DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

STATE OF ARIZONA and ADELITA
GRIJALVA,

Plaintiffs,

v.

UNITED STATES HOUSE OF
REPRESENTATIVES, A LEGISLATIVE CHAMBER; KEVIN McCUMBER, CLERK,
IN HIS OFFICIAL CAPACITY; and WILLIAM McFARLAND, SERGEANT AT ARMS, IN HIS OFFICIAL CAPACITY,

Defendants.

COMPLAINT FOR DECLARATORY RELIEF

INTRODUCTION

1. This case is about whether someone duly elected to the House – who indisputably meets the constitutional qualifications of the office – may be denied her rightful office simply because the Speaker has decided to keep the House out of “regular session.”

2. If the Speaker were granted that authority, he could thwart the peoples’ choice of who should represent them in Congress by denying them representation for a significant portion of the two-year term provided by the Constitution.

3. Fortunately, the Constitution does not give that authority to the Speaker—or anyone else.

4. Rather, “the Constitution leaves the House without authority to exclude any person, duly elected by his constituents, who meets all the requirements for membership expressly prescribed in the Constitution.” Powell v. McCormack, 395 U.S. 486, 522 (1966).

5. Indeed, as Speaker Johnson explained this weekend when answering a hypothetical question about the election of a member of his own party, “[T]hat’s our system. If the people duly elect a representative, then we will welcome them into the body. That would be the job of a speaker.” Speaker Mike Johnson Youtube Channel, Speaker Johnson Joins the Sunday Briefing on Fox News (Oct. 19, 2025), https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qnJ4P_zix9o, at 5:35 timestamp (discussing seating George Santos if reelected to Congress).

6. On September 23, 2025, the voters in Arizona’s Seventh Congressional District elected Adelita Grijalva to serve as their Representative in the House, with 68.94% of the vote. The election was canvassed and the certificate of election delivered to the House on October 14, 2025.

7. The outcome of the election is not in dispute.

8. Ms. Grijalva’s constitutional qualifications have likewise never been in dispute. She meets all of the constitutional qualifications to serve in the House of Representatives, save for the fact that she has not yet taken the oath of office. See U.S. Const. art. VI, cl. 3 (“The ... Representatives ... shall be bound by Oath or Affirmation, to support this Constitution.”); 5 U.S.C. § 3331 (specifying the language of the oath); 2 U.S.C. § 25 (providing that the Speaker shall administer the oath to Representatives).

9. Speaker Johnson has acknowledged that Ms. Grijalva was duly elected and is qualified to serve in the House once she has taken the oath of office.

10. Ms. Grijalva has for weeks requested that Speaker Johnson administer the oath to her and seat her, consistent with 2 U.S.C. § 25, House precedents, and his uniform practice, but he has refused to do so until a time of his choosing, which he now says will be when the House comes back into regular session, even though he initially said he would do it as soon as Ms. Grijalva wanted.

11. The Constitution does not specify who must administer the oath, only that Representatives must take it.

12. The Speaker may not use his statutory obligation to administer the oath under 2 U.S.C. § 25 to arbitrarily delay seating a member when there is no dispute as to the election or qualifications and no practical reason why he is unable to administer the oath.

13. Speaker Johnson has been in the Capitol during this time and has not identified any reason that he (or a designee) is unable to administer the oath to Ms. Grijalva.

14. Speaker Johnson has not identified any valid reason for refusing to promptly seat Ms. Grijalva.

15. Instead, on information and belief, Speaker Johnson wishes to delay seating Ms. Grijalva to prevent her from signing a discharge petition that would force a vote on the release of the Epstein files and/or to strengthen his hand in the ongoing budget and appropriations negotiations.

16. Defendants' refusal to promptly seat Ms. Grijalva, and to treat her as a member of the House, injures her by denying her the ability to exercise the authority of a member of the House—e.g., to sign petitions, sponsor bills, obtain and provide information to her constituents about federal programs and matters pending before federal agencies, and advocate with federal agencies, all on behalf of her constituents.

17. Defendants' refusal to promptly seat Ms. Grijalva, and to treat her as a member of the House, likewise injures the State of Arizona, which is denied the number of Representatives provided for by law.

