intend to preempt state laws governing ballot receipt.

8 Finally, this interpretation tracks the majority view advanced by other courts. Apart from 9 the Wetzel court, most courts that have reviewed the Election Day statutes have concluded that 10 “the text of the Election Day statutes require only that all votes are cast by Election Day, not that 11 they are received by that date.” California I, 786 F. Supp. 3d at 386 (collecting cases). As a 12 result, courts across the country have upheld state laws that permit ballots to be received after 13 Election Day, concluding that such laws are fully consistent with the Election Day statutes.<sup>76</sup>

 16 <sup>75</sup> UOCAVA states that overseas ballots “shall be submitted and processed in the manner
 17 provided by law for absentee ballots in the State involved” and the “deadline for receipt of the State 18 absentee ballot under State law” shall apply. 52 U.S.C. § 20303(b).

19 <sup>76</sup> See, e.g., Bost v. Ill. State Bd. of Elections, 684 F. Supp. 3d 720, 736 (N.D. Ill. 2023)

 21 received within fourteen days, concluding that this provision “is facially compatible with the relevant 22 federal statutes”), aff’d, 114 F.4th 634 (7th Cir. 2024); Donald J. Trump for President, Inc. v. Way, 492 F.
 23 Supp. 3d 354, 372 (D.N.J. 2020) (concluding that “the Federal Election Day Statutes are silent on 24 methods of determining the timeliness of ballots” and thus do not preempt a New Jersey law allowing ballots lacking a postmark to be counted if received within 48 hours after polls close); Pa. Democratic Party v. Boockvar, 238 A.3d 345, 368 n.23 (Pa. 2020) (upholding a three-day extension of the absentee and mail-in ballot receipt deadline in Pennsylvania and observing that “the tabulation of ballots received after Election Day does not undermine the existence of a federal Election Day, where the proposal requires that ballots be cast by Election Day”); Bognet v. Sec'y Commonwealth of Pa., 980 F.3d 336, 354 (3d Cir. 2020), vacated as moot sub nom., Bognet v. Degraffenreid, 209 L. Ed. 2d 544 (2021) (upholding a three-day extension of the absentee and mail-in ballot-receipt deadline in Pennsylvania and concluding that “[t]he Deadline Extension and federal laws setting the date for federal elections can, and indeed do, operate harmoniously”).

1 Defendants contend that allowing absentee ballots to be received after Election Day is 2 just as discriminatory as allowing elections to end before Election Day. But in making this 3 argument, Defendants appear to rely on the erroneous premise that when states count ballots 4 received after Election Day, “absentee voters have several extra days after Election Day to cast 5 their votes.”<sup>77</sup> See Dkt. # 64 at 37. But Plaintiffs, like other states that count ballots received 6 after Election Day, only count ballots mailed on or before Election Day.<sup>78</sup> It is thus unclear how 7 Plaintiffs’ decision to count these ballots amounts to “arbitrarily treat[ing] some people’s votes 8 differently[.]” Id.

9 Because the Court concludes that the Election Day statutes do not create a national ballot-10 receipt deadline nor allow the President to interpret such a deadline, it must conclude that the 11 national ballot-receipt deadline in EO § 7 is unlawful.

12 b. Section 7(a)

13 Plaintiffs contend that EO § 7(a) is unlawful because it directs the Attorney General to 14 “take all necessary action to enforce” [a] nonexistent federal ballot-receipt deadline.” Dkt. # 37 15 at 21 (quoting EO 14,248 § 7(a)). Defendants argue that because the President has the authority 16 to establish a national ballot-receipt deadline of Election Day, the President can lawfully direct

 19 <sup>77</sup> Defendants also argue that because the postal service permits senders to recall mail, voters can 20 “change” their votes after Election Day. Dkt. # 64 at 37. Yet although a voter could ostensibly recall 21 their ballot once mailed, the voter could not then re-mail it after Election Day and have their vote counted, 22 as a ballot mailed after Election Day would not be postmarked by Election Day, and thus would not be 23 considered valid under Plaintiffs’ laws.