18. The State and Ms. Grijalva therefore request that this Court enter a declaratory judgment that (1) Ms. Grijalva shall be deemed a Member of the House of Representatives once she has taken the oath prescribed by law, see 5 U.S.C. § 3331; and (2) if Speaker Johnson has not administered the oath, the oath may be administered to Ms. Grijalva by any person authorized by law to administer oaths.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

19. This Court has jurisdiction under Article III, § 2 of the United States Constitution and 28 U.S.C. § 1331 and 2201(a).

20. The Court may grant declaratory and other relief pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 2201–02.

21. An actual controversy exists between the parties within the meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 2201(a).

22. Venue is proper in the District of Columbia under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b)(2) because the events and omissions took place in the District of Columbia.

PARTIES

Plaintiffs

23. Plaintiff the State of Arizona is a sovereign state of the United States. Arizona is represented by Attorney General Kris Mayes. The Attorney General is Arizona's chief law enforcement officer and is authorized to pursue this action pursuant to Arizona Revised Statutes § 41-193(A)(3).

24. Plaintiff Adelita Grijalva has been duly elected to serve as the Member of the House from Arizona's Seventh Congressional District.

Defendants

25. Defendant House of Representatives is a chamber of the United States Congress, the legislative branch of the United States.

26. Defendant Kevin McCumber is the Clerk of the United States House of Representatives. He establishes the roll of members-elect of the House, seals all formal documents issued by the House, certifies the passage of all joint resolutions of the House, and manages the office and supervises the staff of any vacant member until a successor is seated. He also oversees staff who manage the electronic voting system, and certifies the records of votes cast on legislation.

27. Defendant William McFarland is the Sergeant at Arms of the United States House of Representatives. As part of the former role of the Doorkeeper transferred to this office, he admits members to the House floor.

LEGAL FRAMEWORK

Statutory and Constitutional Framework

28. The House of Representatives "shall be the Judge of the Elections, Returns and Qualifications of its own Members." U.S. Const. art. I, § 5, cl 1.

29. The House may expel a member "with the Concurrence of two thirds." U.S. Const. art. I, § 5, cl. 2. This power does not extend to the time before a member is seated, when a member may only be excluded. See Powell, 395 U.S. at 512 ("[E]xclusion and expulsion are not fungible proceedings.").

30. The power to exclude is not absolute or plenary. The three reasons given in the Constitution for exclusion are exhaustive; the House may not reject a member-elect except for one of them, and “qualifications” means only those listed in the Constitution. Powell, 395 U.S. at 522.

31. Those qualifications are:

- a. “hav[ing] attained to the Age of twenty five Years,” U.S Const. art. I, § 2, cl. 2;
- b. having “been seven Years a Citizen of the United States,” id.;
- c. “be[ing] an inhabitant of that State in which [s]he shall be chosen,” id.;
- d. “be[ing] bound by Oath or Affirmation, to support this Constitution”; id. art. VI, cl. 3; and
- e. not being disqualified from holding office under Section Three of the 14th Amendment.

32. “[T]he Constitution leaves the House without authority to exclude any person, duly elected by his constituents, who meets all the requirements for membership expressly prescribed in the Constitution.” Powell, 395 U.S. at 522 (footnote omitted).

33. Therefore, if the House wishes to remove a member for other reasons, it must first seat the member, then expel by a two-thirds vote. Id.; see id. at 508, 512 (“[E]xclusion and expulsion are not fungible proceedings.”).

34. The question of whether an individual has a right to a House seat, and whether the House is wrongfully denying that person admission, is justiciable and is not a political question. Powell, 395 U.S. at 548.

35. It is a constitutional qualification for office that a member take the oath of office before assuming office. U.S. Const. art. VI, cl. 3 (“The ... Representatives ... shall be bound by Oath or Affirmation, to support this Constitution.”).

36. The Constitution provides neither the language of the oath nor any requirements as to who must administer it.

37. One statute, 5 U.S.C. § 3331, gives the language of the oath, but does not specify how it is to be administered.

38. A second statute, 2 U.S.C. § 25, describes the procedure for swearing in the Speaker and members-elect.

39. Per that process, “any Member of the House of Representatives” swears in the Speaker upon the Speaker’s election. The Speaker then swears in the members-elect. But the individual who swears in the Speaker (usually the Dean of the House) has not yet been sworn for that Congress, and so is at that time a member-elect, establishing that non-members of the House may and do constitutionally administer the oath.