24 <sup>78</sup> Defendants also argue that if postmarks are unenforced, “it is possible to imagine that an un-25 postmarked ballot, delivered after Election Day but before counting concluded, could be counted based on 26 a person’s fraudulent certification date.” Dkt. # 64 at 37. But this argument is like saying that if hours at 27 voting booths are unenforced or ballot drop boxes are not properly secured, it is possible to imagine that a 28 voter could cast a ballot on a day besides Election Day—while theoretically true, it does not mean that the 29 purpose of the Election Day statutes has been violated. Nor does the Court find that the hypothetical the Attorney General to enforce said deadline against states that include absentee or mail-in ballots received after Election Day in their final vote tabulations. Dkt. # 64 at 34–35.
 30 fraudulent activity of voters bears at all on whether the President can interpret “election” in 2 U.S.C. § 7

Because the Court concludes that EO § 7’s national ballot-receipt deadline of Election Day is unlawful, see part IV.C(3)(a) above, it also finds that the President lacks any constitutional or statutory authority to direct the Attorney General to “enforce” said deadline against states that “violate” 2 U.S.C. § 7 and 3 U.S.C. § 1 “by including absentee or mail-in ballots received after Election Day in the final tabulation of votes for the appointment of Presidential electors and the election of members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives.” EO 14,248 § 7(a). It thus denies Defendants’ Motion and grants Plaintiffs summary judgment as to this claim.<sup>79</sup>

c. Section 7(b)

Plaintiffs contend that EO § 7(b) is unlawful because it directs the EAC to “condition any available funding to a State on that State’s compliance’ with a nonexistent federal ballot-receipt deadline.” Dkt. # 64 at 21 (quoting EO 14,248 § 7(b)). Defendants respond that § 7(b) is lawful, as it simply directs the EAC to make payments to states that comply with the relevant federal statutes, including “the uniform and nondiscriminatory ballot receipt deadline” established by 2 U.S.C. § 7 and 3 U.S.C. § 1. Dkt. # 64 at 39

But as the Court finds that EO § 7's national ballot-receipt deadline is unlawful, see part IV.C(3)(a) above, it also finds that the President lacks any constitutional or statutory authority to direct the EAC to condition funding to states based on their compliance with this unlawful <sup>79</sup> This conclusion is consistent with Judge Casper's opinions in California I, 786 F. Supp. 3d at 388, and California II, 2025 WL 2663106, at *11.

1 deadline. It thus denies Defendants' Motion and grants Plaintiffs summary judgment as to this 2 claim.<sup>80</sup>

3 * * *

4 In sum, the Court concludes that Plaintiffs are entitled to judgment as a matter of law on 5 their separation-of-powers challenges to EO §§ 2(a), 4(a), 4(b), 7(a), and 7(b). It thus grants 6 Plaintiffs' Motion for Partial Summary Judgment as to these claims and proceeds to the question 7 of relief. The Court also concludes that Plaintiffs have plausibly alleged that EO §§ 3(d) 8 and 4(d) are unlawful. It thus denies Defendants' request to dismiss these claims for failure to 9 state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6).

10 D. Relief

11 Plaintiffs request that the Court: (1) "hold that sections 2(a), 4(a), 4(b), and 7 of the 12 Executive Order are ultra vires and a violation of the separation of powers"; (2) permanently 13 enjoin Defendants from implementing these provisions; and (3) "enter a declaratory judgment 14 that the federal election day statutes, 2 U.S.C. § 7 and 3 U.S.C. § 1, do not preempt Washington 15 and Oregon's ballot-receipt deadline laws." Dkt. # 37 at 10, 33.

16 Defendants state that they have no "independent objections" to the Court holding EO 17 §§ 2(a), 4(a), 4(b), 7(a), and 7(b) unlawful if it concludes that it has jurisdiction and that 18 Plaintiffs' arguments succeed on the merits. See Dkt. # 122 at 3. For the reasons discussed 19 above, then, the Court grants this relief without further discussion.

20 As for Plaintiffs' other requested relief, Defendants contend that it would be improper for 21 the Court to issue a "nationwide injunction prohibiting Defendants from implementing or 22 enforcing the challenged provisions of the EO" under Trump v. CASA, Inc., 606 U.S. 831 (2025).

 24 <sup>80</sup> This conclusion accords with Judge Casper's opinions in California I, 786 F. Supp. 3d at 389, and California II, 2025 WL 2663106, at *11.

1 Id. at 4 (internal quotation marks and citations omitted). They also challenge Plaintiffs' request
 2 to facially enjoin Defendants from implementing § 7(a) and separately argue that the Court
 3 should not enter Plaintiffs' requested declaratory judgment, as such relief is improperly "tethered 4 to Count 8 of their Complaint, which is a putative standalone claim for declaratory judgment."
 5 Dkt. ## 124 at 5 & 122 at 3. For the reasons below, the Court rejects Defendants' arguments and 6 grants Plaintiffs' requested relief, subject to the modifications explained below.

7       1. Plaintiffs' Request for a Permanent Injunction

8       "The decision to grant or deny permanent injunctive relief is an act of equitable discretion 9 by the district court[.]" eBay Inc. v. MercExchange, L.L.C., 547 U.S. 388, 391 (2006). In 10 deciding whether to issue a permanent injunction, district courts are guided by the four-factor 11 test from eBay. Under this test, "[a] plaintiff must demonstrate: (1) that [they have] suffered an 12 irreparable injury; (2) that remedies available at law, such as monetary damages, are inadequate 13 to compensate for that injury; (3) that, considering the balance of hardships between the plaintiff 14 and defendant, a remedy in equity is warranted; and (4) that the public interest would not be 15 disserved by a permanent injunction." Id.

16       As noted by the Supreme Court, "[i]t is a general rule that a court of equity . . . may 17 administer complete relief between the parties, even though this involves the determination of 18 legal rights which otherwise would not be within the range of its authority." Kinney-Coastal Oil 19 Co. v. Kieffer, 277 U.S. 488, 507 (1928). But "[c]omplete relief" is not synonymous with 20 "universal relief." CASA, 606 U.S. at 851. Accordingly, district courts may issue party-specific 21 injunctions but cannot issue universal injunctions. Id.

22       Here, the Court finds that Plaintiffs are entitled to a permanent injunction for their 23 §§ 2(a), 4(a), 4(b), 7(a), and 7(b) claims. For the reasons discussed in part IV.A(1), Plaintiffs 24 have shown that they will suffer irreparable harm in the absence of an injunction. Given these

1 substantial sovereign and financial injuries, as well as the impracticability of states altering 2 election processes or results after the fact, the Court finds that monetary damages and other 3 remedies available at law are inadequate to compensate Plaintiffs for their injuries.<sup>81</sup> The Court 4 also finds that the balance of hardships and the public interest favor a permanent injunction. It 5 thus grants Plaintiffs' request to permanently enjoin Defendants from implementing EO §§ 2(a), 6 4(a), 4(b), 7(a),<sup>82</sup> and 7(b).

7 In granting such relief, however, the Court clarifies that it is not issuing universal relief.
 8 Instead, consistent with CASA, the Court is issuing only party-specific relief that is no broader 9 than necessary to provide complete relief to Plaintiffs. See CASA, 606 U.S. at 861. As for EO 10 §§ 4(a), 7(a), and 7(b), this means that the Court is permanently enjoining Defendants from 11 implementing or giving effect to these provisions only as applied to Plaintiffs. As these 12 provisions direct agency officials to take discrete actions against states, the Court finds that it 13 may award Plaintiffs complete relief without enjoining Defendants from taking any action to 14 implement or give effect to these provisions. In contrast, to provide Plaintiffs complete relief on 15 their challenges to EO §§ 2(a) and 4(b), the Court finds it must enjoin Defendants from taking 16 any action to implement or give effect to these provisions. As EO §§ 2(a) and 4(b) concern a 17 single (and national) Federal Form, set of voting guidelines, and certification process, Plaintiffs 18 cannot receive complete relief unless the EAC and its Commissioners, directors, and agents, are 19 enjoined from implementing or giving effect to these provisions in full. The Court thus finds a

20 21 <sup>81</sup> The Court also notes that because Plaintiffs rely on an equitable cause of action, legal remedies 22 are unavailable.

23 <sup>82</sup> In granting Plaintiffs' request to enjoin Defendants from implementing EO § 7(a), the Court 24 clarifies that it is enjoining only unlawful applications of this provision. Thus, to the extent that "enforcement actions" under EO § 7(a) encompass lawful, non-compulsive conduct (like sending a letter), the Court does not enjoin Defendants. But to the extent that the term "enforce" in EO § 7(a) is limited to unlawful, compulsive conduct (like bringing a criminal enforcement action or threatening to withhold funds), the Court enjoins Defendants in full. Either way, Plaintiffs are entitled to an injunction that prevents Defendants from compelling Plaintiffs to adopt § 7's unlawful ballot-receipt deadline.

1 total injunction as to these provisions proper, even though such an injunction may incidentally 2 impact nonparties.

3       2. Plaintiffs' Request for a Declaratory Judgment

4       The Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2201, and Federal Rule of Civil Procedure
 5 57, apply to the question of whether to issue a declaratory judgment. Under these standards, 6 district courts possess “unique and substantial discretion in deciding whether to declare the rights 7 of litigants” via a declaratory judgment. Wilton v. Seven Falls Co., 515 U.S. 277, 286 (1995).
 8 Accordingly, a court may issue declaratory relief “whether or not further relief is or could be 9 sought,” so long as the case presents a justiciable case or controversy that falls within the court’s 10 jurisdiction and the plaintiff asserts an independent cause of action. 28 U.S.C. § 2201; see also 11 Fed. R. Civ. P. 57; City of Reno, 52 F.4th at 878.