40. Nothing in 2 U.S.C. § 25 makes the administration of the oath discretionary on the part of the Speaker.

House Precedents

41. House rules and precedents are neither law nor binding on this Court.

42. Nothing in this case requires, or invites, the Court to interpret or apply House rules, precedents, or recent practices. Cf. Nixon v. United States, 506 U.S. 224, 228 (1993) (holding interpretation of Senate rules committed to the Senate).

43. Nonetheless, to provide context, Plaintiffs briefly describe the relevant precedents and recent practices.

44. Under House precedents, the Speaker or an elected Speaker pro tem typically administers the oath to new members, including those elected mid-Congress in special elections. Precedents (2017 Series), ch. 2, § 3, at 182; id. § 3.12.

45. At times, others have administered the oath (including a non-elected pro tem), on the Speaker's designation and by a resolution of the House permitting the administration. Id.; see id. §§ 3.7–3.9, 3.13–3.15. These have included non-members of the House.

46. When the certificate of election for a mid-Congress special election is available, or an authenticated fax or scan, the Speaker administers the oath without House action. Id. §§ 3.5, 3.6.

47. If “no question or contest exist[s]” and the appropriate state official conveys the unofficial returns of the election, the Speaker administers the oath with a resolution of the House. Id. § 3.10.

48. Prior to the election of Ms. Grijalva, every time a special election has been conducted during Mr. Johnson's tenure as Speaker of the House, the winner has been sworn in immediately upon unofficial notification of the results.

49. Never during this time has the House insisted on waiting for a certificate of election, nor has the administration of the oath been delayed past a pro forma session. This practice has not varied based on party or other differences.

50. Celeste Maloy was elected in a special election for Utah's Second Congressional District on November 21, 2023. She was sworn in on Tuesday, November 28, 2023. Utah had not provided a certificate of election, but an unofficial letter from the Director of Elections was deemed sufficient. 169 Cong. Rec. H5928 (daily ed. Nov. 28, 2025).

51. Vince Fong was elected in a special election for California’s 20th Congressional District on May 21, 2024. The House was notified of the results on May 29, 2024, and he was sworn in on Monday, June 3, 2024, the next business day. 170 Cong. Rec. H3568 (daily ed. June 3, 2024).

52. Jimmy Patronis was elected in a special election for Florida’s First Congressional District on April 1, 2025. He was sworn in on April 2, 2025, in a pro forma session. 171 Cong. Rec. H1409 (daily ed. Apr. 2, 2025).

53. Randy Fine was elected the same day as Mr. Patronis, and also sworn in the following day. Id.

54. James Walkinshaw was elected in a special election for Virginia’s 11th Congressional District on September 9, 2025. He was sworn in the next day. 171 Cong. Rec. H4214 (daily ed. Sept. 10, 2025).¹

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Arizona's Congressional Representation

55. In 2020, as required by the Constitution, the United States Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census, conducted a census. See U.S. Const. art. I, § 2, cl. 3; id. amend. XIV, § 2.

56. On April 26, 2021, population counts were delivered to the President.²

57. That same day, the President reported to the Clerk the number of representatives each state is entitled to for the period ending with the 2030 census.

58. Following that notification, the Clerk of the House informed the Governor of Arizona that Arizona was entitled to nine representatives.

59. As of today, Arizona remains entitled to nine representatives.

60. But Arizona presently has eight representatives sworn and seated in Congress, one fewer than the number to which it is entitled.

61. The wrongful denial of full congressional representation “undoubtedly satisfies the injury-in-fact requirement of Article III standing.” See Dep’t of Com. v. U.S. House of Reps., 525 U.S. 316, 331 (1999); see also Franklin v. Massachusetts, 505 U.S. 788, 802 (1992) (state had standing to challenge apportionment because it would lose a representative).

62. Arizona lacks the full representation to which it is entitled because of the acts and omissions of Defendants, satisfying causation.

63. As described below, judicial action, in the form of a declaratory judgment, will remedy Arizona’s injury by ensuring its full representation.

² These events were delayed due to the Covid-19 pandemic.

Ms. Grijalva is Elected to the House but Not Seated

64. On September 23, 2025, Adelita Grijalva won the special election to represent Arizona's Seventh Congressional District, filling a vacancy created by her father's passing. See U.S. Const., art. I, § 2, cl. 3 (vacancies in the House are filled by election).

65. Ms. Grijalva received 68.94% of the vote.

66. When unofficial results were in, Arizona's Secretary of State, Adrian Fontes, provided the election results to the House. Speaker Johnson's office confirmed receipt. See Nikki McCann Ramirez, Dem Says Mike Johnson is Delaying Her Swearing-In to Prevent Epstein Vote, Rolling Stone (Sept. 30, 2025, 10:38 a.m. MST), available at <https://tinyurl.com/3k6tm2yr>.

67. Nonetheless, Speaker Johnson denied Ms. Grijalva the opportunity to swear in during subsequent pro forma sessions.

68. On October 14, 2025, Arizona's Secretary of State completed the canvass, and the Governor signed a certificate of election and transmitted it to the House.

69. That same day, Arizona Attorney General Kris Mayes sent a letter to Speaker Johnson demanding that he promptly swear in and seat Ms. Grijalva. Speaker Johnson refused.

70. The non-partisan League of Women Voters sent a letter to Speaker Johnson "urg[ing] [him] to make haste and swear in Adelita Grijalva as the newest member of the House of Representatives immediately." League of Women Voters, Letter to Speaker Johnson (Oct. 10, 2025), available at <https://www.lwv.org/league-urges-speaker-swear-congresswoman-elect-grijalva>.

No Valid Reason is Given for the Delay and Ms. Grijalva Must Be Seated

71. Speaker Johnson's statements, and those of staff, were initially inconsistent. Speaker Johnson indicated initially that he would swear in the new representative "as soon as she wants.” Morgan Rimmer, et al., Speaker Johnson Said He’d Swear in New House Democrat “As Soon as She Wants.” Now Republicans are Backtracking, CNN (updated Oct. 7, 2025), <https://www.cnn.com/2025/10/07/politics/johnson-adelita-grijalva-swearing-in>.

72. Later, perhaps after rethinking and deciding to attempt to gain partisan advantage by delaying, Speaker Johnson indicated that the swearing in would be delayed. Id.

73. A leadership aide stated the House will “swear in Rep.-Elect [Grijalva] as soon as the House returns to session when Chuck Schumer, Mark Kelly and Ruben Gallego decide to open up the government.” Id.

74. Constitutional rights cannot be used as a bargaining chip.

75. After receiving the letter from Attorney General Mayes, Speaker Johnson stated that he would swear in Ms. Grijalva once the House comes back into regular session.

76. Speaker Johnson’s office has stated that he “intends to schedule a swearing in for the Representative-elect when the House returns to session.” Ramirez, supra.

77. Indeed, Speaker Johnson on October 17, 2025 encouraged Ms. Grijalva to “serve her constituents.”

78. And on ABC This Week with Jonathan Karl on October 19, 2025, he stated he would swear her in “when Senator Schumer lets us reopen the government,” again suggesting a partisan fight. ABC News, “This Week” Transcript 10-19-25: Speaker of the House Mike Johnson and Minority Leader Hakeem Jeffries (Oct. 19, 2025, 7:11 a.m.), <https://abcnews.go.com/Politics/week-transcript-10-19-25-speaker-house-mike/story?id=126650215>.

79. On October 20, 2025, Speaker Johnson stated that, as of that date, computers would be set up for Ms. Grijalva and 16 staffers. He also continued his partisan jabs, claiming that Democratic leadership was responsible for Ms. Grijalva's predicament. ABC News, Speaker Mike Johnson Continues to Resist Swearing in Democratic Rep.-elect Grijalva (Oct. 20, 2025), <https://abcnews.go.com/Politics/video/speaker-johnson-continues-resist-swearing-democratic-rep-elect-126685770>.

80. Speaker Johnson has said the delay is in order to give Ms. Grijalva "pomp and circumstance," despite her willingness to forgo those in order to speedily serve her constituents. Claudia Grisales, Adelita Grijalva Can Force a Vote on the Epstein Files, But She's Still Not Sworn In, NPR (Oct. 16, 2025, 4:30 p.m. ET).