12       Here, the Court finds that Plaintiffs are entitled to a declaratory judgment as an additional 13 equitable remedy on their § 7 claim.<sup>83</sup> As explained in part IV, the Court finds that: (1) it has 14 jurisdiction over Plaintiffs’ challenge to EO § 7; (2) Plaintiffs have asserted a valid cause of 15 action; and (3) Plaintiffs have succeeded on the merits of their § 7 claim, in part because 2 16 U.S.C. § 7 and 3 U.S.C. § 1 do not establish a national ballot-receipt deadline of Election Day.
 17 The Court thus finds it proper to enter a declaratory judgment stating that Plaintiffs’ ballot-18 receipt deadlines are not preempted by 2 U.S.C. § 7 or 3 U.S.C. § 1.<sup>84</sup>

 21       <sup>83</sup> Although the Court agrees with Defendants that Plaintiffs may not request a declaratory 22 judgment on the basis of Claim 8, it finds that Plaintiffs may request a declaratory judgment on the basis 23 of their separate, equitable cause of action, recognized by this Court in part IV.B.

24       <sup>84</sup> This relief also accords with the Supreme Court’s understanding of the preemptive effects of 25 federal election laws. See Arizona v. Inter Tribal Council of Arizona, Inc., 570 U.S. 1, 14 (2013) 26 (“Because the power the Elections Clause confers is none other than the power to pre-empt, the 27 reasonable assumption is that the statutory text accurately communicates the scope of Congress’s pre-28 emptive intent.”).

CONCLUSION

For these reasons, it is hereby ORDERED that:

(1) Plaintiffs' Motion for Partial Summary Judgment (Dkt. # 37) is GRANTED in part and DENIED in part. Plaintiffs' Motion is granted with respect to their non-statutory, equitable challenges to EO §§ 2(a), 4(a), 4(b), 7(a), and 7(b), based on the specific reasoning in this Order.

(2) Defendants' Motion to Dismiss (Dkt. # 64) is GRANTED in part and DENIED in part. Plaintiffs' challenges to EO §§ 2(b)(iii), 2(d), 2(e)(ii), and 5(b), as well as Claims 1, 2, 3, 6, 7, and 8 from the Complaint, are dismissed without prejudice. Defendants' Motion is otherwise denied.

(3) The Court grants Plaintiffs the following relief:

- a. The Court holds that EO §§ 2(a), 4(a), 4(b), 7(a), and 7(b) are unlawful.
- b. The EAC Defendants<sup>85</sup> are permanently enjoined from taking any action to implement or give effect to EO § 2(a). Nothing in this Order should be taken to prevent the EAC from independently, and lawfully, making changes to the Federal Form under their delegated authority.
- c. The EAC Defendants are permanently enjoined from taking any action against Plaintiffs to implement or give effect to EO § 4(a). Nothing in this Order should be taken to prevent the EAC from independently, and lawfully, exercising authority over grants to Plaintiffs in the manner authorized by Congress.

MOTION TO DISMISS - 73

- d. The EAC Defendants are permanently enjoined from taking any action to implement or give effect to EO § 4(b). Nothing in this Order should be taken to prevent the EAC from independently, and lawfully, exercising its discretion to decertify voting systems, amend the VVSGs, re-certify voting systems, or otherwise alter voting systems guidance pursuant to the existing laws and policies.
- e. The Attorney General, and the Attorney General’s officers, agents, servants, and employees, are permanently enjoined from taking any action to “enforce,” or attempt to “enforce,” 2 U.S.C. § 7 or 3 U.S.C. § 1 in a manner that would prevent Plaintiffs from counting otherwise valid votes for federal office that are contained in timely ballots under state law. For the purposes of this injunction, “enforce” means “compel.” Nothing in this Order should be taken to prevent the Attorney General from taking lawful, i.e. non-compulsive, actions to encourage Plaintiffs to adopt a different ballot-receipt deadline.
- f. The EAC Defendants are permanently enjoined from taking any action against Plaintiffs to implement or give effect to EO § 7(b). Nothing in this Order should be taken to prevent the EAC from independently, and lawfully, exercising its authority to condition funds to Plaintiffs in the manner authorized by Congress.
- g. The Court declares that Washington’s and Oregon’s existing laws governing ballot-receipt deadlines are not preempted by 2 U.S.C. § 7 and 3 U.S.C. § 1. Unless, and until, Congress amends these statutes or otherwise enacts a law that establishes a national ballot-receipt deadline of Election Day, the Elections Clause authorizes Washington and Oregon to maintain their existing laws, which permit the counting of certain ballots received after Election Day.