81. Ms. Grijalva has made clear: "I don't need pomp and circumstance. I just need to get to work for southern Arizona." Scott Wong, Democrats Ramp up Pressure on Speaker Johnson to Seat Rep.-elect Adelita Grijalva, NBC (Oct. 15, 2025), <https://www.nbcnews.com/politics/congress/democrats-ramp-pressure-speaker-johnson-seat-rep-elect-adelita-grijalv-rcna237785>.

82. Ms. Grijalva's name is on the door of her office in the Capitol.

83. Through these words and deeds, Defendants have made clear that they know Ms. Grijalva has satisfied all requisites to take office. See Powell, 395 U.S. at 548 (Congress may judge only "the qualifications expressly set forth in the Constitution."). And they have made clear that Ms. Grijalva's swearing-in is a foregone conclusion.

84. Yet Defendants continue not to seat Ms. Grijalva and have thus failed to ensure that she has the privileges and duties of membership, which exist regardless of whether the House is in "regular session."

CAUSE OF ACTION

Ultra Vires

85. Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding allegations as if alleged herein.

86. A real controversy exists regarding the parties' rights and obligations.

87. The effect of a declaratory judgment would be to resolve the controversy between the parties and afford the Plaintiffs full relief, because Ms. Grijalva could then be sworn in to represent Arizona's Seventh Congressional District.

88. This action is ripe because Arizona's right to full congressional representation and Ms. Grijalva's right to hold office are not limited to those times when the Speaker decides the House will be in "regular session."

89. The facts are fully developed and the purely legal issues presented are fit for decision. See Delta Air Lines, Inc. v. Ex-Im Bank of United States, 85 F. Supp. 3d 250, 269 (D. D.C. 2015).

90. The House, through Speaker Johnson and House staff, has acted ultra vires and in violation of statute and the Constitution.

91. "[A]cts of all officers must be justified by some law, and in case an official violates the law to the injury of an individual the courts generally have jurisdiction to grant relief." Chamber of Comm. of United States v. Reich, 74 F.3d 1322, 1327 (D.C. Cir. 1996) (quoting Amer. School of Magnetic Healing v. McAnnulty, 187 U.S. 108, 110 (1902) (alteration rejected)); see also Armstrong v. Exceptional Child Ctr., Inc., 575 U.S. 320, 327 (2015).

92. This is also true where relief is sought against an instrumentality of Congress. See Clark v. Lib. of Cong., 750 F.2d 89, 102, 104 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

93. Similarly, this suit is not barred by sovereign immunity because “it is well-established that sovereign immunity does not bar suits for specific relief against government officials where the challenged actions of the officials are alleged to be unconstitutional or beyond statutory authority.” Id. at 102.

94. This, too, extends to instrumentalities of Congress, as it did in Clark. Id.

95. In the presence of a real case and controversy between the parties, the Court has the power to make a declaration that would resolve the controversy.

96. The Court has the power to declare that Ms. Grijalva shall be deemed a Member of the House of Representatives once she has taken the oath prescribed by law in 5 U.S.C. § 3331. See Powell, 395 U.S. at 550 (issuing declaratory judgment that plaintiff was duly elected and required to be seated).

97. The Constitution requires a Member of the House to take an oath to support the Constitution. It does not say that the oath must be administered by the Speaker or any other particular person.

98. By withholding the oath and the office that comes with it, the Speaker has unlawfully interfered with Ms. Grijalva’s constitutional right to take office, and the State’s right to the number of Representatives provided for by law.

99. Defendants should not be allowed to misuse a statutory oath procedure to violate Plaintiffs’ constitutional right to have Ms. Grijalva promptly seated as a member of the House.

100. An oath administered by any person authorized by law to administer oaths would comply with the constitutional requirement.

101. Thus, the Court should declare that the oath may be administered to Ms. Grijalva by any person authorized by law to administer oaths.

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

Because there is no dispute as to Ms. Grijalva's election or qualifications, the Court should:

A. Issue a declaratory judgment stating that Ms. Grijalva shall be deemed a Member of the House of Representatives once she has taken the oath prescribed by law, see 5 U.S.C. § 3331;

B. Issue a declaratory judgment stating that if Speaker Johnson has not administered the oath, the oath may be administered to Ms. Grijalva by any person authorized by law to administer oaths under the law of the United States, the District of Columbia, or the State of Arizona; and

C. Award other relief as the Court deems just and proper.
